The SOUTHWESTERN of the 5th inst., was unusually interesting in its rich and varied correspondence on themes worthy of the thoughtful consideration of the church. Among the writers appears the name of Mrs. L. C. Braden, the devoted wife of the president of the Central Tennessee College. I do not regret the circumstance which forced her to write those lines which will be read with profound pleasure by a great many persons who became aquainted with her while attending the institution as students and visitors. I have known her since my boyhood and have ever found her the same kindly-hearted, painstaking, energetic, persevering, patient, modest Christian woman. With the chosen work of her husband she has been thoroughly identified from the very start. For a long time she gave musical instruction to classes in instrumental [illegible] in which she is [illegible] as a teacher [illegible] trying to promote the prosperity of the school. She works so quietly, endures so patiently, and is so cheerful withal, that only the closest observation can reveal the great amount of services she renders daily. The second year of my ministry I served as her pastor, and though young and inexperienced I was never in doubt of her sympathy, or left to feel that I shared less of her respect because of my inaccuracies of speech and other imperfections. I have often felt since, when in her presence, that I ought to apologize for my loud speaking which, as I now look back over nearly a decade, must have been not a little shocking to her sensitive nerves. I may say in passing that I thought then that loudness of tone was inseparately connected with effectiveness of speech. I think not so now. Mrs. Braden has finely illustrated the possibilities of usefulness lying within the sphere of a minister's wife, and I earnestly commend her example as highly deserving of study and imitation. Nothing in her career can be found to give encouragement to indolence, to pride, to frivoity and the aimless drift which characterize so many females of to-day. She has pursued a steady course with a womanly purpose, directed toward a noble end. O, for a race of wise, discreet, loving, résolute, self-sacrificing, divinely consecrated women to guide the aspirations, to lead the steps and to shape rightly the destiny of the oncoming millions. It is earnestly hoped that the flourishing institution which owes a measure of its success to Mrs. Braden's endeavors may go on contributing its full share toward meeting the imperative demand. For every cry sent up for educated, pious men, ten should be sent up for educated, pure-minded, consecrated women.

An Ancient Jewish Parable.

When Noah planted his vineyard, Satan came and asked him what he was doing.

"Planting a vineyard," was the reply.

"What is it for?"

"Its fruits, green or dry, are sweet and pleasant. We make wine of it which gladdens the heart."

"I should like have a hand in the planting," said Satan.

"Good," replied Noah.

Satan brought a lamb, a lion, a sow and an ape; killed them in the vineyard, and let their blood run into the roots of the vines. From this it comes that a man before he has taken the wine, is simple as a lamb which knows nothing, and is dumb before its shearers; when he has drunk moderately he grows a lion, and thinks there is not his like; if he drinks too much, he turns a swine and wallows in the mire; if he drinks still more, he becomes a filthy ape, falling hither and thither, and knowing nothing of what he does.—Sel.

Be Cautious.

Don't judge a man by the clothes. God made one, and the tailor the other.

Don't judge him by his family relations, for Cain belonged to a good family.

Don't judge a man by his speech, for a parrot talks, but the tongue is but an instrument of sound.

Don't judge a m n by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

Don't judge a man by the house he lives in, for the lizard and the rat often inhabit the grandest structures.

When a man dies they who survive him ask what property he has left behind. The angel who bends over the dying man asks what good deeds he has sent before him.—Signs of the Times.

The Spiritualists have been so ridiculed about their anniversary coming on April 1st, that they are trying to change the date to March 29. One of their leading speakers was asked on Sunday what the number of Spiritualists in this country is. He estimated them at 2,000,000. This is a reduction of 9,000,000. They claimed 11,000,000 a few years ago. The fact is that [illegible] curiosity seekers [illegible]

The Resurrection.

BY REV. H. N. BROWN.

The resurrection of the dead is the hope of our fathers, in whatover age they may have lived, whether B. C. or after. In proof of the fact, read Job 19, 26, 27: "And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another." David also says in the 16 Psalm, 9, 10: "My flesh also shall rest in hope;" that is, of the resurrection, not alone of the resurrection of Christ, who is the first fruits of them that slept, but of his own resurrection with that of the whole human family. Thus he says in 10 verse: "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell." Hell, that is the grave, as in Hosea 13, 14: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy destruction." Isaiah says in the 26 chapt. 17: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Thy dead men shall live, Jehovah, dead people, but choosing, spiritually dead, but by faith in Christ, should revive to spiritual activity, together with my dead body, shall they arise. Literally dead, but thanks be to our God these hopes are not blotted, for as Christ went down into the grave and rose again, so they, even we, though we may sleep in yonder grave-yard, it shall have no dominion over us, for as John says in the 5th chapt. 28: "For the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice: 29. "And shall come forth, whether good or bad they shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." The Christian is constantly doing good in some way or other, all through life, whether awake or asleep, even in his death, and while he sleeps that sleep, he is working for the advancement of his master's kingdom, not as we, who still survive, but as Abel—he being dead, yet speaketh. Thus our work continues from the cradle to the grave, from the grave to the final resurrection, when and at which time our works are to be tried by the fire. 1st Cor. 3, 13: "If any man's word abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward." Now our hopes are founded upon the resurrection of Christ, upon whose resurrection we rest, and with sweet anticipation look forward to the day when he shall call us all from the grave; until this day will have fully come each Christian is expected to continue his work in full submission to the will of his Maker. Whatever his rank, every one shall come forth, just as he will have fallen asleep, bone to bone, sinews and flesh shall be upon them, and skin shall cover them. Ezek. 37—6, 7, 8. "For thus saith the Lord ye shall live, thus we being changed in a single moment, shall enter into a more glorified life; this change being the one of which Christ's transfiguration on the mount did picture. Matt. 17, 1: "And was transfigured before them, and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. Blessed be God, we are to be first like him, our face shall shine as the sun, our raiment shall be as white as the light, as snow, and we shall go up and meet the Lord, in the air, and we shall stand before the throne, a multitude, which no man can number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues. We shall stand before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in our hands. Blessed be God we shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on us, nor any heat. For the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall feed us, and shall lead us into living fountains of water; and God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes. Now this is our hope, and if in this life only, we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. [illegible] Cor. 15, 20, 21.

A Letter from Paris.

PARIS, Texas, March 21, 1883.

MR. EDITOR—W. L. Molloy arrived here to hold his first quarter on the 13th inst. The conference convenced on the 17th; we had a pleasant time. Prof. Davis, of Wiley University, Marshall, Tex., was with us from Saturday until Monday the 19th. On Sunday W. L. Molloy preached to a great number of hearers in my church, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's supper to a great many who professed to be in favor of the man of calvary. At night, on the same day, we had another sermon by W. L. Molloy, after which some encouraging words were given Prof. Davis, J. C. Carter and W. L. Molloy on the subject of education, which proved to be interesting to a great many hearers. After which a subscription was taken up in favor of a seminary or an academy, which is now under contemplation for this city. Subscriptions are as follows: W. L. Molloy, $25; N. Hendricks, $25; A. Taylor, $25; Ike White, $25: Myself, $25; Prof. W. H. Davis (or will raise) $25; Rev. T. Moore, $25; A. Woods, $10; Jno. Clements, $10; Prof. J. C. Carter, $10; D. Frison, $10; D. Battle, $10; Duke Hardmond, $10; J. P. Hensley, $10; Jno. Newby, $10; Mrs Aggie Woods, $10; Miss Piggy Woods, $5; Miss Sina Buckner, $5; Geo. Wagner, $6; Mrs. Sutton, $6; Ed. Denerity, $6; H. Hendricks, $6; Martha Wiley, $5; Maggie Clements, $5, F. Wright, 25 cts.; Anderson Owens, $5; Sara Jane Brown, $5; Rev. Mrs. T. Moore, $5; D. Ward, $5; M. Hendricks, $2; S. Pride, 50 cts; S. Baths, $5; M. Guess, $5; P. Clements, $5; S. Ward, $5; C. Ward, $5; S. Clements, $5; W. Rogers, $5; M. Menton, $3; R. Jackson, $2 50. Total, $410 25.

We are gradually moving along here in both religion and education. The people of Paris, as a general thing, are in favor of a go up rather than a go down. The Rev. Mr. Gunner, editor of the People's Informer, was with us on Sunday night and gave many kind words and full of encouragement. Rev. Mr. Roberts, pastor of the Congregational Church, said many kind words in trying to open up the people's ideas to the great need of education. In short, all who have gone to school themselves and returned are, of course, in favor of others going in and taking on a supply of education. So in this way we will be going and returning from the house of knowledge through time. Roll education, roll until every nation will have tasted of thy sweetness!

We had a nice time in the love-feast on the night of the 21st, in which a great many declared how dear Jesus was to them. Sunday-schools and day schools are increasing daily. Sentiments for the SOUTHWESTERN are favorable. We are enjoying pleasant weather, and good health, so far as I know, prevails in the city.

Mrs. Helen H. Jackson's Mission.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson, of Boston, wrote to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs some time ago, calling his attention to complaints that she had received of the appropriation of lands belonging to the Mission Indians of California by white settlers under the recent Government surveys. She asked permission to investigate the complaints, and for that purpose she has been appointed a special agent of the Indian Office. Her instructions are to ascertain the number of Mission Indians, where they are living, whether any suitable Government lands can be set apart for their use, and if lands cannot be obtained except by purchase, what land is most advisable to be bought for their use. She is directed to ascertain what proportion of these Indians would consent to go upon a reservation, and to recommend generally what executive action is necessary to improve their condition. Mrs. Jackson's expenses, not to exceed $1,200, will be paid by the Government, and she is given an assistant whose expenses will also be paid by the Government.

Just after the last election in Louisiana, and while the alleged frauds at the ballot-box were still fresh in the people's minds, the Times-Democrat of Nov. 28 spoke of them as follows:

"It is not possible that such deeds can be perpetrated with impunity; it must be that the men who committed these outrages can be found and confronted with the people and the law they have wronged."

During the week now past some of "the men who committed these outrages" have been on trial in New Orleans, and yet the Times-Democrat finds a grievance. On March 21 it said:

"The order for these recent prosecutions emanates from a Republican caucus or coterie; the wheels of justice—save the mark!—are set in motion by men whose sole object is to make political capital, and who care nothing whatever about punishing crime or purifying the ballot-box. * * * It is a remarkable and a lamentable fact that in political prosecutions these days nothing approximating justice or fair dealing can be expected from the Federal courts."

Regarding the testimony, the Picayune spoke as follows:

"Already some fifty or sixty witnesses in one precinct have testified that they did not vote in the last election, and many of them have produced their registration papers, unindorsed by the Clerks of Election, to prove that they did not vote; and yet the poll-lists show that those very witnesses were counted as having voted."

And we add that it was shown that the accused counted as voters men who were in their graves on election day. The result is recorded in the following dispatch:

"NEW ORLEANS, March 28.—In the election fraud case which has been on trial here the jury to-day returned a verdict of not guilty. The other cases were indefinitely postponed."

There can scarcely be any question of sectional prejudice in a story told entirely by the local journals. Louisiana is still "solid" for the Democrats.—N. Y. Times.

Ex-Gov. John McEnery, stated in his letter, in refutation of the attacks made upon his contract, that despite newspaper comments and popular clamor, he would not say more, until he made his report as required by law. Newspaper comment and popular clamor should not go unheeded. It is the right of the press and the right of the people to clamor as much as they will. An upheaval, a popular upheaval is stronger than the government itself. It is the State as well as the government. It is the people whose voice should never be disregarded. Mr. McEnery should be aware that this is a republic, and that the people are democratic in their ideas. They wish to know everything, especially that which concerns the work of their public officers.—Baton Rouge Truth.

Histories make men wise, and, in proportion as their minds are influenced by a natural love of their counry, so they will always feel a desire to become more and more familiar with the most authentic accounts of its origin, progress towards civilization, and the circumstances which have led to its present importance (or degradation) in the scale of nations. To trace with accuracy the gradual advancement of a country from primitive barbarism, darkness and idolatry, to a state of refinement in the arts, learning, and religion, is the grateful task of the historian but perhaps one of the most difficult that he can undertake; and there are but few who have succeeded in the attempt.—Bacon.

Our churches in nearly every portion of the New England Conference were never in a better condition, on the whole, materially or spiritually. A large number of them have been released from indebtedness, and while there are few sweeping revivals, in almost all charges there is a delightfully revived state and a constant accession of members.—Zion Herald.

The quality and extent of one's personal influence, is the best criterion of his ability and character. For as in the planetary system, the larger orbits deflect and sway the lesser, so weight of character gives a man predominance in society, and as the magnet imparts its virtue to whatever it attracts, so all influence conveys in itself the moral quality from which it emanates.

Holiness as a doctrine has the right of way in the Methodist Episcopal Church. As experience, it should be the inheritance of every Methodist preacher. Bro. Milburn says: "Our people are not enlightened on this subject. They cannot distinguish between a growth in grace and holiness of heart. They generally believe in a growth that will be finished at death, and even contend that it cannot be obtained sooner."

Our Book of Discipline says, that in 1729 John and Charles Wesley saw that they could not be saved without holiness; six years later in 1737 they saw that men are justified before they are sanctified, and they felt that God thrust them out to raise up a holy people. And the entire Board of Bishops say: "We believe that God's design in raising up the Methodist Episcopal Church in America was to reform the continent and spread Scriptural holiness over these lands." In Wesley's Account of Christian Perfection, the doctrine is stated so plain the [illegible] men, though fools, need not [illegible], much less a Methodist [illegible]. [illegible] in grace involves no more [illegible] indicate, an increase of [illegible] grace. Fraternity.

We clip the following from the New York Advocate. The Rev. Howard Henderson, LL.D., referred to, was stationed at Simpson Church, Jersey City. He is a native of Kentucky, a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan University, and has filled several of the leading pulpits of the Church South. He was for several years Superintendent of Public Instruction in Kentucky, and Chaplain of the State Legislature:

The Newark Conference witnessed an unusual scene on the evening of Monday, April 2. Bishop Foss had called the 7th question, "Who are Received on Credentials from ther Churches." In response, the credentials of Rev. William H. Rogers, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, were presensed, and immediately afterward those of the Rev. Dr. Henderson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Bishop said he would request the brethren to come forward, in order that they might be examined as to their willingness to conform to our Church government and usages. Down one aisle of the long church came a tall, stout, well-formed, and fine-looking man, in color of the densest black, while down the other came a short and slight-built white man—an ex-Colonel in the Confederate army; and the two, meeting at the altar, stood side by side, amid the applause of the Conference and the large congregation which crowded the church, and together expressed their allegiance to the government and usages of our Church. This remarkable occurrence illustrates two or three things: 1. The established fact of fraternity between our Church and the Church South. A crowded Conference of our Church opens its doors heartily to a preacher from the Church South who comes to fill a leading appointment. 2. The full equality of colored men with white men in our ministry. 3. The overcoming of prejudice by our Southern brethren against such equality. Dr. Henderson manifested no repugnance to entering a "mixed Conference," and in company with his able-bodied brother of the colored race.

Before us lies the Chattanooga Daily Times Apr. 10, in which there is a significant communication from G. C. Connor, Esq., who seems to be anxious to know what is to be the character of the University the Methodist Episcopal Church proposes to build in that city. It may be true that the conferences concerned in selecting the location are white; but the interest of the white members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Tennessee cannot separate from the colored. Methodism is one, and its colleges and universities, like its churches, should be open to all races and sexes. Mr. Connor seems to be very much interested in this matter. He wants it understood that he is "unwilling to have any associations" with the colored people "on terms of equality of any nature whatever," and that the people of Chattanooga "are not willing to have their children sit in the same room, recite to the same teachers, and play on the same play grounds" with the colored children. What will be the rule of the new University we cannot say. We know that in its early days, when it was counted a sin to be an abolitionist, in good old New England the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut, did exclude one colored student, but it soon became ashamed of the act, repented of the sin, and corrected the mistake. We also know that colored men and women are admitted to all of our colleges and universities in the North and East. We do not believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church will adopt a policy in Chattanooga that it was ashamed of and rejected at Middletown, and all through the North fifty years ago.

We are under obligations to C. K. Marshall, D.D., of Vicksburg, Miss., for a copy of his pamphlet entitled The Colored Race Weighed in the Balance, being a reply to the speech of J. L. Tucker, D.D., made before the Protestant Episcopal Church Congress held at Richmond, Va., Oct. 1882. Here "Greek meets Greek." Dr. Marshall carries the war into Africa. This plea for the colored people is not so much a denial of what Dr. Tucker says as an effort to show that white people have out-stripped the Negro in every form of vice, superstition and dishonesty. "All the stealing done in five hundred years by six millions of Negroes would not equal," says Dr. Marshall, "the sums stolen by white Americans in the past ten or fifteen years." We can easily believe this, but it is a little more difficult for us to subscribe to the sentiment that the numerous mulattoes we see are the descendents "of freedom's soldiers camped among the plantations for several years." Dr. Marshall [illegible]

[illegible] the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, issues his annual report to the conferences of 1883. The report shows a commendable advance in the collections on Children's Day, and what can be done by a united effort in any one direction. During the past year the secretary disbursed over $10,000 in aid of two hundred and fifty students in sixty different institutions of the church. In looking over this report we observe that only three charges in the Louisiana conference are credited with sending their collections to the office of the secretary. Certainly there must be some mistake some where. It must be that more than three charges in this conference observed that day and took collections for the "Children's Educational Fund." It is not right to use the money raised on this day to pay the expenses of our own Sunday-schools We recognize the necessity of providing liberally for these expenses, but we are under special obligations to give this day to the children, and forward their offerings, whether large or small, at once to the corresponding secretary of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 805 Broadway, New York. Let us remember that the money we raise on this day is a part of a sacred fund to be used to help poor struggling young men who are striving to obtain an education.

In this capacity he will solicit contributions for the erection at Evanston of a building and also for the endowment of this excellent institution.

—Rev. Benj. F. Cocker, D.D., died suddenly and painlessly in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Sunday evening, April 8. He was born in England in 1819, and joined Detroit conference in 1859. He was professor of moral science at Ann Arbor. His death will be felt in the entire church and in literary and educational circles. He was a grand champion of religion and was the author of "Christianity and Greek Philosophy," and "The Theistic Conception of the World."

—Miss Amelia Schnoll, daughter of Rev. J. Schnell, of Chicago German conference, died in Chicago at almost a moment's notice. Her father went to preach, leaving the daughter in almost usual health. At about nine the mother was assisting the daughter to retire, when the latter suddenly turned her face to the pillow and expired. The young lady has been a devoted teacher in Berea, Ohio, and in Chicago. She was, in fact, much overworked, and her death is the result.

—Hon. H. C. C. Astwood, U. S. Consul General to San Domingo, is in the city, on a leave of absence, visiting friends and old acquaintances. He is full of smiles and sunshine. The tropics seem to agree with him, as he looks the very picture of health. He is well pleased with his appointment, and is filling it with much credit to all concerned. Mr. Astwood will remain here fifteen days, when he will return with his family, for New York; thence to San Domingo.

—Prof. J. M. McPherron, for seven or eight years Professor of Mathematics, and Principal of Straight University, in this city, is now engaged as a professor in Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn. The removal of Prof. McPherron from this city was universally regretted by all the friends of education in the State. His loss to Straight is a gain to Fisk University and the State of Tennessee. He has our best wishes for his continued success in the work of Christian education.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

On April 1, a union meeting was held in Sixth Street M. E. Church, New Orleans. The following associations were present: Zion Traveler's Benevolent Association, led by H. Wilson, president; J. Wagner, grand marshal. Sons and Daughters of Mount Zion, led by A. Robinson, president; James Thomas, grand marshal. G. G. U. O. of B. and S. of L. and C.; Graham Bell, G. G. W. S.; M. J. Dyer, W. S. Amounts collected as follows: Received from subscribers, $75.28; on contributon boxes, $55.75; congregation and associations contributed, $40.25; Sabbath-school contributed, $10.70; total, $178.90.

S. S. Wright, Fort Jesup: "We received one this quarter and have not lost any. There are four waiting at the altar. We were pleased to have Elder Duncan with us. Class leaders made good reports. We shall send many subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN."

N. Kyle, Hahnville: "Elder Dale held our first quarterly conference on the first, and we had a joyful time."

Mrs. M. Carter, Monroe: "Sunday, March 21, was a glorious day in St. James Chapel, Rev. F. Walker, pastor. He preached strongly and the unbelievers were moved. At night six united with the church. Bro. Walker is loved by all as a servant of God. Through him may sinners be brought to the Lord. His sermon was not specially profound or scholarly, but practical—so simplified that a child could comprehend it."

J. H. Pierre, New Iberia; "Our Sunday-school is in good condition, growing stronger in numbers and spiritually. Part of our mission money has been taken up. Pray that we may continue to prosper."

TEXAS.

E. Jones, Hallettsville: "We are going to build a church. We have some money on hand, and the people are responding. We want to have it ready by the middle of [illegible]

[illegible] tions to call them [illegible] elsewhere."

F. S. Hardin, East Waco [illegible]: "On this charge, Rev. [illegible] Lockhart, the [illegible] church is [illegible] of [illegible] and Hill [illegible]; the membership is not large, but every [illegible] bids fair for the future. [illegible] brethren have gone to work to build themselves a better house, and [illegible] be successful, as all are owners of land, cattle, and other stock. Spring Hill Church, is about four miles southeast of Harrison, with a membership of 65 or 70, about one-third of whom support the church. There is a good Sunday-school, with Bro. John Jackson as superintendent. Here every Sabbath may be seen from 10 to 30 little jewels who are learning to remember their Creator in the days of their youth. In the church a day-school is taught by Rev. Lockhart, who seems to go at his work with all of his heart. Most all the members here own farms or control them, with 500 acres, mills, gin-houses, etc."

C. Chase, Industry: "Elder Richardson held my first quarterly, preached an awakening sermon and administered sacrament to 38. Sister Richarson gave a temperance and a home talk, after which 20 or more joined. I thank God our people are becoming temperate. Of the temperance society organized, Hampton Cherry, is president; Robert Ray, vice-president; Adam Roberts, secretary; Sister Emma Roberts, treasurer. Elders' collection was $5.35; people promised to give him $24. I have received 8 full members, 7 on probation, 4 conversions. I want to build a church this year. I want to place the SOUTHWESTERN in the hands of the people, as I believe it is the paper for them."

J. T. Jacobs, Pleasanton: "The long prostrated lumber has been raised, the rough work has been done, and with the expected aid of $150 from the Church Extension Society we will complete the new church at Hondo. A very good day and Sunday-school is being taught by W. Bolden. The people do all they can to make me happy. There is a day school at Bandera, taught by W. Johnson. At Fredericksburg the public school is taught by Miss Ada Booken; Sabbath-school by two young ladies. I have not attended a better one for some time. The people are looking forward to better days; they have no houses to worship in. Have added four to the church, visited 52, prayed with 28."

ARKANSAS.

At Harrison, Rev. E. R. Fulkerson, pastor, ten persons have been converted in a revival meeting.

Rev. G. W. Gray is doing well in his efforts to build up that university at Little Rock, Ark. He was at Trinity, Chicago, last Sunday, where he preached a fine sermon and received a liberal collection. Dr. Gray has a fine lecture, entitled "The school-house and the slave-pen," which he will deliver at many northwestern points. This instructive, entertaining and valuable lecture is illustrated by a large map which gives vivid point to his discussion. We wish all our churches could hear him.—Northwestern.

MISSISSIPPI.

J. W. Longstreet, of Macon, writes that the pastor, G. W. Brooks, came the first Thursday in February, preached two sermons on the following Sabbath, and on Thursday was stricken down with pneumonia. The attack was so sudden and serious that his recovery was doubted. Through God's mercy, the skill of the physician, and the close attention of his devoted wife, and the prayers of all, he is now on crutches, and bids fair for recovery. On the evening of the 2d, under pretense of arranging for a marriage ceremony, about fifty friends, among them Elder Campbell, Elder Bowen, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. M. Adams, crowded in with tablecloths, luxuries and delicacies, and after helping themselves bountifully retired, leaving enough of all marketable things to last the parson for the next six weeks. He has since entered the pulpit to the great satisfaction of the brethren.

David Bragg, Vaiden, "Our pastor, Calvin Vaughan, has added eight in full membership and two on trial. There are 25 mourners. Pray that we many go on from one degree of grace to another."

A pastor writes that his circuit is "in tolerable good condition owing to the high water." Our readers will wonder what the brother means to imply by that expression.

R. Hayes, State Line: "My work is prosperous. Two have been received by letter. The Sunday-schools are in charge of T. [illegible] Elder Campbell held our [illegible] to 47. [illegible]

$11 70. The amount apportioned to pastor was $150; presiding elder $28; bishops $2. The times are hard and the people poor, but we [illegible] trusting in the Lord."

James Ellis, Oxford: "Elder Bradford held our first quarter at Elijah Chapel. The four Sunday-schools are in good condition, with 100 scholars of fifteen years and upward, and an average attendance [illegible] Mission collection [illegible] 70. On Sunday, the elder preached a beautiful scriptural sermon full of power. Collection for him was $8. I believe that we will be able to build a church this year. Brethren pray for me."

A Voice From Georgia.

BY REV. A. T. ADAMS.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is making a healthy progress among the colored race in this State. The decrease in membership by the statistics of our last annual Conference was only apparent, caused by correcting the errors of former statistics, while there was a good increase in members. The M. E. Church is growing stronger among the colored race in this State every year, numerally, spiritually, morally, intellectually, and financially. We presume the same is true in all the Southern States. We love the grand old Church of father John Wesley, who lifted up her voice like ten thousand trumpets and made this American Nation tremble by declaring, "that slavery was the sum of all villainies," and before the battle wrecks were cleaned away, and almost before the reverberations from the cannon's mouth, that sounded the death-knell of the infernal demon, slavery, had died away, she was in the South in midst of the most ungodly prejudice, race caste, Ku-Klux and cut-throats, with the spelling book and the Bible in her hands, to educate, Christianize, and lift up the down-trodden, degraded, and most outraged negro race.

The progress of the "old mother Church" among this people has been great, and this glorious work of the Lord Jesus Christ for the poor hated negro, by this Church of the most high God, is still going on vigorously, and will continue to progress among this people until our redemption is perfectly worked out.

Notwithstanding the great work that has been and is now being accomplished for the colored race by the M. E. Church, a much greater work still remains to be accomplished yet, for it must be remembered that that direful demon, Slavery, left the colored people in the South lying helpless at hell's dark door of degradation and ruin, absolutely destitute of every thing that constitutes an honorable and intelligent people, and their recovery from such a wretched state of degradation is no small thing and cannot be accomplished in a short time.

At emancipation the enemies to the negro's elevation were almost infinite, and the great mountain in his way being his color viz., black. The enemies to his elevation have greatly decreased, but the mountain of his color still remains. The negro is hated and ignored in the South to-day as at emancipation because he is black. A black Negro, though he may be washed clean with water and soap, and nicely dressed, would create as great a consternation in a white audience in the South to-day by taking a prominent seat in their midst as would a fresh case of small-pox in the same place. This kind of caste has reigned in this country ever since the black Negro was brought here as a degraded slave, and today it is still reigning here in all its power as the devil's "king" of all unrighteousness. Heaven never beheld such an uneven contest as the Negro is now having in this country for recognition as a citizen of the United States, and a brother in the Church of Christ. No other race was ever so outrageously treated as the Negro race is now being treated in this so-called Christian America, in almost everything; no other race ever met with such ungodly opposition as the Negro race has met and is now encountering in their efforts to become a people, and no other race has made as rapid progress in Christianity and citizenship in spite of such an uneven contest as the negro race has made in such a short time.

The complete redemption of the colored race in the South is only a question of time, long will be the contest, but the victory is certain to be won, and the colored race redeemed.

We are very thankful to Almighty God for the great work the M. E. Church is doing for us in helping us to work out the redemption of our people. We love the Church because she first loved us, even when we were dead in hellish [illegible]

[illegible]ted her love for us by planting herself like an impregnable wall of heaven against the demon of slavery. And now we are born again by emancipation, she is still manifesting her great love for us by doing more for our education and Christianization than all of the churches in America combined.

"I love thy Church, O God!
Her walls before Thee stand,
Dear as the apple of Thine eye,
And graven on Thy hand."
* * * * *
Beyond my highest joy
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise."

From San Antonio District.

MR. EDITOR:—Dear Bro. Cushman, I have so many things to tell about that I have waited a bit to think out the most important. The District is in as good condition in many respects as could be expected, especially so where the brethern are doing anything at all for the Lord, or humanity. May the day not be far distant when the work shall be fully manned by men full of the love of God, and the power of the Holy Ghost; men that are willing to stoop low enough to shoulder the burden, all have to bear to bring men to Christ, to help, save and reform a disordered world, especially to be willing to do that part of the work assigned to them, men that will try and make a community, or a people what they love they ought to be. Notice Bro. A. J. Turner's letter, what a strange sound it has! since he has not succeeded fairly at a single point where he has labored. Though Bro. Turner has been helped, ever so much by the Missionary Society, as well as by private individuals, and still he has no good word to say for himself, family or his work. Other ministers have succeeded where he has failed.

Bro. Turner has had a long time to succeed at one point, or somewhere in the work. I may have been indiscreet in matters relative to district work. However, I take no pleasure in this or any kind of sin. We said to our venerable Bishop Warren, and the elders, that perhaps it would be the best to leave off Corpus Christi till the field developed a little more, as both missionary money and men had been used there to little purpose. It was so left off for the future to indicate what best to do. Bro. Turner was sent to Laredo, a hard doubtful field it was, but one advantage over all of us, as he could speak the Castilian. His success among the Mexicans as good, beyond expectation, and some sixteen Mexicans joined our church. But for some unexplained reason they began to leave the church, and join others, as Bro. Turner has informed the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN. Bro. Green Taylor of the A. M. E. church, I am informed by a friend, has succeeded in gathering a fair membership and has raised by entertainments alone $175.00 and has large subscription lists, and a lot to build on. A gentleman gives him a few hundred feet of lumber to begin building with. Again Bro. Turner hogged for Corpus Christi, and takes occasion to inform us that there are already too many churches in Corpus Christi, that he cannot get any support, etc. We fail to understand what the brother wants us to believe or how much he wants us to believe. We said in a letter to Bishop Warren that the prospects were bright, etc. "Yes," was the prompt reply, "but bare of results." St. Paul M. E. Church at San Antonio, Texas, raised by subscription $385.95. Bro. Carnes is doing nobly. Belmont circuit lost both of their church houses by fire the night of the 4th inst. The trouble rose from dissatifaction of two school teachers, as to which should teach in the community, including these two houses. We wonder will they ever accomplish as much good they have harm. Shame on that class of teachers who disgrace and abuse the high trust and sacred calling of the profession, by geting up community broils, from which no good can come. The houses were built without aid from the Church Extension Society. I understand the officers are ferreting out the matter, with a view to bring the incendiaries to justice. God grant it. Yours truly,

MACK HENSON.

The Picayune has had no little difficulty in getting at the facts in relation to the conduct of the Land Office, but has resorted to every expedient to ascertain the full extent of the diversion of the public moneys into the pockets of the land ring. After a time he went to Jerusalem. At first the friends of Christ were afraid of him. They knew how he had hated them, but Barnabas told them how God had changed his heart. Then he was made welcome. It was a grand visit for Saul. He met the disciples, and could hear so much about Jesus. They had seen Jesus and been with him, so Saul must have enjoyed hearing about his new Lord and Master, Jesus. When he hated Jesus he had done all he could against him; now he does all he can for Jesus. Jesus wants every one who comes to follow him to be just like Saul. Jesus needs workers. There is no time to be idle. Saul began to work right away, so must you. Saul began just where he was, so must you. At home you must work for Jesus by being kind and obedient like Jesus was. You must preach your little sermon every day for Jesus, or sin will be sure to make you preach a sin sermon. You preach all the time for Jesus or against him.—Western.

A Warning.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN—Sir: I wish to let you know that there is a person going around and imposing on the unwary by pretending to be a minister of the Gospel. He gives his name as Scott, and that he was ordained by Elder Esan Carter, at Little Zion Church, East Baton Rouge parish, and he preached one sermon at Tiger Bluff Church on Sunday night. On Monday night he broke into the three different houses and attempted to outrage as many different females, threatening to "dirk them to the heart." Please publish this so all may beware of this imposter. He was roughly handled. The Amite river is a good place for imposters to keep away from.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Logansport, Ind. Dec. 1, 1880.
For a long time I have been a sufferer from stomach and kidney disease. My appetite was very poor and the very small amount I did eat disagreed with me. I was annoyed very much from non-retention of urine. I tried many remedies with no success, until I used Brown's Iron Bitters. Since I used that my stomach does not bother me any. My appetite is simply immense. My kidney trouble is no more, and my general health is such, that I feel like a new man. After the use of Brown's Iron Bitters for one month, I have gained twenty pounds in weight. O. B. SARGENT.

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—*Rev. THE KING AND THE PEASANT.

Once, at the same point of time,
Two mortals passed from earth;
One was a king, of caste sublime,
Base was the other's birth;
But each had lived a stainless life
Amid this sinful planet's strife.
Upward the spirits took their flight,
[illegible] and elate,
Till soon they reached the realms of light,
And paused at Eden's gate.
There, waiting them, with joy they see
The Fisherman of Galilee.
He oped the gate—one lustrous stone—
And ushered in the king,
While the poor peasant, left alone,
Heard songs of welcoming;
And strains of harps, divinely sweet,
[illegible] forth the royal guest to greet.
[illegible] ceased—the Heavenly guide
[illegible] back the gate again,
And [illegible] the peasant at his side
Join the seraphic train;
But, strange to say, no angels sang,
No harps through Heav'n symphonious rang!
"[illegible], Saint revered!" the peasant cried,
"Why shout no choirs for me,
As for yon monarch in his pride;
Am I less dear than he?
Can aught but equity have birth
[illegible] in high Heav'n, as on earth?"
"[illegible] son," the Saint replied, "thou art
[illegible] dear as kingly clay;
[illegible] like thee of lowly heart,
Come hither every day.
While Dives at the gate appears
Once only in a hundred years!"

Literary Culture Among Ministers.

Address delivered by Rev. H. Webb, Professor of Mathematics in Wiley University, before the District Conference of Marshall District, Texas Conference, March 30th, and published by the unanimous request of the Conference.

While I shall address myself particularly to my brethren in the ministry, the theme and lecture will apply as well to the laity as to the ministry.

Let us define our theme, that we may understand what we are talking about. This is first in all [illegible] to understand the nature and scope of the subject.

Culture comes from the Latin [illegible] colo, cultus, and means, "to [illegible] to dwell;" culture means the [illegible] of tilling, and preparing; when applied to the soil, means preparing the soil for a crop; when applied to the heart, it is moral [illegible], preparing the heart for a crop of righteousness, to produce love, peace, joy, &c.; when applied [illegible] it is intellectual culture, [illegible] the mind to produce [illegible] well formed mature [illegible].

Now examine the word Literature. This word, as defined in Webster's Dictionary, is synonymous [illegible] which is derived from [illegible] or scientia, which [illegible] to know, the comprehension or understanding of truth, or facts of the mind. Hence, literature [illegible] letters [illegible] letters, or books, [illegible] [illegible] grammar, rhetoric, [illegible] languages, [illegible] literary culture [illegible] knowledge of books or [illegible] or study books, or [illegible] that they shall pro[illegible] or be with us as [illegible] I need not [illegible] of such culture [illegible] of such acquire[illegible] demanded by all. The [illegible] with his culture, so [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] and the laws that govern the [illegible]. He must be a man of [illegible]. No one thinks of trusting his health, his life, to an ignorant quack; so in law, if we are in trouble, in danger of the law, or to be wronged, we seek the counsel of one learned in the law, that has applied himself to study, and is familiar with law principles, its regulations and application. This is right as it should be.

Now we come to ask: Are the souls of men equal in value with their bodies? Is it as important to our well being and happiness that our souls be healthy, that they be free from disease and pain in order to live? Is it necessary to protect the heart from wrong, to shield the soul from the attacks of our enemies? Is the soul exposed to death and ruin? If so, from what cause? Answer: From sin; and sin is the violation of law. Then there must be law. The law of soul health and life. Then if the soul has violated law, is sick, and exposed to death, is there any remedy? Yea! There is a plan of salvation, a redemptive scheme. Mark the words, plan and scheme. Plan means a project; the form of something to be done, existing in the mind, with the several parts adjusted in idea, expressed in words, or committed to writing. Scheme: a combination of things connected and adjusted by design; a system. Then this plan of salvation is a system of truths arranged in accordance with the law of soul-life. Now the soul diseased, crushed by sin, wounded by transgression, wronged by an arch-enemy, is to be treated, saved in accordance with this system of truth in keeping with the plan. Ministers are the teachers, the physicians to direct the afflicted dying soul in the application of the remedy. Can it be true that our Creator, in the plan and union of the different natures of our being, has carefully guarded by well defined laws our physical nature, making it necessary for us to study those laws and their effects, that we may have health and life, and left the higher nature of our souls to blind chance? Has handed over to unlettered, ignorant and careless teachers the instruction and care of the soul? No! The law of God is perfect, converting the soul, the testimony of the Lord is sure making wise the simple. More to be desired are they than gold, yea than much fine gold; and how many can say "sweeter than honey." I fear many of us think more of gold than law; more of collections than those testimonies that make wise the simple! The honey is in our pockets and not in our hearts and brains. Methodism was founded in wisdom and culture; culture and literature saved and sanctified to God. The Wesleys were men of broad literary culture. Clark, Watson, Bonson, Fletcher, and many more of the Fathers, were men of fine culture. Asbury, Coke, Gee, and a host of the Fathers of American Methodism were men of culture, but they had sanctified hearts and were full of the Holy Ghost. Paul was the greatest of the Apostles! Greatest, because he was better educated. When his great learning was sanctified and set on fire of the Holy Ghost, it made kings tremble and say, "Much learning hath made thee mad!" Moses was a man of great learning. God kept him in school eighty years; forty years in the Egyptian schools, and forty in the school of Jethro; so he was fully qualified for the great work to which God called him. The disciples were three years with Jesus, receiving instruction, before they were ready for the great work of founding the Christian Church. Hence, they had culture, literary culture; and when the Holy Ghost fell on them, it had material to use. We often hear it said, "souls are perishing, and will be lost while I am getting ready." I must be in a hurry; but God could wait eighty years, while Israel was in great suffering, the people were perishing all the time; but he waited until he had an instrument prepared; [illegible] that he did not [illegible] must not think, be[illegible] down to death, [illegible] The but to read with understanding. Read—read, and then think—think and read; live with books, dwell in them. This may be done on horseback, under a tree, in a cabin, or in a school, or begun in school and continued elsewhere. That books are to be read? The first book for the minister is the Bible. Learn to read the Bible so as to understand its meaning, and cause others to understand. Not only read but study. 2d. Read those books that explain the doctrines and teachings of the Bible. Methodist preachers must read the books written by good and wise men the of church. Only few men can write books, but all can read them. If poor and unable to buy books, or but few books—1st, buy a good reference Bible and concordance; 2d, a Hymn book; 3d, a Discipline. Read and study these, commit them to memory; then subscribe and pay for at least two of the church papers, and read them; keep posted. Read and mark the passages, and if not understood, be ready when the elder comes around and ask him; keep him busy with questions. Read for your people, read for the children, carry a book to read everywhere you go, read it and explain it. I have been asked, what use is mathematics, and such studies for a minister. I answer, all study gives mind vigor, and mathematics and kindred studies are of the best to give system and vigor to thought. What makes one man greater than another? Why is Bishop Bonner, or Simpson, and others greater than any of us. Many of you are larger men and make more noise, eat more bacon, and no doubt have as much religion. The difference is in intelligence, in mind, in culture. God cannot use idiots to carry on His work in this world. He cannot use with success careless ignorant men. When the Holy Ghost called you into the ministry, it called you to qualify yourselves to study to be teachers, and if you fail to do this you forfeit your right to preach, and are sinners against God and the church. Pray, study, preach, and God will bless you, and the people will hear you.

Marshall District Conference.

PARIS, Texas, Apr. 6, 1883.

The district conference of Marshall district, met at Marshall, in their house of worship, to hold its first session for 1883, March 28th, 1883; W. L. Molloy, P. E., in the chair, who opened the conference with reading and prayer. At the call of the roll several responded. On motion, myself and F. Parker, were nominated for secretaries. Then the several committes were appointed. Through the course of the conference sessions the following reports and resolutions were presented to the conference:

COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

Whereas, intemperance is the greatest evil of the land, causing more poverty, crimes and wickedness than any other influence, and stands more in the way of the success of the church, than all other evils; therefore,

Resolved, That we are in favor of legal prohibition and will labor to that end.

Resolved, That we request all pastors in our churches to see that the Discipline on this subject enforced, and all local preachers be silenced who in any way indulge in the use of intemperance.

JAS E. SHACKELFORD, Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

Regarding the religious development and culture of the race, second to no consideration, and believing no agency is so indispensable to symmetrical Christian development as the schools under the direction of the church, we, therefore, bespeak the sympathy and hearty co-operation of the people in behalf of the enterprises related to our conferences. We rejoice in the continued prosperity of Wiley University, and are gratified to know that we are to have additional room in the near future. We recognize the necessity of establishing high schools in various parts of the country which will reach many who [illegible] able to attend college. A [illegible] established at [illegible] support and recommend a canvass of the patronizing territory for their support, and heartily pledge to take a good collection in each of our charges some time in next May for the Paris school. We recommend to the trustees of the Wiley University to arrange the work of the professors that some of them may have time and opportunity to visit our charges and assist in awakening an interest among the people on the subject of education G. M. Knapp, H Webb, T. Moore, P. Morgan and F. Parker, committee.

COMMITTEE ON HOME MISSION.

Whereas, There are many places within the bounds of Marshall district where the people are without sufficient Gospel privileges. Your committee recommend that the places be supplied with local preachers as far as possible.

S. HORN, Chairman.

RESOLUTIONS.

By J. B. McCullough: Resolved, That we, the members of the Marshall district, do pledge ourselves to discourage festivals in our churches.

The Church requires socials as a means of promoting fellowship among its own members. This is especially so in towns, and where the membership is large. It may be of little consequence to that portion of the membership who are in easy circumstances and who have all the social affiliations they can maintain. Such persons are liable to lose ground spiritually, because their associations are so largely among those who are worldly and irreligious. But it should be remembered that fully one-half the membership of the church is composed of the laboring classes, men who are compelled to be at their business at seven in the morning, and women who have no domestic help and have very little time to give to society. These persons are not invited out, they go to no public entertainment whatever, and in fact seldom go anywhere in a social way, but to the prayer meeting. Schrapnell.

Allow me space for a shell full of scraps. I have just returned from a short trip to the Ohio valley, and whilst there witnessed the devastation after the deluge, and saw on both banks of the Ohio piles of damaged corn. I was informed at Henderson, Ky., that that county alone had lost 250,000 bushels of corn. If such has been the loss in one county, what must have been the loss from the head waters of this beautiful river to its mouth at Cairo? From the time I heard of the great flood I could not shake off the convictioo that God had dealt the strong hold of the whiskey power a peaceful blow, and would follow it with other strokes, unless the men of those beautiful valleys desisted from the crime of spoiling the grain he gives them, and the whole land so abundantly for food, for they are largely the corn merchants for the South.

Allow me to say through your paper, which goes up "the great river" and its tributaries, that if "the crime of Sodom was fullness of bread," and its judgment fire, the crime of those beautiful American valleys, which God clothes annually with the richest green, and fills with golden grain, is made known to Him through the prayers of millions which go up from the crushed hearts of old and young, who are the sufferers under the heartless tyranny of the whiskey power, it is the least that can be expected that an unexpected deluge should sometimes come.

I spent a portion of two weeks in Jeffersonville, Ind., my old home, and had the pleasure of meeting the able pastor of old Wall street Church, Rev. G. L. Curtis, and hearing him preach. It is now about twenty-five or six years since he offered himself to the Conference for admission: I was the friend of schools and school men in those days, and my recollection is there was some resistance made to his going into college life whilst yet a member of conference; but he went into it, and now that the ripeness of growing yours crown his life, neither he nor his friends can regret the step taken, for he shows the culture in the fruitage.

Whilst not the friend of the seminary imprint for all our men, and utterly opposed to the seminary mill grinding out uncalled ministers, yet where a man is clearly called, as in this case, our schools should be placed at his service and all needed aid rendered.

I shipped at Louisville for southern Illinois on the R. R. Springer, a Cincinnati and New Orleans packet, of fine proportions finish and equipments, commanded by Capt. H. U. Hart, whose clerk, J. S. Jones, Esq., with the whole band of gentlemenly officers, labored to make the trip agreeable to all their passengers. In seeing and hearing I had but one regret, and I know the mates will pardon the reference. From time to time the passengers were startled by fearful and strange oaths, used in directing the deckhands, and urging them to duty. Is this necessary, or are oaths the official language of that class of officers? I could not but think: It is well that God in His mercy shuts His ears against such prayers, or fire and flood and general destruction of the beautiful craft and all on board would be the result.

Nor can I think that that style of governing a crew is the right form, as I had evidence on that boat. The chief steward had a large band of men under him, cooks and waiters; the whole band moved with the regularity of clock work, no noise, no bustle, but few words uttered, and those in an undertone. I could not but complement him on the perfection of his drill; it would have graced a dinner at the London Mansion House. My friends of the Springer will please put this and that together, and by reform on the lower deck give the noble mercantile marine of the western waters a shining example.

But the men of river life are not the only offenders against the third commandment: "Thou shalt not take [illegible] name of the Lord thy God [illegible] for the Lord will not hold [illegible] who taketh His name [illegible] we find the off[illegible] is not only immoral, but it destroys the power and sacredness of the oath that binds the conscience in courts of justice, but alas these men too often bandy the oath as a jest as well as in anger, whilst grand jurors never think of this offence against the law of the land, so because of swearing the land mourneth. Nor are we as ministers free from the charge of remissness in bearing testimony against this great evil.

On board the Springer we found a delightful company, Rev. H. J. Talbot, of Meridian St. Church, Indianopolis, Indiana Coference was on board with his family and a few friends seeking rest for a few days in the southern climate; it gave me a chance to ask the state of many old friends I have not seen for over twenty years. I parted with this agreeable company at a small river town called Cave in Rock on the Illinois shore.

There is little to attract the stranger to this town, except its really romantic position amongst the little hills, which here line the northern bank of the river, and the great rock wall that rises perpendicular for 50 feet out of the river, running eastward as the northern bank for a mile. In the western end of this wall or ridge, is located the little cave that gives name to the place, and of which there are many fabulous legends, connected with the wild Indian and border times of the dim past; for thirty years the lands around it have been the property of my brother and your correspondent. Several of the officers and E. A. Conner, Esq., of the firm of Josce, Biglow & Co., of Metropolis, called my attention to the great daubs of oil paint, wherewith advertising agents were covering the hundreds of names that for several generations, the pleasure seekers are the Ohio, have traced with brush and chisel on those rocks around the mouth of the cave, claiming that kind of thing should be forbidden in some legal form.

I told them I feared there was no remedy—that I respected the sentiment of the living and the dead who had traced their names there, and wished they could be preserved, but regretted to know that this material age respected not the aged or the ancient, for if the road of commerce and gain lay along by the Pyramids of Egypt, or the monuments of Thebes, covered with hieroglyphics that tell the history of four thousand years, the whole would be blotched over with ugly daubs of "St. Jacobs Oil" or other quack remedies, and the last patent invention for killing flies. But for the sake of those who called attention to the matter, I requested my friends at Cave in Rock, to forbid any further use of the advertisers brush on the western end of the wall; let them go eastward. That cave has a war history I may name some future time.

Public Education in Kentucky.

An Educational Convention is to be held in Frankfort for the purpose of securing a more efficient public school system than the present one, which was established by the legislative act of Feb. 16, 1838, with a financial foundation of $850,000, increase in 1848 to 1,225,738 22 and in 1850 to $1,326,770 01. The school tax is 22 cents on the $100, and provision is made for an optional district tax of 25 cents on the $100 in ordinary districts, and 30 cents in graded school districts. It is proposed to make the machinery of common school education more effective and effusive. The defects of the present system are, in part, as follows: The Sheriffs are too tardy in the collection of the school tax; the teachers are poorly paid, and many of them are poorly qualified; the law does not absolutely require a common school to be taught during five months in the year in any district; the people are woefully indifferent in two-thirds of the counties of the State to the importance of common schools; there is a painful lack of normal school instruction; the School Commissioners are in a majority of cases, not qualified to hold these important positions; the State per capita is always an uncertain and variable quantity; the school-houses are largely in a poor condition; there are many districts without any kind [illegible] school [illegible] changed too often and cost too much; the schools do not get all the revenue to which they are legitimately entitled, as from the tax on railroads and turnpikes now diverted; no efforts have been made to secure new sources of revenue. The Frankfort convention must grapple with these defects. The foundations of the school system have been laid 45 years; the building has been slowly rising. The bad bricks must come out of the wall; the whole people of Kentucky must be put to work on these walls with a will.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Self-Conceit Taken Down.

The judgment of the wise on loquacious persons may be expressed in the proverb, "A fool's voice is known by the multitude of his words." Dryden characterized this class as those "Who think too little, and who talk too much."

As a rule, volubility of speech does not go hand-in-hand with affinence of thought; and yet Rufus Choate was as affluent as he was voluble in speech.

"Don't let Brother Choate get hold of a copy," said Chief-Justice Shaw, when some one told him that Worcester was about publishing a new dictionary. But the Chief-Justice always listened with pleasure to Choate's legal arguments.

Still it is generally true, as Mathew Prior says,—

"They never taste who always drink;
They always talk who never think."

Judge Lucas, of St. Louis, once impressed this idea upon a pompous young lawyer in a way more forcible than elegant.

The young man, noted for self-conceit rather than for legal learning, made a spread eagle-speech to a jury. The next day he met Judge Lucas, who had presided at the trial, and thus addressed him:

"Good morning, Judge. What did you think of my little effort yesterday."

"Ah, you are the young gentleman who addressed a jury in my court! Yes,—yes. Well, sir, your speech reminded me of a little yellow dog I have at home. When he wants to lie down he makes a circle, and around and around he goes half-a-dozen times or more, and then down at the very place he started from."

And the judge turned on his heel with a "Good-morning, sir."

Hampering Voters in North Carolina.

We learn that the Legislature of this State has passed an act which requires the legal voters in the city of Wilmington, before they can be allowed to deposit their votes at an election held in the city, to state on oath the number of the lot or part of the lot on which they reside, and also the number of the block on which the lot is situated. It is to be remembered that the lots or blocks, in Wilmington are not designated by any numbers so as to distinguish one lot or one block from any other lot or block, so that a person by any inspection of his premises can for himself determine the number of the lot or block upon which he resides. It is true these lots and blocks are numbered and designated on a plan of the city of Wilmington, and that plan is in the City Hall, and may, by leave of the city officials, be inspected by any citizen, but it is well known that there are many legal voters in this city who could not by an inspection of the plan of the city be able to ascertain the number of the lot upon which they reside. This fact was well known to the artful dodgers who promoted this action on the part of the Legislature, and their avowed purpose was to exclude that large class of our fellow citizens from enjoying the right of suffrage secured to them by the Constitution. It is too plain why Wilmington has been singled out for this oppression. There is in this city a large majority of Republicans, and many of them are colored men; and the Bourbons are determined to deprive them of the elective franchise, Constitution or no Constitution; fas aut ne fas.—*Wilmington (N. It is to be hoped that they will provoke brothers of other communions in this city, as well as our own brethren outside of New Orleans, to the sams good work. Let the work go on. Let the dividing line be drawn in every church; and let every member and friend be invited to come on the side of temperance, to battle against alcohol and the devil. Compulsory Education.

An exchange says: "The study of Latin has been made compulsory in the High School of Charleston, S. C." This is progress in the right direction, but compulsion beginning at the wrong end. Why not, first of all, begin with compulsory common school education for every child of school age in that State? This is the supreme duty of the hour. For truly, we must educate or we must perish! And we give it out as our most candid opinion, that no other possible measure can redeem this State and the whole South from the dark and threatening cloud of gross ignorance that enshrouds and endangers this nation, than a strict and inflexible system of compulsory common school education for all classes of our youths. In this State, the Iberia Star thinks there is nothing more calculated to redeem our State from the grapple of ignorance and place it on an equal footing with its intelligent sisters than a legislative enactment making education compulsory. A law to that effect, it continues, would meet with opposition from certain classes, it being palpable that ignorance in some portions of the state is so profound as to render the introduction of knowledge unsafe. But with the press almost unanimously on the side of compulsory education, it thinks the measure will become a law. No measure of public interest is more deserving of the united approval and advocacy of the religious and secular press. Neither will it avail any reasonable excuse to urge the poverty of the State against the inauguration of such a system; for any State that can afford to keep up two schools in operation, side by side, to gratify a blind, heartless and senseless color prejudice surely can afford to open schools for all the children of the South. Let the school tax be increased, force the collection of the poll tax, but by all means let us have a compulsory system of common school education.

In this country every "ism" whether good or bad has an equal show. Fair play to all seems to suit the American people best. But it is no use to play twenty-five or fifty cents against seventy-five or a hundred. Nineteen times out of twenty, the seventy-five or hundred will win. Here in the South we have an open door. Maybe that most of our people are poor, but they want to succeed and they deserve success. But it is a mistake to transfer men south who [illegible] north. We [illegible]

[illegible] wedding [illegible] With [illegible] Methodist Episcopal Church can do more than any other church in the South toward the introduction of a higher mental culture and a better social and religious life among the poorer classes. We believe in the ministry of hard work and push, but it is a great mistake to suppose that twenty five cents will go as far in New Orleans as a dollar in New York, Cincinnati or Chicago.

There is hope for a man so long as he wants to appear well. The very proneness of men to crave a good reputation, even though they lack a good character, is an element of hopefulness. A professional thief does not like that old Saxon term stealing, he prefers to be called a "kleptomanist." The greatest liar in the community prefers to be spoken of as a man with an active imagination whose statements are not always exactly in harmony with the facts. The most sordid miser prefers to be spoken of as an honest, industrious, prudent man, making good provisions for the future. But after all we think that it is best to call things by their right names. Then we think that it is infinitely better to seek to deserve well than it is to appear well. It is a great deal safer. In the long run men and women find their own level, and will be rated for what they are worth to society. Nice photographs never make homely faces handsome. Pretense never blinds God, and seldom does men. Men's conduct is judged more by what they do than by what they say. And God has so ordered that somehow they are constantly stepping into testing scales that show to the public just how far they come short of the standard of absolute right.

S. L. Gracey, in reporting the New England Conference, for the Northern Advocate, says: "An animated discussion followed a vigorous report made by the committee on the Freedmen's Aid Society. Dr. Henry J. Fox prepared and presented an elaborate report which was enthusiastically endorsed by the Conference protesting against the establishment of any caste lines in our Southern work either in our churches or in our schools, asking that the funds raised for the education of the freedmen be sacredly administered for that purpose and that no part of it be used for the support of "white schools" so called. We establish schools and are willing that they should be opened to all persons in the South who choose to attend them, but demand that no person shall be excluded from any of them on account of color. We insist that our church has no right to spend one dollar in support of school and church in any part of our control from which the black man or the white man may be excluded."

There are certain persons who write for the press who seems to be troubled with a sort of sap sickness. They have barrels of sap, but little molasses, and still less of real sugar. There is once in a while a person who writes for the SOUTHWESTERN who is troubled with a great flow of sap. Recently we have had some trouble in this direction. We have had so much of boiling down to do for others, that we have been compelled to neglect our own. Now what we want is that our brethren write short and often, but they must keep up a good fire and "boil down." A two or three column article must of necessity contain a great quantity of sap. We here cannot do the boiling down, our furnace is just now under repairs and cannot be used. So we say to our correspondents, "Do your own boiling down, and do it well, and at last you find the real granulated sweet sugar."

This is from the Boston Commonwealth, April 14:

The New England Methodist Conference, which closed its annual session in this city this week, passed a resolution upon the subject of caste in the Church at the South, which is likely to lead to much discussion in the future. For several years past, by permission of some Conferences in the South, the color line which prevailed in the days of slavery has been re-established, and separate churches for whites and blacks are maintained. Not only this, but some churches will not allow a colored person to enter within their doors. Just where the authority comes from for preaching the Gospel to [illegible]

[illegible] ing; they are [illegible] advice, and to point out the [illegible] of duty for others, but slow to respond themselves. Brother, if you have been converted to God, Jesus wants you to be a "fisher of men." You must not wait to have men fish for you, or struggle to enter into another man's labors, but boldly push out, and lovingly plead with men to become reconciled to God. There is work to be done, and God is a good paymaster. Give what we may to him, he gives back a hundred fold in this life and in the world to come life everlasting. Go work for God.

Read these plain and grand words from Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher of London. They may not be palatable to many of his Baptist brethren in America. But read them, and repeat them:

"There is not a Christian beneath the scope of God's heaven from whom I am separated. At the Lord's table I always invite all Christians to come and sit down with us. If any man were to tell me that I am separated from the Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, or the Methodist, I would tell him that he did not know me, for I love them with a pure heart, fervently, and I am not separated from them. The pulse of Christ is communion; and woe to the church that seeks to cure the ills of Christ's church by stopping its pulse. I think it is a sin to refuse to commune with any one who is a member of the church of our Lord Jesus Christ. I should think myself grossly in fault, if at the foot of these stairs I should meet a truly converted child of God, who called himself a Primitive Methodist, or a Wesleyan, or a Churchman, or an Independent, and I should say, "No, sir; you do not agree with me on certain points; I believe you are a child of God, but I will have nothing to do with you." I should then think the text would bear very hard on me, "These are they who separate themselves, sensual, not having the spirit."

Spurgeon sets the tradition of the elders aside, and runs after Christ.

South New Orleans District.

Methodism has a genius to conquer. As an agressive force she is without a rival. She moves with strength and celerity; awaiting no call from the people she sends her ministers to all classes and races. They are found wherever sinners are found, lifting up the banner of the cross and offering salvation through Christ to all people. The common people heard Christ gladly, so the masses wait on her ministry. God does not seem to value men by their rank, station, race, or color; with him the mind, the immortal and godlike attributes make the man. We are no bigot; we claim no superiority of religious attainments. We do not think that personally we are purer or nobler in our aims than others, but we do claim for real, genuine Methodism a superiority over all other churchly organizations. There is no converting agency in this world that is equal to Methodism. She not only converts men, but she welds them into pillars of strength and beauty. Brethren in the ministery suffer this word of exhortation. We know that you have many duties. One is to gather into the church all who through your preaching are led to Christ; you must also see them instructed and fixed in their church views and relations. An uninstructed Methodist will have a flabbiness in his moral make-up that is incompatible with real religious success. We know of certain preachers who are so anxious to bring up their own collections that they forget to say a word about the church paper. They call it smart, but it is the smartness of soft iron, and nine times out of ten there is a speck in their character that will in due time rot to the core. They will bear watching. But to return to the district. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon, April 14th, we reached Terrebonne. There is no impoliteness in Rev. Willis Carr; we always find him at the depot ready to take us to the parsonage. There is no forgetfulness on the part of his excellent wife; with a liberal hand she provides for the hungry. At quarterly conference the usual questions were reviewed. The report of the class leaders showed commendable improvement. The collections were as follows: Class No. 1, $12.95; No. 2, $6.10; No. 3, $8.95; No. 4, $9; No. 5, $13.25; No. 6, $6.10; No. 7—the leader was absent; No. 8, $8.15. Certainly there is nothing of badness in these reports, save No. 7. The financial [illegible]

[illegible] perception [illegible] condition [illegible] "Knowing the terror of the Lord," says [illegible] "we persuade men," with [illegible] night and day he ceased not [illegible] every one.

At Houma the atmosphere in the Methodist Episcopal Church was religious. Hallowed influences brooded over the congregation. I felt that it was good to be there. Memories of other days came back and touched the silent harp of the heart and awoke music music that had slept for nearly thirty years. The fact is glorious, but a present Christ and a present salvation is better. God did help in preaching the word, the people listened attentively. The sacramental service and love feast were on the glory side. Since conference Bro. Ford has been favored with large and attentive congregations; the attendance of the Sunday-school has been one hundred and fifty, twelve have been converted to God, twenty-three received on probation and nine in full connection. The reports of the classes were as follows: No. 1, $8.85; No. 2, $4.50; No. 3, $10.05; No. 4, $5.65; No. 5, $3.35; No. 6, $6. Sister Charlotte Williams is the leader of Class No. 3. The financial exhibit of the stewards, was the best we have ever had presented at Houma.

To-morrow I go to Live Oak, twenty miles down on the coast. The ride is to be horseback.

Houma, April 16.

All the churches thus far visited by the writer are in a very healthful and prosperous condition. There seems to be a general desire for a revival of religion, and an increased earnestness on the part of the preachers and people. We may be sure that when all the tithes are in the storehouse that the Lord will open the windows of heaven and pour us as individuals and churches out a blessing there shall not be room enough to receive. The Father has never said, "Seek ye my face in vain."

From Houma to Live Oak, a distance of twenty miles, one passes through some of the best plantations of Louisiana. We have never seen a better stand of cane and corn; but we fear that on some of them religion is administered on the European plan—take what you please and leave the rest, and generally what is taken is small in proportion to what is left. In this matter most men are unselfish. Our church at Live Oak is holding on its way. Bro. Claiborne as pastor and teacher of the day-school, seems to have a due regard for things vital to Methodism—there is no uncouthness in his speech and manners; as a preacher his endeavor is to give the people something to think about. It will be a glorious day for the church when the generation of ranting, fox-fire, heat-lightning preachers shall have died. The bell in the church, the gift of Mr. Cragin, rings out in clear tones all over the adjoining plantations, calling the people to the house of the Lord. Bro. Claiborne has made an addition of a kitchen and sleeping room to the parsonage. The congregation and Sunday-school are growing. Reports of classes are good. Class No. 1, collection, $9.75; No. $9; No. 3, $1.65. The one great need is a sweeping revival. This is sometimes the result of much secret prayer and wrestling with God for personal salvation.

Long ago it was truthfully said that "vigilance is the price of liberty." Careless indifference to political principles is certain ruin to a free nation. So individuals, families and churches, who retain a joyous Christian experience, must "watch," must put on the whole armour of God." Lust, ignorance and error are destructive to faith and piety. God will have the whole heart or none of it. Half piety, whether in the people or preachers, God abhors. At Morgan City we have a noble struggling band, who, if they cannot pay large salaries, will certainly pay all they can, and do it cheerfully—only sorry that they cannot do more. They have one of the best parsonages out of New Orleans and are out of debt, and the ladies of the church propose soon to have it nicely furnished. Bro. Arnston has won the hearts and confidence of the people. The congregation and Sabbath-school were never larger, nor the people more united. The manifest unselfishness of the pastor has a charming and attractive influence upon all with whom he comes in [illegible]

The landlord was quite taken aback when, later in the day, he learned who was his guest, as the Bishop did not attempt to make himself known. The Pastor of the town, who is Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, will look for the appointments next week with some misgivings."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

C. D. Shallowhorne, Jackson: "The Lord has blessed us wonderfully. Seven have been received in full membership. First quarterly conference was held March 17, and we had a happy time. The elder preached to the children in the morning, and at 3 p. m., administered sacrament to 77 persons; he also preached at night to a crowded house, and we gave him a collection of $16. We have paid a small church debt, put in 17 window panes, and raised $125.75 for church repairs. Amanda Capitol, Miss Mary E. Lee, and Miss Malissa Williams raised the largest amounts."

J. P. Robinson, Darrow: "Matters are moving on at this point. Elder Dale held first quarterly conference at Ashland, March 14th. As to our new church, Gilbert Haven Chapel, we are doing all that is possible for the building, with the assistance of the elder. In a protracted meeting of one week there were 11 conversions, and 30 joined the church; many were formerly Baptists. Sister Dale visited us and organized a Woman's Home Missionary Society. We had a glorious time, and 43 members joined. I am working for the paper."

A committee of ladies, Sarah Johnson, Louisa Broom, Susan Johnson and Frances Broom, presented St. James M. E. Church, New Iberia, La., Rev. C. Thompson, pastor, a silver communion set.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. J. H. Cook writes from Magnolia, that the pastor's apportionment made by the first quarterly conference was $300.

L. A. Thompson, Bolton: "The work on this circuit is in a better condition than I have ever known it to be. Elder Williams placed Bro. P. H. Davis in charge. The people love him and he can lead them out of darkness. He is improving the church and the morals of the people. So great is the change in three years that whiskey among church members is now considered a disgrace. We have raised for pastor $52.60. We have very good Sunday-schools."

TEXAS.

Lee Reed, Waelder: "I have closed a protracted meeting with 15 converts, and 12 mourners at the seat of mercy; 5 were received by letter. A faithful member was drowned April 6. Sunday-school is getting along slowly."

Aaron Taylor, Madisonville: "On entering this work the weather was cold, and I suffered greatly; but after many dangers and toils I have come out safe. The work and doctrine of Methodism here is small and weak, but the membership is many and strong. My predecessor did a noble work in this county. I have found 200 children on the work, besides young men and women who have been perishing for Sunday-schools. Three have been organized with only about 16 books in them. I find 45 families of our church without a Bible nor Hymn book, although they read. I hope the Bible agent will visit us if possible. Brethren, pray for Madison circuit, where we are struggling hard against the wiles of Satan."

... Texas.

Bro. Ham Holman, a member of the Church at Crawford, Miss., died March 30, aged 63 years, in full triumph of faith. During the past three years he lived a consistent Christian. A. W. WRIGHT.

Bro. David Tankesly departed this life November 10, 1882, in full triumph of faith in Christ. His last wards were to his wife: Don't grieve after him, for he was going to live with Jesus. Bro. Tankesly leaves a wife and one child. He was married to Miss Sabbie Duncan, October 5, 1881. He joined our church in Mississippi in the year 1874, and moved to Memphis in 1878 and joined Centenuary M. E. Church, where he lived a dutiful and consistent member, and was a licensed local preacher until he died. His wife has our sympathy. C. L. FIELDS.

Rev. Martin Morrison departed this life January 21, 1883, in Memphis, Tenn., in full triumph of faith in Jesus. He was sick but one week—taken down with pneumonia. He was sensible of his death all the while he was sick. Every time any one would ask him how he was, he would say: "The old man will soon be gone to live with Jesus. He had fought a good fight and had kept the faith, and now he was ready to go to rest." Bro. Morrison was in his 54th year, and professed religion in his early days. He was born in Virginia, moved to Tennessee since the war, had been married 29 years, and lived an affectionate husband all the time. He lived a pure Christian life, joined the Methodist Church in 1864, and loved its rules and doctrines and was a great friend to young preachers, always giving them good advice. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Simpson in 1869 at Huntington, Tenn., and was ordained elder at Tullahoma by Bishop Gilbert Haven, October 12th, 1873, and served in the Church with much honor on the following circuits: Memphis circuit, Memphis charge, Galloway circuit and Big Creek circuit. Bro. Morrison left behind him a wife and three children to mourn his loss. Bro. Morrison was an active worker in the Tennessee Conference from 1867 to 1881, when he took supernumerary relation at Franklin, Tenn. His two last sermons were: "I would not live always," and "I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." St. John 10 ch., 11 verse. Bro. Morrison was much beloved by all who knew him. He was always very punctual in everything he went at.

JESSE P. PRICE.

Died in this city April 5th, 1883, of peritonitis, Chas. Anderson. He was born in Davidson county, Tenn., in 1843, being 43 years of age. He professed a hope in Christ in 1859 and joined the M. E. Church, in which he died. He was one of the faithful few who remained in Clark Chapel when torn asunder by our African brethren. His life was characterized by stability, industry, consistency and Christianity. Memorial services of this good man were held in the auditorium of the church Sunday evening, at which addresses were delivered by Mrs. Martha Salter, Mrs. Lizzie S. Porter, I. C. Brown (Superintendent of Sunday-school), the pastor, and an essay by Miss Lizzie S. Love.

Resolutions in memory of the deceased:

WHEREAS, God in His wise providence has seen fit to call from labor to reward our beloved brother, Charles Anderson. And, whereas, his place in Clark Chapel, as a leader, Sabbath-school teacher, and faithful and consistent Christian member, will be difficult for us to fill; therefore

Resolved, That we, the members of the Church and Sabbath-school assembled, will cherish his memory, strive to imitate his virtues, follow his example and thus hope to meet him again in the resurrection morning.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings, together with the essay read, be forwarded to our conference paper, the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, to which he was a regular subscriber, and to the family.

In New Orleans, on Friday, April 5th, in the 61st year of his age, Bro. Joseph Oscar, a faithful member, class-leader and trustee of the Union Chapel M. E. Church. Bro. Oscar was converted to God and joined old Soule's Chapel in 1867 under Father Scott Chinn; and served faithfully and consistently as a member, class-leader, steward and trustee, and upon many important committees under each successive pastor in Soule's Chapel; and after this people moved into Union Chapel he continued as faithfully as ever, without ever being called to trial for any offense, until on the morning of the 5th inst., he was called up from labor to reward. He lived and died an honored Christian soldier. A few hours before his death he told his pastor, Rev. Stephen Priestley: "Tell my brethren I don't expect to meet them here again, but they must meet me in heaven." To his now widowed wife he said just before he crossed the river: "My dear, the Lord has always been with us; now I am going home, but He will continue to be with you." After having requested his stepson, Rev. A. E. P. Albert, whom he had raised, educated and loved as his own son, to always care for his (Albert's) mother, he passed over, repeating as he crossed: "Amen, amen! I'm going home."

The Official Board of Union Chapel expressed their feelings and condolence for the stricken family in the following resolutions:

A Voice from the Press

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Hop Bitters." Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whiskey, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Conner, friends, have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now.

S. GILLILAND.

People's Advocate, Pittsb'g Pa. July 25, 1878.

The report that Chinese sugars were being shipped to Hawaii, and from there re-shipped to the United States, proves to be false.

"Female Complaints"

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: "I was sick for six years, and could scarcely walk about the house. My breath was short and I suffered from pain in my breast and stomach all the time; also from palpitation and an internal fever, or burning sensation, and experienced frequent smothering or choking sensations. I also suffered from pain low down across my bowels and in my back, and was much reduced in flesh. I have used your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription," and feel that I am well.

Very respectfully,

DELILAH B. MCMILLAN, Arlington, Ga.

NEW BOOKS.

THE RIGHT AND WRONG USES OF THE BIBLE. By Rev. R. Heber Newton. Price 20 cents. New York: John W. Lovell Company, 14 and 16 Vesey street.

A well written and readable book, which advances, however, many unphilosophical and unreasonable theories against the general acceptance and reliance upon the received text of the Holy Bible as a whole. The author's advocacy of an expurgated edition of the Scriptures, his idea that it is wrong to accept all the utterances of the Bible indiscriminately, and as necessarily true, are but samples of many of his oblique theories which are highly repugnant to orthodox christians.

HOLY VOICES, for the Sunday school and other services of the church. By Rev. E. S. Lorenzo and Isaiah Boltzell. United Brethren Publishing House, Dayton, O. Single copies 35 cent.

This is an excellent Sunday school music book of 192 pages, fresh and sparkling with musical gems.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The North American Review for May contains nine articles, nearly every one of which discusses some topic or problem at present prominent in the public mind. Senator J. T. Morgan writes of "Mexico," and sets forth the considerations of commercial advantages and international comity which are rapidly bringing about a more cordial understanding between that country and the United States. Rev. William Kirkus, taking occasion from Bishop McQuaid's recent vaticinations regarding the decay of Protestantism, makes a vigorous counter charge upon the papal system in "The Disintegration of Romanism." In "Emerson and Carlyle," Edwin P. Whipple discourses with all his old-time keenness and perfection upon the strangely diverse mental and moral characteristics of those two great thinkers. Prof. Felix Adler offers "A Secular View of Moral Training," arguing that the current skepical habit of thought demands an independent system of practical ethics, based on observation rather than on revelation. "Communism in America," by Prof. Winchell, gives very forcible expression to the apprehensions of those pessimistic observers who think that they see in our political and social development the signs of impending national decay. The other articles are "Affinities of Buddhism and Christianity," by Rev. Dr. James Freeman Clarke; "Woman as an Inventor," by Matil la Joslyn Gage; "College Endowments," by Rossiter Johnson; and "Extradition," by A. G. Sedgwick. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

501 N. Fremont St., Baltimore

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months, and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I suffered fearfully from indigestion, and for over two years could not eat solid food and for a large portion of the time was unable to retain even liquid nourishment. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TEXAS.

J. Smith, Belton: "Elder Madison found the work not as wide awake as he would have liked it to be, though we feel it will be better by the next round. On Sunday there was a fair gathering and 50 partook of the sacrament. There was a good collection for the elder."

T. Watkins, Simpson Tabernacle, Austin: "Elder Madison held second quarter and preached a rousing [illegible] on Sunday; administered [illegible] to 63. I have closed a protracted meeting with 19 conversions, 2 backsliders reclaimed. Work is in a live condition. Have raised for all purposes this year $213.60; for pastor $83, elder $31.80."

ARKANSAS.

M. Lockman, Lewisville: "I am down on the line between Texas and Arkansas, where the M. E. Church is not very strong. The presiding elder L. W. Elkins, preached several sermons and gladdened the hearts of all who heard him. He baptized three children, and one joined the church. Collection was $4.60."

C. O. Riley, Cotton Plant: "We rejoice that Miles Hall, who has heretofore led a very wicked life has professed a hope in Christ. He is loved by every body."

MISSISSIPPI.

A. W. Wright, Crawford: "We have a good membership here. We have bought a lot for $30, paid for [illegible], and will go to the mill next week [illegible] lumber to build a parsonage. [illegible] quarterly conference [illegible] $36.35. Elder Shumpert's influence was a great help to [illegible] respect. He preached to [illegible] congregation, and administered [illegible] to 140. Collection [illegible] Paid Elder $10, pastor [illegible] parsonage $11.30."

[illegible] Martin, Pickens: "Our [illegible] Elder G. W. Barney [illegible] March 28, 29. Our first [illegible] meeting was held. The [illegible] a fine sermon at night. [illegible] partook of the sacrament [illegible] Lord's supper. The holy [illegible] down upon the Lord's [illegible] and all had a happy time. [illegible] school is in a prosperous condition with a large attendance, we intend to labor hard this year to improve God's work on this [illegible]."

LOUISIANA.

[illegible] organization of a missionary society; he said "we propose to have one of the best if not the best Sunday-schools in the Shryveport district," which cheered our hearts and animated our zeal to go forward. The class leaders reports elicted some debate and fused new life in there whose names were on the report as giving their scanty nickels when they could have given more towards God's church. The estimating committee made the following report: For pastor, $5.10; elder, $50; bishop, $2; conference claimants, $2; rent, $60; traveling and moving expenses, $30; mission church, $10; Sunday-school, $5; Church extension, $4; Freedman aid, $25; education, $2; tract $1; Sunday-school Union, $2; Woman's foreign mission, $1. A resolution of $1 fine was imposed on all those failing at the next conference to present their report in writing when called for. All of the 27 reports made were in writing, which shows a marked improvement with the people. A motion was made to organize a Womans Missionary Society, and that the pastor take steps towards the organization of the same, and a lady teacher be employed as soon as practicable thereafter. The conference was a henodiction. The reports of the various classes aroused a feeling of progressiveness. Our dear brother Isarel Shepard who is a shepard to many leads the van. We are in a revival now. Our hands are full. We are not wanting; neither looking for something to do, but going ahead. Many sinners and backsliders here. Pray for us."

He was Going to Sleep with God.

Sometimes I believe the little ones say the best things after all. I know a little family in Detroit who are heart-broken and sad this Saturday night. There were three last Saturday, but to-day only two are left. The tie that bound them more closely than that which the clergyman drew, has lately been loosened, and the light of their countenance went out with the red Winter sun only the other night. The father is a railroad man, whose duties call him away from home nearly three-fourths of the time. It was his habit when about to start for home to telegraph his wife, apprising her of the fact. In these telegrams he never failed to mention the name of the little four-year-old, and the dispatches ran as follows: "Tell Arthur I shall sleep with him to-night." The baby boy was very proud of these telegrams, which the mother would read over to him, and he considered the "teledraf" a great institution. The other night, when the fever had done its work, and the mother was sobbing out her anguish, the little one turned calmly in his bed and said. "Don't ky, mamma; I s'all s'eep wiv Dod, 'oo know. Send Dod a teledraf, and tell Him, I s'all wiv Him to-night." But the message went straight up there without the clicking of wires or the rustle of wings.—Christian Standard and Home Journal.

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no sort of need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters is taken occasionally.

It is about time this thing of charging colored people first class fare and then afterwards making them take second or third class accommodations was put a stop to. It is simply outrageous to say the least of it, and is an insult to the whole colored race. There is just as much reason and right in a colored man going into a dry goods or grocery store to make necessary purchases, and being required to pay first class prices and then made to take second, third, or fourth class goods. We say it is an outrage and that if the colored people are going to be made to take second and third, or fourth class accommodations they should only be required to pay for what they get.—Paris Informer.

Lost Friends.

[We make no charge for publishing these [illegible] from subscribers. All others will be charged [illegible] cents. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.]

MR. EDITOR:—I desire to inquire for my two sons whom I left in Mississippi before the war. The oldest, Jack, named after me, belonged in the Widow Escott's family, three miles from Grand Gulf. His mother was Sarah, grandfather Peter, grandmother Rose. The youngest was Solomon; his mother Clarissa died when he was small. He belonged in the Elias Bridge's family, three miles from Port Gibson, Claiborne county. As I was taken from there before the war, I am very anxious to hear from them. They were small and I do not know whether they know my name. Address, No. 9 Sorapara street, New Orleans.

JACK RHODES.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish to inquire for my brother, who left us in Eutaw, Ala., in 1865, and has not been seen since. Owner's name was Mrs. J. H. Copp. His name then was Jack Copp; mother and father, Eliza and Julius Copp. After freedom we took father's name Hobson. We are all alive except Lemuel. Let this be read from all pulpits where the SOUTHWESTERN goes. God bless the paper; I know of friends it has found. Address at Meridian, Miss.

M. A. HOBSON.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire to inquire for my mother. Her name is Ellen Modley. I left her in Harrison county, Texas, living with a man by the name of Bill Peternay; I left her the year the war broke out and went to Alabama, Green co., with Willinmson Glover. I have not seen any children since three weeks before surrender; they were Tom and Scott, they were twins, they went by the name of Williamson, the name of the man that was guardian, for my owner then was Lawyer Woodson, he attended to all the business. I had a brother by the name of Jack, and sister Bethsiner and sister Georgiana Vinger. My name was Mary Glover; now I go by the name of Ann Williams. Write me at Forest, Miss., in care of Rev. J. J. Garrett.

MR. EDITOR:—I inquire for my mother Rachel Gooden, wife of Harris Hargis. My name at that time was Eliza Jane Orvin. I was sold by Wm. Orvin to John Murrell. When I left mother, was cooking at the hotel in Columbia, Tenn. My name is now Eliza Jane Elam. Address me at Batesville, Miss.

MR. EDITOR—I desire information of the following named relatives: My mother's named Maria, belonged to Perry Starks in Louisville, Ky.; my brother's named Zachariah Taylor; my sister named Dollie Ann—all belonged to Perry Starks. My sister Mary we left in Virginia. I think she belonged to a Mr. Carter at the time. We parted at Charlottesville. We were sold there from the Eade's estate, as well as I can recollect. My sister Sarah she belonged to Terry Graves in Fayette. She and I went to Missouri together. In a short time after I was sold again; and to the present time I have been unable to learn anything from them, or their whereabouts. I am the oldest boy, and was about three years of ago at the time of our separation. I am about 35 years old now. I hope brother preachers will take an interest in my inquiry and help me find my relatives. Address,

It offers only honest preparations at honest prices. The celebrity of its Coca Beef Tonic is due to uniformity of quality and price. Invaluable in dyspepsia, debility, nervousness and neuralgia.

The Housekeeper.

THE HOME DOCTOR.—An invalid should never be allowed to touch hot rolls or hot bread in any shape.

Vegetables are the life and soul of healthy living, and should not be neglected at any meal.

A small cup of warm milk containing a teaspoonful of lime water may be given frequently in cases of "bowel complaint."

Merely warm the back by a fire, and never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do otherwise is debilitating.

The following is recommended as a cure for neuralgic headache: Squeeze the juice of a lemon into a small cup of strong coffee. This will usually afford immediate relief in neuralgic headache. Tea ordinarily increases neuralgic pain, and ought not to be used by persons affected with it.

If a healthy child (and a delicate one proportionately) is regularly put to bed about dark, in a quiet, well ventilated, or even cool room, after a supper of plain food, it will naturally awake at daybreak, good-natured, with a keen appetite for a wholesome breakfast. Nutritious, plain food, at regular hours, with no candy or stimulants, and free bathing, help the system to ward off many prevalent children's ailments, and to bear with much less danger the few that must necessarily come to the majority of little ones.

IRONING.—An old handkerchief or piece of muslin placed between the iron and collar will prevent the sticking. Iron over this until the dampness is slightly absorbed, then remove it and go on as usual. The old-fashioned method of stirring the end of a tallow candle in the starch is very satisfactory and prevents much annoyance.

CHICKEN SOUP.—Cut a chicken into pieces, and simmer it gently in a gallon of water, until the meat is in rags. Skim well, strain, and return the broth to the pot. Add a cupful of rice, and a tablespoonful of parsley. Let it simmer for another hour. Season with pepper and salt; add a cupful of boiling cream just before serving.

HERRING SALAD A LA BREMOISE.—Peel and cut in small squares a quart of cold boiled potatoes, four peeled and cored sour raw apples, the fillets of four salted herrings, pickled cucumbers and two boiled beets. Add salt, pepper, chopped onion, vinegar, mustard and mayonnaise dressing. Mingle well, put in a salad bowl, garnish with a circle of pickled and sliced beets, besprinkle with chopped parsley and serve.—Felix Deliee.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 140 Power's Block, Rochester N. Y.

Smith's Tonic Syrup [illegible] FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated [illegible] justly claims for it a superiority over [illegible] edies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.
The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL [illegible]d SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.
These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:
1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.
By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.
Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.
For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

[illegible] delivered by Rev. H. Webb, Pro- [illegible] in Wiley University, [illegible] District Conference of Marshall [illegible] Texas Conference, March 29th, [illegible] by the unanimous request of [illegible]

I shall address myself par- [illegible] to my brethren in the [illegible] theme and lecture [illegible] as well to the laity as [illegible] our theme, that we [illegible] what we are talk- [illegible] This is first in all [illegible] understand the na- [illegible] of the subject. [illegible] comes from the Latin cultus, and means, "to [illegible];" culture means the [illegible] and preparing; when [illegible] the soil, means pre- [illegible] the soil for a crop; when [illegible] the heart, it is moral [illegible] the heart for a [illegible] to produce [illegible] &c; when applied [illegible] intellectual culture, [illegible] mind to produce [illegible] formed mature [illegible] the word Litera- [illegible] as defined in Web- [illegible] is synonymous [illegible] is derived from [illegible] or science, which [illegible] of birth, or [illegible] Hence, litera- [illegible] of letters, ac- [illegible] books, [illegible] rhetoric, [illegible]

[illegible] and the laws that govern the [illegible]. He must be a man of [illegible]. No one thinks of trusting his health, his life, to an ignorant quack; so in law, if we are in trouble, in danger of the law, or to be wronged, we seek the counsel of one learned in the law, that has applied himself to study, and is familiar with law principles, its regulations and application. This is right as it should be.

Now we come to ask: Are the souls of men equal in value with their bodies? Is it as important to our well being and happiness that our souls be healthy, that they be free from disease and pain in order to live? Is it necessary to protect the heart from wrong, to shield the soul from the attacks of our enemies? Is the soul exposed to death and ruin? If so, from what cause? Answer: From sin; and sin is the violation of law. Then there must be law. The law of soul health and life. Then if the soul has violated law, is sick, and exposed to death, is there any remedy? Yea! There is a plan of salvation, a redemptive scheme. Mark the words, plan and scheme. Plan means a project; the form of something to be done, existing in the mind, with the several parts adjusted in idea, expressed in words, or committed to writing. Scheme: a combination of things connected and adjusted by design; a system. Then this plan of salvation is a system of truths arranged in accordance with the law of soul-life. Now the soul diseased, crushed by sin, wounded by transgression, wronged by an arch-enemy, is to be treated, saved in accordance with this system of truth in keeping with the plan. Ministers are the teachers, the physicians to direct the afflicted dying soul in the application of the remedy. Can it be true that our Creator, in the plan and union of the different natures of our being, has carefully guarded by well defined laws our physical nature, making it necessary for us to study those laws and their effects, that we may have health and life, and left the higher nature of our souls to blind chance? Has handed over to unlettered, ignorant and careless teachers the instruction and care of the soul? No! The law of God is perfect, converting the soul, the testimony of the Lord is sure making wise the simple. More to be desired are they than gold, yea than much fine gold; and how many can say "sweeter than honey." I fear many of us think more of gold than law; more of collections than those testimonies that make wise the simple! The honey is in our pockets and not in our hearts and brains. Methodism was founded in wisdom and culture; culture and literature saved and sanctified to God. The Wesleys were men of broad literary culture. Clark, Watson, Benson, Fletcher, and many more of the Fathers, were men of fine culture. Asbury, Coke, Gee, and a host of the Fathers of American Methodism were men of culture, but they had sanctified hearts and were full of the Holy Ghost. Paul was the greatest of the Apostles! Greatest, because he was better educated. When his great learning was sanctified and set on fire of the Holy Ghost, it made kings tremble and say, "Much learning hath made thee mad!" Moses was a man of great learning. God kept him in school eighty years; forty years in the Egyptian schools, and forty in the school of Jethro; so he was fully qualified for the great work to which God called him. The disciples were three years with Jesus, receiving instruction, before they were ready for the great work of founding the Christian Church. Hence, they had culture, literary culture; and when the Holy Ghost fell on them, it had material to use. We often hear it said, "souls are perishing, and will be lost while I am getting ready." I must be in a hurry; but God could wait eighty years, while Israel was in great suffering, the people were perishing all the time; but he waited until he had an instrument prepared; [illegible] prepared that he did not [illegible] think, be- [illegible] going down to death, [illegible] The [illegible]

but to read with understanding. Read—read, and then think—think and read; live with books, dwell in them. This may be done on horseback, under a tree, in a cabin, or in a school, or begun in school and continued elsewhere. That books are to be read? The first book for the minister is the Bible. Learn to read the Bible so as to understand its meaning, and cause others to understand. Not only read but study. 2d. Read those books that explain the doctrines and teachings of the Bible. Methodist preachers must read the books written by good and wise men the of church. Only few men can write books, but all can read them. If poor and unable to buy books, or but few books—1st, buy a good reference Bible and concordance; 2d, a Hymn book; 3d, a Discipline. Read and study these, commit them to memory; then subscribe and pay for at least two of the church papers, and read them; keep posted. Read and mark the passages, and if not understood, be ready when the elder comes around and ask him; keep him busy with questions. Read for your people, read for the children, carry a book to read everywhere you go, read it and explain it. I have been asked, what use is mathematics, and such studies for a minister. I answer, all study gives mind vigor, and mathematics and kindred studies are of the best to give system and vigor to thought. What makes one man greater than another? Why is Bishop Bonner, or Simpson, and others greater than any of us. Many of you are larger men and make more noise, eat more bacon, and no doubt have as much religion. The difference is in intelligence, in mind, in culture. God cannot use idiots to carry on His work in this world. He cannot use with success careless ignorant men. When the Holy Ghost called you into the ministry, it called you to qualify yourselves to study to be teachers, and if you fail to do this you forfeit your right to preach, and are sinners against God and the church. Pray, study, preach, and God will bless you, and the people will hear you.

Marshall District Conference.

PARIS, Texas, Apr. 6, 1883.

The district conference of Marshall district, met at Marshall, in their house of worship, to hold its first session for 1883, March 28th, 1883; W. L. Molloy, P. E., in the chair, who opened the conference with reading and prayer. At the call of the roll several responded. On motion, myself and F. Parker, were nominated for secretaries. Then the several committes were appointed. Through the course of the conference sessions the following reports and resolutions were presented to the conference:

COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

Whereas, intemperance is the greatest evil of the land, causing more poverty, crimes and wickedness than any other influence, and stands more in the way of the success of the church, than all other evils; therefore,

Resolved, That we are in favor of legal prohibition and will labor to that end.

Resolved, That we request all pastors in our churches to see that the Discipline on this subject enforced, and all local preachers be silenced who in any way indulge in the use of intemperance.

JAS E. SHACKELFORD, Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

Regarding the religious development and culture of the race, second to no consideration, and believing no agency is so indispensable to symmetrical Christian development as the schools under the direction of the church, we, therefore, bespeak the sympathy and hearty co-operation of the people in behalf of the enterprises related to our conferences. We rejoice in the continued prosperity of Wiley University, and are gratified to know that we are to have additional room in the near future. We recognize the necessity of establishing high schools in various parts of the country which will reach many who are not able to attend college. A [illegible] support and recommend a canvass of the patronizing territory for their support, and heartily pledge to take a good collection in each of our charges some time in next May for the Paris school. We recommend to the trustees of the Wiley University to arrange the work of the professors that some of them may have time and opportunity to visit our charges and assist in awakening an interest among the people on the subject of education G. M. Knapp, H Webb, T. Moore, P. Morgan and F. Parker, committee.

COMMITTEE ON HOME MISSION.

Whereas, There are many places within the bounds of Marshall district where the people are without sufficient Gospel privileges. Your committee recommend that the places be supplied with local preachers as far as possible.

S. HORN, Chairman.

RESOLUTIONS.

By J. B. McCullough: Resolved, That we, the members of the Marshall district, do pledge ourselves to discourage festivals in our churches.

By Jas. E. Shackelford: Resolved, That we, the members of the Marshall district conference, request Prof. H. Webb to have his lecture, as delivered to us, published through the SOUTHWESTERN.

Resolved, That Rev. D. Gambell, also have his lecture published through the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Church requires socials as a means of promoting fellowship among its own members. This is especially so in towns, and where the membership is large. It may be of little consequence to that portion of the membership who are in easy circumstances and who have all the social affiliations they can maintain. Such persons are liable to lose ground spiritually, because their associations are so largely among those who are worldly and irreligious. But it should be remembered that fully one-half the membership of the church is composed of the laboring classes, men who are compelled to be at their business at seven in the morning, and women who have no domestic help and have very little time to give to society. These persons are not invited out, they go to no public entertainment whatever, and in fact seldom go anywhere in a social way, but to the prayer meeting. It is of [illegible]

Schrapnell.

Allow me space for a shell full of scraps. I have just returned from a short trip to the Ohio valley, and whilst there witnessed the devastation after the deluge, and saw on both banks of the Ohio piles of damaged corn. I was informed at Henderson, Ky., that that county alone had lost 250,000 bushels of corn. If such has been the loss in one county, what must have been the loss from the head waters of this beautiful river to its mouth at Cairo? From the time I heard of the great flood I could not shake off the conviction that God had dealt the strong hold of the whiskey power a peaceful blow, and would follow it with other strokes, unless the men of those beautiful valleys desisted from the crime of spoiling the grain he gives them, and the whole land so abundantly for food, for they are largely the corn merchants for the South.

Allow me to say through your paper, which goes up "the great river" and its tributaries, that if "the crime of Sodom was fullness of bread," and its judgment fire, the crime of those beautiful American valleys, which God clothes annually with the richest green, and fills with golden grain, is made known to Him through the prayers of millions which go up from the crushed hearts of old and young, who are the sufferers under the heartless tyranny of the whiskey power, it is the least that can be expected that an unexpected deluge should sometimes come.

I spent a portion of two weeks in Jeffersonville, Ind., my old home, and had the pleasure of meeting the able pastor of old Wall street Church, Rev. G. L. Curtis, and hearing him preach. It is now about twenty-five or six years since he offered himself to the Conference for admission: I was the friend of schools and school men in those days, and my recollection is there was some resistance made to his going into college life whilst yet a member of conference; but he went into it, and now that the ripeness of growing years crown his life, neither he nor his friends can regret the step taken, for he shows the culture in the fruitage.

Whilst not the friend of the seminary imprint for all our men, and utterly opposed to the seminary mill grinding out uncalled ministers, yet where a man is clearly called, as in this case, our schools should be placed at his service and all needed aid rendered.

I shipped at Louisville for southern Illinois on the R. R. Springer, a Cincinnati and New Orleans packet, of fine proportions finish and equipments, commanded by Capt. H. U. Hart, whose clerk, J. S. Jones, Esq., with the whole band of gentlemenly officers, labored to make the trip agreeable to all their passengers. In seeing and hearing I had but one regret, and I know the mates will pardon the reference. From time to time the passengers were startled by fearful and strange oaths, used in directing the deckhands, and urging them to duty. Is this necessary, or are oaths the official language of that class of officers? I could not but think: It is well that God in His mercy shuts His ears against such prayers, or fire and flood and general destruction of the beautiful craft and all on board would be the result.

Nor can I think that that style of governing a crew is the right form, as I had evidence on that boat. The chief steward had a large band of men under him, cooks and waiters; the whole band moved with the regularity of clock work, no noise, no bustle, but few words uttered, and those in an undertone. I could not but compliment him on the perfection of his drill; it would have graced a dinner at the London Mansion House. My friends of the Springer will please put this and that together, and by reform on the lower deck give the noble mercantile marine of the western waters a shining example.

But the men of river life are not the only offenders against the third commandment: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless who taketh His name [illegible] is not only immoral, but it destroys the power and sacredness of the oath that binds the conscience in courts of justice, but alas these men too often bandy the oath as a jest as well as in anger, whilst grand jurors never think of this offence against the law of the land, so because of swearing the land mourneth. Nor are we as ministers free from the charge of remissness in bearing testimony against this great evil.

On board the Springer we found a delightful company, Rev. H. J. Talbot, of Meridian St. Church, Indianapolis, Indiana Coference was on board with his family and a few friends seeking rest for a few days in the southern climate; it gave me a chance to ask the state of many old friends I have not seen for over twenty years. I parted with this agreeable company at a small river town called Cave in Rock on the Illinois shore.

There is little to attract the stranger to this town, except its really romantic position amongst the little hills, which here line the northern bank of the river, and the great rock wall that rises perpendicular for 50 feet out of the river, running eastward as the northern bank for a mile. In the western end of this wall or ridge, is located the little cave that gives name to the place, and of which there are many fabulous legends, connected with the wild Indian and border times of the dim past; for thirty years the lands around it have been the property of my brother and your correspondent. Several of the officers and E. A. Conner, Esq., of the firm of Josce, Biglow & Co., of Metropolis, called my attention to the great daubs of oil paint, wherewith advertising agents were covering the hundreds of names that for several generations, the pleasure seekers are the Ohio, have traced with brush and chisel on those rocks around the mouth of the cave, claiming that kind of thing should be forbidden in some legal form.

I told them I feared there was no remedy—that I respected the sentiment of the living and the dead who had traced their names there, and wished they could be preserved, but regretted to know that this material age respected not the aged or the ancient, for if the road of commerce and gain lay along by the Pyramids of Egypt, or the monuments of Thebes, covered with hieroglyphics that tell the history of four thousand years, the whole would be blotched over with ugly daubs of "St. Jacobs Oil" or other quack remedies, and the last patent invention for killing flies. But for the sake of those who called attention to the matter, I requested my friends at Cave in Rock, to forbid any further use of the advertisers brush on the western end of the wall; let them go eastward. That cave has a war history I may name some future time.

Public Education in Kentucky.

An Educational Convention is to be held in Frankfort for the purpose of securing a more efficient public school system than the present one, which was established by the legislative act of Feb. 16, 1838, with a financial foundation of $850,000, increase in 1848 to 1,225,738 22 and in 1850 to $1,326,770 01. The school tax is 22 cents on the $100, and provision is made for an optional district tax of 25 cents on the $100 in ordinary districts, and 30 cents in graded school districts. It is proposed to make the machinery of common school education more effective and effusive. The defects of the present system are, in part, as follows: The Sheriffs are too tardy in the collection of the school tax; the teachers are poorly paid, and many of them are poorly qualified; the law does not absolutely require a common school to be taught during five months in the year in any district; the people are woefully indifferent in two-thirds of the counties of the State to the importance of common schools; there is a painful lack of normal school instruction; the School Commissioners are in a majority of cases, not qualified to hold these important positions; the State per capita is always an uncertain and variable quantity; the school-houses are [illegible] in a poor condition; there [illegible] districts without any kind [illegible] school [illegible] changed too often and cost too much; the schools do not get all the revenue to which they are legitimately entitled, as from the tax on railroads and turnpikes now diverted; no efforts have been made to secure new sources of revenue. The Frankfort convention must grapple with these defects. The foundations of the school system have been laid 45 years; the building has been slowly rising. The bad bricks must come out of the wall; the whole people of Kentucky must be put to work on these walls with a will.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Self-Conceit Taken Down.

The judgment of the wise on loquacious persons may be expressed in the proverb, "A fool's voice is known by the multitude of his words." Dryden characterized this class as those

"Who think too little, and who talk too much."

As a rule, volubility of speech does not go hand-in-hand with affluence of thought; and yet Rufus Choate was as affluent as he was voluble in speech.

"Don't let Brother Choate get hold of a copy," said Chief-Justice Shaw, when some one told him that Worcester was about publishing a new dictionary. But the Chief-Justice always listened with pleasure to Choate's legal arguments.

Still it is generally true, as Matthew Prior says,—

"They never taste who always drink;
They always talk who never think."

Judge Lucas, of St. Louis, once impressed this idea upon a pompous young lawyer in a way more forcible than elegant.

The young man, noted for self-conceit rather than for legal learning, made a spread eagle-speech to a jury. The next day he met Judge Lucas, who had presided at the trial, and thus addressed him:

"Good morning, Judge. What did you think of my little effort yesterday."

"Ah, you are the young gentleman who addressed a jury in my court! Yes,—yes. Well, sir, your speech reminded me of a little yellow dog I have at home. When he wants to lie down he makes a circle, and around and around he goes half-a-dozen times or more, and then down at the very place he started from."

And the judge turned on his heel with a "Good-morning, sir."

Hampering Voters in North Carolina.

We learn that the Legislature of this State has passed an act which requires the legal voters in the city of Wilmington, before they can be allowed to deposit their votes at an election held in the city, to state on oath the number of the lot or part of the lot on which they reside, and also the number of the block on which the lot is situated. It is to be remembered that the lots or blocks in Wilmington are not designated by any numbers so as to distinguish one lot or one block from any other lot or block, so that a person by any inspection of his premises can for himself determine the number of the lot or block upon which he resides. It is true these lots and blocks are numbered and designated on a plan of the city of Wilmington, and that plan is in the City Hall, and may, by leave of the city officials, be inspected by any citizen, but it is well known that there are many legal voters in this city who could not by an inspection of the plan of the city be able to ascertain the number of the lot upon which they reside. This fact was well known to the artful dodgers who promoted this action on the part of the Legislature, and their avowed purpose was to exclude that large class of our fellow citizens from enjoying the right of suffrage secured to them by the Constitution. It is too plain why Wilmington has been singled out for this oppression. There is in this city a large majority of Republicans, and many of them are colored men; and the Bourbons are determined to deprive them of the elective franchise, Constitution or no Constitution, fas aut ne fas.—Wilmington (N. C.) Post, March 4.

In 1769 Wesley received a pressing call from brethren in New York who had built a preaching house." Richard Boardman and Joseph Pillmoor were found "willing to go.' Wesley's "works" allude to the great Northampton revival in New England, and to "that burning and shining light Johnathan Edwards," who is identified by our earliest historian as the divine agent to do for the new world what the Wesleys and others were doing for the old. The grand march of the two agencies in the two worlds may not be recorded in this brief space. Methodism, a band of true believers to whom the pure Word is preached and the sacraments are duly administered, thanks God for every agency that leads men to Christ. "Thrust out" from the mother bosom, the body has organized and labored and prayed and used money, until the latest statistics, most of the figures being those for 1882, are for the world as follows, according to our "Year Book:"

The first group (Episcopal Methodists in United States) has a total of 31,823 "local" preachers (laymen authorized to preach); the second group, 1,629; the third group, 2,056; the fourth group, 47,110; the fifth, 6,375. The total number of local preachers, 88,993, constitutes a non-itinerant body of ministers, the value of whose services it is not easy to estimate. We estimate the total of the world's "Methodist population" at about twenty millions.

Of the Methodist Episcopal church proper, which is the mother of all the branches in America, I may add more especially as to working details, our present eleven bishops have jurisdiction universal by discipline, but annual by personal adjustment, over 113 annual conferences. In these bodies, and by advice of from three to eight presiding elders in each, the bishops make pastoral assignment of about 12,000 pastors. We habitually say that by our system all of the 12,000 pastors have churches, and all of the churches have pastors. The latter are appointed freshly each year, but by the rule no pastor can be appointed more than three times successively to the same church. These 113 annual conferences "administer Methodist law. The law is made by the General conference, which is composed of delegates from the annual conferences, and which meets in May once in four years. (The next session is in 1884.) The bishops preside in the general and annual conferences. They decide questions of law in the latter conferences, subject to appeal in the former. They are held as mere officers; are in "order" elders but as primi inter pares are "bishops" in function for the sake of church order.

Our church missionary work is carried on by one working body made up of the bishops and a "general committee." The last table of appropriations show $362,[illegible] for foreign missions; $57,100 [illegible] in the United States [illegible] as foreign missions; [illegible]

[illegible] scholars, 272 churches worth $1,069,000, with 852 other places for worship and 203 "homes." Besides this is our Woman's Foreign Missionary society, which has 42 missionaries, 350 Bible women, 6 hospitals, 16 boarding-schools, 140 day schools, 3 orphanages, and 400 orphans in charge thereof. The society appropriated and will raise $130,852 for 1882-3, and has given to its cause $699,000 from 1860 to 1880 inclusive.

In the publishing department the New York Concern has net capital $1,062,361, and the Western Concern $355,487. The former's profits last year were $69,065, and the latter's, $25,466, a total of $94,531. Last year New York sold books to the value of $636,648, and periodicals, $216,071. The West sold books, $389,820, and periodicals, $324,200, a total of $5,266,739. The profits in forty-five years have been $2,632,420. This money is expended by order of the governing body of the church, and has aided church work mightily. The church proper has sixty-two periodicals and the book catalogue contains about 3,000 titles, besides about 1,000 tracts. The total sales for thirty-six years past reached $30,845,711, and last year 183,004,110 pages were printed.

The Sunday-school work is prosperous. The 20,894 schools have 224,000 teachers and 1,609,000 scholars. For the four years ending in 1880, 353,000 conversions were reported, and for the twelve years then ending, 815 000. The church gave last year $74,000 for the work, though the above figures respecting publishing affairs include much Sunday-school work. Church Extension has its board, secretaries and plans. The board was formed in 1864, has helped 3,800 churches, of which 7,935 in all have been built since 1864. The Loan fund has $500,000, and proposes $1,000,000 to be loaned without interest. In seventeen years the board has disbursed $1,937, 000. Among the Freedmen the Aid society has in fifteen years expended $1,105,012; has invested $350,000 in school property; has 25 institutions and 3,506 pupils. It is ascertained that these schools have taught 68,000 pupils, who in turn have taught 500,000 others. The work has been extended to the whites, and since 1880 fourteen schools have been opened. Some of the Tract society statistics appear in the figures concerning the Book Concern. Other agencies are represented in the Education board, which proposes to aid the young to secure education. The recent report shows that nine-tenths of the beneficiaries are grown-up Sunday-school scholars. The Woman's Home Missionary society is newly organized to aid negro, Indian, Mormon, Chinese and frontiers' woman. Its work demands, as it will receive, full sympathy and aid from the church.

The church has 8 theological seminaries with 40 teachers, 400 students last year, and 2,316 students from the beginning; colleges and universities 38, professors 503, students 10,210; classical seminaries 33, teachers 275, students 6,836; female colleges 11, teachers 131, students 1,390; a total of 90 schools, 949 teachers, and 18,336 students.

The aim of the church has always been "to spread scriptural holiness" through the world, which Wesley said is "my parish." While the church organizes, solidifies and endows its agencies, her first thought is "evangelizing." The original separation from mother church is defended from charge of schism on that ground. When that ground is abandoned, the original charge revives and becomes established. With the original issue in mind we thank God for the measure of sanction there is in success. The Methodist movement is yet in its infancy. We believe we are, under God, succeeding; to illustrate which I have chosen this method of representing our branch of the church militant. May God give all the churches an hundred fold more of power and success.

MARSHALL, Texas, April 20, 1882.

BRO. CUSHMAN—I want to be a witness for Jesus, and not only give my testimony in the pulpit but through our friend, the ADVOCATE, to the friends of Zion. Jesus is faithful to hear prayer, but if our prayers are heard they must come from an honest heart. Here is the secret of the failure of so many prayers. Thousands of prayers are offered, and the things prayed for are not wanted by the persons offering the prayer.

They would have to give up something they love more than Jesus, and for this reason I say they do not want their prayers answered, for they know their sins must be given up. A few things are necessary to constitute real prayer. First all sin must be given up. Jesus will never hear prayer while there is one sin cherished and idolized in the heart. We may as well conclude now and settle it in our minds, that our religion is vain and will fail us in the hour of death, unless we make the entire, complete and perfect consecration to Christ and let every sin go. How often do you hear men and women praying for clean hearts, and at the same time they are holding on to some cherished sin and would as soon die as give them up. Secondly, we must have faith, hold on to faith. Let your faith fail not. Wait on the Lord, cling to him, die rather than fail. Just as sure as we give up our sins and cling to Jesus, if what we ask ought to be given, it will come. I know that Jesus answers prayer, a thousand times in my Christian life He has answered my prayer, and delivered me when I thought all was lost. Let me not forget that mother that gave me life, and father, wife and child, but let me not forget that Jesus is faithful and will hear the prayers of His people if they come from clean hearts. Brethren of the ministry if you want power, success, and souls converted and the church built up under your ministry, spend hours and days in your closet. Wait on the Lord until He comes. Our district conference at this place was a success, good work was done, many old cases that has been hanging on for years were disposed of, and fear fell on all, for the conference declared its purpose to make the way of the transgressor hard, if that transgressor was a member of the conference. Now and then we discovered one trying to hide or cover from the Elder and conference but most of them said let it come. The Pastors on the Marshall district with few exceptions, are good men doing all they can for their Master (Jesus,) and we are looking for a general revival. Pray for us. Wiley University has more students now than it ever had at this time of the year.

Your brother,
W. L. MOLLOY.

Notes From Nashville.

DEAR BRO. CUSHMAN:—The school is closing well. The year has been one of unusual events. We have had the small-pox in the city the whole year. It has made two or three outbreaks, when it would suddenly appear in several parts of the city at once, then seem to die out and the city be comparatively free from it, when it would appear again. Just now it appears to be passing off; may it be for the last time. The health has been good among the students, and no general sickness in the school this year; the death, of a student who recently came from Mississippi, Mr. Miles Warren, who was here less than three weeks. He was taken suddenly and severely with cerebro-spinal meningitis, and lived only four days. He was here less than two weeks. He was formerly a student in Rust University, at Holly Springs, and came here to pursue the course in Meharry medical department. He was a member of the Baptist church, and though here for a short time, impressed us with the earnestness of his intention to fit himself for a [illegible] of usefulness. Will be glad to have you at our Institute and closing exercises. J. B.

From our Board of Education.

The favor and, indeed, the enthusiasm with which our circular shave been received in all parts of the land encourages high hopes in reference to the coming Children's Day. It is every-where seen at a glance that a new element of great moral beauty is added to the observance by the plan of combining uniformity of service with simultaneousness. Such results on a large scale can only be attained in a connectional. Church, and rarely if ever before have they been found attainable on a scale of such magnitude and promise.

In advance, it was feared by some that a desire on the part of many to have exercises different from those of all others would greatly embarrass the hope of practical uniformity. The result is proving that the spirit of unity and brotherly co-operation is in the ascendant. Few fail to appreciate the peculiar interest that will focalize in a scene in which the hearts and voices of nearly two millions of children and youth, with uncounted hosts of parents and friends, will blend in the use of common selections of Scripture and of hymns and music specially prepared for the occasion, together with a grand and common lesson of instruction about Christian education and the way to attain it through the schools of the Church. Such a scene, adorned as it will be with the floral riches of June, and made jubilant with youthful hopes, will in itself be an educational process of incalculable value. Moreover, if successful this year, it will lead on to greater heights of success hereafter.

We have been rather agreeably surprised at the number of requests already received for the immediate forwarding of the Orders of Service and the Letter to the Children, based on a wish to commence timely and thorough preparations for the Red-Letter day of the year. Previously to hearing from so many of our friends in various directions, we had feared to send out the helps too soon, lest they should be lost or wasted. But, relying on the interest and prudence of pastors and superintendents, we have now decided to send forward the documents as fast as practicable after the orders are received in proper form. At this point, we must caution all to use the gratuitous order-sheet furnished them for that purpose. We cannot promise to honor requests mingled with business correspondence, written on postal-cards, or lacking the proper data in any particular. Such a task as we have entered upon was never undertaken before, and we can only hope to carry it out to a successful completion by a rigid adherence to the systematic methods proposed. Address Rev. D. P. Kidder 805 Broadway, New York.

The Minutes of the fall Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church have just been issued. The vast region in equatorial Africa, hitherto supposed to be populated by a strange race of dwarfs, and thus accounted for by geographers, undergoes a radical transformation in the accounts of the German explorers, Pogge and Wissman, just published. Instead of an arid region inhabited by pigmies, the travelers found a fertile country, ruled over by an intelligent sovereign, and peopled by a tall, handsome race, who excel in agriculture and various kinds of manufactures. No foreign influence has yet reached them, and they live in Arcadian tranquility and prosperity. Their villages are described as places where in clean, roomy dwellings, with gardens neatly hedged in and forming streets as straight as an arrow, the inhabitants live as members of one family, in perfect friendship and peace. Travelers have been conducted to the borders of this Utopia, but have not been permitted to enter, and no trade with the outside world is carried on. The climate though warm, is salubrious. Lieutenant Wissman is of opinion that the new-found region constitutes the garden spot of Africa, and that the tribes occupying it will prove more easily amenable to civilization than any yet encounted. Evidently the myth of the vicious and murderous dwarfs must be relegated to a place with those of Lilliput and the Brobdignagians.—Interior.

Our correspondent who writes of the President's trip remarks the striking change in the style of buildings noticed after leaving Georgia, going South, the New England type coming in and the peculiar Southern type disappearing. This is one of a class of facts reported by all observers, and with increasing frequency. The charms and advantages of the extreme Southern Atlantic sea-board for those who suffer from the rigors of a Northern climate have drawn the attention of Northern capitalists in that direction, and the migration of Northern men has set in there more rapidly than in any other part of the South. But this is only an example of a process that will steadily go on. It is one of the compensations for the terrible losses of the civil war on both sides that the triumph of the Union cause has opened up a vast region to occupation by energy, thrift, and industry, which had before been practically more inaccessible than many a foreign country.—*N. Prof. W. T. Welcker, California's State Superintendent of Instruction, rules that the children of Chinese cannot be admitted to the public schools of that Sate, as they are not eligible to become citizens, and "the whole drift" of one specified article of the State Constitution "is unmistakably hostile to the Chinese coming into the State or remaining in the State under any condition whatever. To admit Mongolian children to the schools," he continues, "would, therefore, be in direct disobedience to the Constitution, for it would be to foster their presence here in the most efficacious manner, while the Constitution declares that presence 'to be dangerous to the well-being of the State,' and would directly and enormously encourage their immigration, while the Constitution commands the Legislature to discourage 'by all means within its power.'"

The proprietors of Fowler Bros. packing house in Kansas City, Mo., have issued the following notification to their workmen: "Having suffered great trouble and annoyance in consequence of some of our employes injuring themselves by the use of alcoholic liquors, thereby causing distress and suffering in their families and defrauding their wives and children of the comforts of home, we hereby give notice that any of our employes who are seen hanging around drinking saloons or gambling houses, whether during working hours or at any other time, or are known to use alcoholic liquors or other intoxicating beverages in any form or degree, shall be immediately discharged by us without notice." A Shawl his Winding Sheet.

A touching incident is related of Prof. Cocker, of Michigan University. Shortly before his death he called the attention of his Pastor to a worn and faded shawl spread on his bed, and requested to have it wrapped around his body and buried with him. He had made it himself when a young man in England; had worn it in all his journeyings to and fro from over the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; when residing in Australia; when he escaped from the Feejee Islanders as they were preparing to kill and eat him, and when he was shipwrecked. It accompanied him when he landed in the United States, and even clad the remains of his dead child when, penniless and disheartened, he first arrived in Adrian. No wonder he desired it should enshroud his inanimate body and accompany him into the quiet grave. His wish was gratified.—Bay City (Mich.) Tribune.

The colored people of this country have never had a better spokesman or adviser than Fred Douglass. In his speech on Emancipation Day, at Washington last week, he said, among other things: "Assimilation, not isolation, is our true policy and natural destiny. Unification for us is life; separation is death. We cannot afford to set up for ourselves a separate political party, or adopt for ourselves a political creed apart from the rest of our fellow citizens." This is the course that the colored people have been traveling since they were made citizens, and it is the only one that will enable them to play their full part in National progress.—Inter-Ocean.

In avoiding idle words, our Savior does not mean that we shall always talk about religion, but that our motive in all we say shall be to use the wondrous faculty of vocal expression which he has given us for his glory. He did not mean that we should be gloomy, reserved, uncommunicative, afraid to open our lips, lest we should say something wrong, but that the intention of our lives should be by our words to please Him and advance His kingdom.

We state positively that most of the cooks in the South to-day are ignorant of the elementary principles of the culinary art, and that they are either too stubborn or too stupid to be instructed. A practical branch of cookery taught by an expert would be a valuable addition to our public school system. If at the next General Conference caste churches and schools should be approved, and the name changed from "Freedman's Aid Society" to "General Educational Society," Dr. Rust and the Society he represents could with better grace assist in the erection of a university from which the freedmen are to be excluded; but now it would be consummate hypocrisy to appeal mainly to public sympathy for the freedmen for the means to establish one for whites only. This is the dictate of common honesty, and the black membership of one church in the South are keenly ative and in accord with this view of the subject.

At Peace.

Among sane people capable of attending to the ordinary business affairs of life a certain sort of folly should have no place. Common sense, as well as Christian charity, will make a large allowance for the waves of passion that sometimes sweep over the community. We long to see the time when Christian men and women will hear the voice of the Lord Jesus, "Peace, be still." A correspondent of the SOUTHWESTERN thinks "that the members of the M. E. Church in Alabama, Georgia, and East Tennessee should subscribe for this most excellent paper." We agree with him. This statement of our correspondent disturbs our much beloved Bro. Carter of the Methodist Advocate, and he proceeds to read us a homily, which of course we accept, with certain exceptions. At the same time he tells us "there are thousands who are certain that the Methodist Advocate, now published in Chattanooga, from the same type and material, with the same name and appearance, in the same shape and size as the Atlanta Advocate, is the paper for this territory." The phrase "the same appearance" is to us mournfully suggestive. The Atlanta Advocate was the advocate of caste churches and caste schools, and died the death. We had earnestly hoped that the Advocate, now published at Chattanooga, would avoid that fatal rock, but it seems that we are to be badly disappointed; just as Bro. Carter says, it has "the same appearance."

The argument of the editor to make it appear that the publishing of the Chattanooga Advocate is not a personal and private enterprise is weak and sickly, illogical, and disjointed, and like a dry toad stool falls in pieces at the first touch.

A word as to the position of the SOUTHWESTERN. It is not belligerent" or "antagonistic," it is not "uncharitable," and will have no "words of war," sow no seeds of "discord in our own ranks." Its loyalty to God and the church, its devotion to truth has never been questioned. It believes in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, that in Christ we are one; so it has never apologized for or defended the caste of sin, and so long as the writer sustains his present relation to the paper it never will. To it, of all monstrous and unchristian things, nothing is more hateful to God than the erection of churches and schools from which any race is excluded.

It is published by the church, and for the church, and is the only paper south of the Ohio that is. Its price is $2 a year, and that is as cheap as it can be published with its present circulation, and if our people prefer it to the Methodist Advocate (and there are thousands who do), which is but $1.50 a year, it is not our fault; it must be because they think it a cheaper and a better paper. We shall do the best we can to make the SOUTHWESTERN a light and a joy in the homes of our people.

And now, Bro. Carter, we are ready to shake hands over this bloodless chasm. "We are brethren." The only rivalry there can be between the Methodist Advocate and the SOUTHWESTERN is which can [illegible] love and best work."

Temperance Work in New Orleans.

The temperance crusade inaugurated a few weeks ago by the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting continues with unabated fervor. They [illegible] themselves [illegible]

[illegible] exposed and left untouched. No element of compromise enters in [illegible] against rum. The weapons used are made of terrible facts and fearful figures baptized in blood, wet with tears, and electrified with the moaning cries of helpless innocence. Meetings continue to be hold weekly in different churches, and all who sign the pledge are immediately organized into a society to prosecute the work begun by the Preachers' Meeting.

First Street Church now has 122 active workers handed in a society all determined to do their part; Sixth Street Church has 124 equally as active and determined. Mt. Zion has 22, a comparatively small but active body. Last night the meeting was held at Pleasant plains, instead of last week, as erroneously reported in our last issue. The meeting held at Mount Zion was presided over by Rev. Dr. Dean, President of New Orleans University, and was opened by Rev. J. G. Vaughan, Pastor of Ames Church. Stirring addresses were delivered by Rev. R. L. Beal, A. E. P. Albert, and Dr. Dean, after which 22 were rercuited into the temperance army. These efforts are to be followed with tracts, papers, etc., and all the homes that can be reached flooded with temperance documents. Who will help in this movement? Let the good work go on! The Church has all to gain and nothing to lose in saving men from drink.

Manufacturing in the East and South.

A recent issue of the New-York Sun, contains a significant article, wherein it seeks to show that the supremacy of the New England cotton manufacture is about to be overthrown by the emancipation, as one of its results. It says:

We are far from being through with the evil effects of slavery; indeed, in our opinion we are just about to realize that the abolition of that system is going to affect us in various ways that our statesmen did not foresee.

It claims, that with the advantages of the cotton fields adjoining the cotton manufactories, with the immense uninterrupted water power available all over the South, and the cheap labor offered by the poor Southern whites who were degraded by competition with slave labor before the war; with such advantages in favor of the South, operating directly against the East, the Sun "foresees the time when New England cotton fabric will speedily be driven from the Southern and Western markets."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat takes another view:

Those who predict confidently that the West and South are about to wrest from New England the leadership in manufacturing, will do well to remember that the degree of industrial development in any community does not depend wholly on the comparative cheapness of raw material. Brains tell. New England, with the brains for labor-saving appliances and small economies which its people have always possessed, can beat either Old England or Georgia with them. It can certainly stand the competition in cotton manufactures of any community which does not know the difference between a "nickel" and a cent. The industrial supremacy of New England is due quite as much to the intelligence and the genius of its people as to the tariff or any other external force. There is a great deal of talk in the East just now about industrial schools and technical education. If these words result in deeds—as words are apt to among the descendants of the Puritans—the South will not close up the New England cotton mills for some time to come.

The New York Advocate makes this timely suggestion: "Beware of unworthy "Evangelists," "Temperance Lecturers," "Reformed men" of all sorts, who want to tell "The Story of My Life," and give you half the proceeds. The country is flooded with them. Certain women, also, some most plausible, need to be shunned. It is the collection they are after. Take time to investigate—not merely read—their credentials. If the time is short, telegraph. If there be a doubt, give the Church of Christ, and not the unknown applicant for your influence, the benefit of it. When you have been imposed on, expose the imposter. By so doing you enhance the value of a good reputation to those who possess it. We hear every week of new cases of deception, and the old stock frauds which we have exposed from time to time are still making [illegible] of the credulous and the

The imposing and pignified appearance of the procession elicited praise on all sides. After the procession, the oration of the evening was delivered by the Hon. Frederick Douglass. —Rev. M. Dale, presiding elder of the North New Orleans district, is busily engaged on his work, and is cheerful over the outlook. He was in a pirogue recently, when a storm came up and roughened the waters, and the experience was not enjoyable for a time.

—Rev. Pierro Landry, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge district, is deeply interested in the plans of the new church about to be erected in Baton Rouge. H. called this week and is now in the upper part of his district. He thinks that "a church at every available point, and a school in every church," is a good plan of action.

Official notice of this high honor was received by Dr. Hendrix some ten days ago.—St. Louis Advocate, Church South.

—The sudden loss of three such men as Newhall, Cocker and Bannister in the short space of ten days has no parallel in the history of Methodism in this country or abroad. The last on the list was the oldest, only a few months ago attaining to three score and ten years; and he accomplished his life work so well that his influence will remain as a definite force with the generation of young men whom he helped to train for God's service. Dr. Cocker was the most widely known, and his reputation as a Christian scholar will be long perpetuated in the admirable volumes which he wrote in defense of Christianity—for this is the proper interpretation to put upon them. The youngest of the three, Newhall, bid fair in his early days to become one of the very foremost men of the Church and was realizing the sanguine prophecies of his friends when the blight of disease fell upon him and clouded his brilliant genius. God's work is not put in peril by their departure, and they have entered on a better inheritance. And men who shall be chosen to stand in their places will not fail us, but still it is impossible not to feel their loss.—Central.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

The outlook for Mount Zion was never more hopeful. The congregations are good, regular, attentive and increasing. The Sunday-school is large and doing well. At the last quarterly conference the reports were in perfect order. Thus far during the year full two hundred dollars have been raised for various church purposes. The religious interest among the people is good. As some of the results of a recent revival 14 were converted to God, 20 received on probation, and 10 into full membership. No pastor is more respected by his people than Brother Marshall; he is fasting, praying, believing, preaching, and working for great things. The church has need of such men; would that they could be multiplied a hundred fold.

Simon Evans, Centreville: "The members received me kindly. Four have been taken into the church on probation, and one convert; the old indebtedness of nine years has been removed. A committee of ladies gave a grand fair, and $40 was raised for ceiling the church. Mrs. Agnes Nedan was the lady president, and Sarah Osborn, secretary. The Sunday-schoot is in healthy condition.

John Franklin, Simsport: "I am now in good cheer again. The water has gone back; my people are in good courage, and looking brightly to the future."

A grand bazar will begin at Mount Zion M. E. Church on Jackson street, near Seventh, Monday evening, May 7th, and continue to Saturday, the 12th, for the purpose of raising means for the completion of the church. The affair will be made lively by the young people, who will furnish music each night, and on Thursday night (the 10th inst.) will crown a May Queen.

MISSISSIPPI.

R. H. Patton, Paulding: "Our Sunday schools are growing, and need books."

Sister M. A. Johnson writes that the church at Forest shows a better financial condition than for two years pass.

W. H. Mims. Jackson: "Elder Williams was with me April 14th. We had a grand time. He met us full of the Holy Ghost and preached a lovely sermon at 11 a. m.; at 3 p. m. he conducted an old-fashioned love feast. Collection $8.85. This is my first year on this circuit. The members and friends received me with open hands and glad hearts."

The Enterprise, of Holly Springs, says Washington's birthday was duly observed by the students of Rust University, and before and after the exercises young men and women planted about 150 trees upon the campus.

[illegible] Murfreesboro: "I [illegible] protracted meeting in March. We had a glorious revival, resulting in 61 conversions and 39 additions to the church. The greater number of converts were Sunday school scholars. The church is in a [illegible] essive state, spiritually and financially. Elder [illegible] held our second conference. He is energetic, and wants the work to move forward. We expect to be able to go into the upper part of our church by the first of July. I have organized a Young Men's Christian Association, which will benefit the young people. I held quarterly conference for Rev. O. Green, and it was a grand meeting. Collection, $10."

ARKANSAS.

"In Little Rock Presbyterianism is in the ascendant, Southern Methodism perhaps ranking second in influence. The Northern Methodist Church has lately been looming up conspicuously, owing, probably, to the fact of its having located a university in the city, and concentrated a good deal of talent and money."—J. Brown in Nashville Advocate.

TEXAS.

H. Webb, Wiley University, Marshall: "Our school is larger than it has ever been in the spring term. We are taxed beyond our strength. I am teaching nine classes every day, and much of the time ten; this, with all the other duties, leaves no time for outside work. We must have more help or lower our standard. I love the work, and am happy in it. My heart is burdened for this people. I have only lost one day from the class-room this year. One day I was unable to talk from sore throat. The brethren of my former conference are beseeching me to return to them and the pastorate. This position pays me $700; the pulpit from $800 to $1200, with many privileges not in this work, but I am inclined to remain, this work is so vast and so few in it."

NORTH CAROLINA.

Raleigh, N. C., should doubly be the cynosure of Methodist Episcopal eyes. First. It is believed to be the only State capital wherein we have no church building. Re-established in the State for fifteen years, and having gathered 7,700 probationers and members from "among the lowly," our church is at great disadvantage and loss in having no church home in the capital city, doubled in population within the decade and the second city in a State much larger than New York. While many members on moving thither have joined other churches, and while more have rejoined the world, the few loyal ones, unable to raise $15 a Sunday for the only available hall, have resolved to build. Every nerve has been strained and every stone turned with the following results: A fine lot is ours three blocks from the capital, thanks to Bishop Warren's energy and skill. The Church Extension Board has appropriated, on conditions, as much as it ought considering the demands on its treasury in Western frontier work. After subscriptions and personal appeals there is still needed the sum of $400, in order to close a contract with builders for a good church on a Church Extension plan. We can avail ourselves of the offer until June 1. Dr. J. M. Buckley, fully acquainted with the ground, in the Christian Advocate of March 22, says: "Our Society here is engaged in an effort to erect a much-needed church edifice. The members are few and poor, and cannot succed without assistance. Second. Raleigh is a sacred place in Methodist eyes as the last pastorate of Rev. Melville Cox, our first foreign missionary, and that to the land of the African slave, who ordered as his epitaph, "Let a thousand fall before Africa is given up." The church to be built will contain a tablet to his memory and will be called the "Cox Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church."—Only $400 are needed to bring all this to pass. Let all friends of Cox, of Africa, of Missions, of Methodism, of justice, send money at once. Suggest a prayer-meeting collection. Club with some neighbor to send $5, and that right early, as the money must and will be paid at that date. Address Wilbur F. Steele, Bennett Seminary, Greensboro, N. C.

It is the crushed grape that gives out the blood red wine. It is the [illegible] that breathes the [illegible] here below.

[illegible] sure of bread next week [illegible] they work hard this; they [illegible] near the borders of pauperism [illegible] be very confident as to the future. Illiteracy and free trade in whisky and other intoxicants is the great bane. There is only one remedy—compulsory education and prohibition of the liquor traffic. Willingly or unwillingly the sooner the people of the South put these into the constitution of each State, and back them up with the enactment and enforcement of practical laws the better. Personally we would be gratified to have these questions so brought before the people that in every neighborhood and in every State there would be an occasion for a thorough discussion of them. This is just what is needed in Louisiana. The friends of universal education and prohibition have nothing to fear or dread in the fact of frequent discussion. It would afford us great satisfaction to have these questions discussed and voted upon in every recurring campaign. We know that all that is needed is facts. Bring these out, get them before the people and we can multiply votes by the thousand, and if not at once, in the course of a few years we would have a schoolhouse on every plantation, and the liquor traffic banished from the State.

How this pen wanders! Our church in Morgan City has for its recording steward a lady, and thus far on the district we have not listened to a better steward's report than she presented. The report of the classes was as follows: No. 1, 12 members, collection $8.30; No. 2, 11 members, collection $7.50; No. 3, 11 members, collection $6.65; This church has its district steward, a lady, who paid the presiding elder his quarterage at the close of the conference. Here, without any thought of making a practical application, I desire to state for the benefit of my ministerial brethren, that one of the most efficient class leaders on the district is a lady; the recording steward who presented the model report is a lady; the second district steward, who paid the presiding elder his quarterage at the close of the conference, is a lady.

A man is a man, but one man is not worth half so much either to the State or church as another. The members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Centerville have always had men for their pastors; each man has done his work as best he could, and made his own record. At our last conference Bishop Hurst sent Bro. Evans to Centerville, and he immediately entered upon his work. Bro. Evans is no ranter; his preaching is not a mere fox fire; he gives the people something to think about; nor has he any desire to turn the contents of the pocket-books of the people into his own; but as a vigorous shepherd of the sheep he attends to all the interests of his flock, and the Lord has wonderfully blessed the work of his head, hands and heart. At the quarterly conference the reports showed two Sunday-schools, with 125 scholars enrolled, 14 had been received on probation, and $114.85 had been raised for church purposes. This is a progressive age, and Centerville, with her progressive pastor, proposes to keep abreast of the age. The Methodist church, so long without windows and ceiling, is to be finished. The movement is already inaugurated and nearly cash enough on hand to complete the work.

From Chattanooga to Atlanta.

On the 16th inst. the writer had the pleasure of a trip to Atlanta, Ga. The ride over the W. and A. route, a distance of 140 miles, afforded an opportunity for sight-seeing and reading not to be despised. It is needless to say the time was well improved. On reaching the city I proceeded to 110 Whitehall street, where the Depository of Messrs. Walden & Stowe was formerly located. Here I met Rev. C. O. Fisher, D. D., pastor of Lloyd street church, who, after extending a cordial greeting, took me to the parsonage where I found comfortable lodgings. I was pleased to make the acquaintance of Mrs. Fisher, a very amiable lady who, by her kindly attention shown toward me greatly enhanced the pleasure of my short stay. I spent a delightful hour in the study rambling among the Doctor's books. The latest and best were on the shelves, inviting examination. A cursory glance was all that was possible, but even this [illegible]

I did not ... so favorably impressed with what I saw and heard as could have been wished. ... the old plan ... looked ridiculous ... from ... to die ... the past 250 years of our history has been entirely too serious for any portion of it to be held up now as a thing to be laughed at. During the early part of the next day I wandered about the city, taking observations here and there. I saw a great deal concerning which I cannot now make particular mention. I will just say that if ever a city had a good future that city is Atlanta. It is growing, and will continue to ... been ... the forenoon I attended the meeting of the Savannah Conference Board of Church Extension, where I gathered much valuable information respecting the work of our church in Georgia. All the presiding elders were present. At the close of the meeting I went out and dined with Rev. A. P. Melton, presiding elder of the Rome district. While on the way Elder Kent, one of our company, pointed out on McDonough street the house where our lamented Bishop Gilbert Haven used to reside. To me the spot appeared sacred and called up reminiscences which would have been better entertained if I been alone. Mrs. Melton, whom I had known in former years, an excellent wife and mother, spread for us a sumptuous dinner, for which my morning's ramble had given me a keen relish.

At 4 p. m. I attended a meeting held in Lloyd street church, to consider the question of establishing a paper in the interest of the Savannah and adjoining conferences. The attendance was not so large as I expected to see it, though there was no lack of interest on the part of those present. The discussions were lively if not always to the point under consideration. A motion finally prevailed authorizing the appointment of two committees—one on estimates and the other correspondence; these are to report to a similar meeting in June when it is proposed [illegible] ... SECND QUARTER. LESSON VI. May 6.
PETER PREACHING TO THE GENTILES.
(Acts x. 30–44.)

One day while at Joppa, Peter [illegible] to pray. He was very hungry, and while they were preparing him something to eat he [illegible] at once he seemed to [illegible] and dreamed there was [illegible] let down with things for him to eat, and a voice told [illegible] But Peter was a Jew, [illegible] had things in Jews [illegible] eat. So Peter said: "These things are not for me to eat; they are 'common,' or 'unclean.'" But the voice said: "What God makes clean is not unclean."

Very soon three men came to tell Peter that a man named Cornelius wanted to see him. He was a good man, prayed often, gave to the poor, and wanted to learn about Jesus. But Cornelius was not a Jew. He was a Gentile, and the Jews thought it wrong even to visit Gentiles. Now Peter saw what his dream meant. God wanted him to preach to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. God loved all; no one was common to him. Once Peter would have said, No, I can't go to Cornelius; now he went, and went gladly. When he came Cornelius told him God had told him in a dream to send for Peter.

Then Peter told Cornelius about Jesus. O how glad they were to hear about Christ and his love for the world. Peter told of his death on the cross, how he rose from the dead, and was now in heaven ready to forgive any one who believed on him. They heard and believed, and God sent the Holy Spirit upon them just as he did on the apostles at Pentecost.

Jesus died for all. He loves the poorest and worst, and wants to save them. No matter how poor or how rich, all are alike to Jesus. He wants all.—Western.

In dropping its department of set criticisms on current literature, the Century Magazine, it is said, will not slight the subject of books. The line it will pursue may be inferred partly from the literary papers it is said to have in hand for early publication. Mr. Stedman's incisive essays on the leaders of American letters will appear at intervals. In the June number, Mr. James Herbert Morse will begin a discussion, in two parts, of "The Native Element in American Fiction." Mr. Morse's ripe scholarship and originality of view have been appreciated, for some time past, by the few who knew his individual light under the anonymous bushel. John Burroughs will contribute his say upon Carlyle to an early number: and Henry James, Jr., has written several critical essays to follow his paper on "Du Maurrier and London Society" in the May Century. The subjects, so far as announced, are: "The Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson," for the June number, and the studies of "Alphonse Daudet," whom Mr. James regards as chief among the new race of French novelists, and "Anthony Trollope." In considering the latter's life and works, Mr. James is reported to have given, pretty fully, his views on the art of story telling. Besides these papers, there will be published a number of signed "Open Letters" on important current publications.

I was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk across the floor without fainting, could keep nothing in the shape of food on my stomach. Myself and friends had given up all hopes, my immediate death seemed certain. I now live (to the surprise of everybody) and am able to do my own work."

Every one who has had any experience in Christian work very well knows that the man who is earnestly engaged in the work of the Lord is not the grumbler of the congregation. The man who is engaged, heart and soul in the Master's work has no time for finding fault. The worker never grumbles. The grumblers never work.

Blessed be God, it is not written His blood can cleanse from all the evil we see, but from what He sees. Many chambers within are yet unopened to us, we see but through the crevices, yet His blood gets entrance, and drowns all.—Lady Powerscourt's Letters.

The anguish of the drunkard's family is never fully known to the world.

Not far from Louisville, Ky., there is a monastery of Trappist monks. A visitor to this strange building is said to feel as if he had stepped back into the Middle Ages. The abbot's chair is a sort of elevated throne, and in order to reach it he must pass over his own grave. The monks live on vegetable diet alone. They rise at 2 o'clock in the morning, and when they die they are buried without coffins. They are 60 of them in the monastery.

Our Spring style and price book tells how to order Clothing Shirts or Furnishing Goods. A postal request will get it.

MARRIAGES.

On Stone River Circuit, Tenn., by Rev. G. W. House, Mr. W. H. H. Knight to Miss Mary Meadow.

KAHOKA, Mo., Feb. 9, 1880.

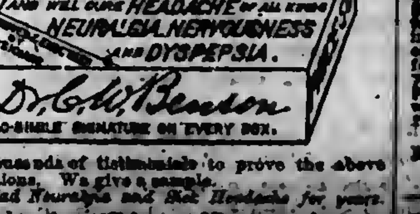
I purchased five bottles of your Hop Bitters, of Bishop & Co. last fall, for my daughter, and am well pleased with the Bitters. They did her more good than all the medicine she has taken for six years. WM. T. McCLURE.

The above is from a very reliable farmer, whose daughter was in poor health for seven or eight years, and could obtain no relief until she used Hop Bitters. She is now in as good health as any person in the country. We have a large sale, and they are making remarkable cures. W. H. BISHOP & CO.

"Bear ye one another's burdens," was the solemn admonition of him who sublimely bore the burdens of an entire world.—Miss Evans.

Forty Year's Experience of an Old Nurse.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never failing success by millions of mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhœ, griping in the bowels, and wind colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price twenty-five cents a bottle.



Thousands of testimonials to prove the above assertions. We give a sample.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire to inquire for my two brothers, Haywood and John. It has been about 38 years since I saw them. They went by the name of Surrell. I left them in Tuscaloosa, Ala. At Wm. Surrell's sales Hardy Climmons bought John, and Bob Crawford bought Haywood. Address me at Plantersville, Texas. BRUNSON SURRELL.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish to hear of my son and daughter, Mary and Dockey Lane. I have not heard of them since one year before the war; at that time Dockey was nine years and Mary 8 years of age. When I last heard from them they were in Brazos City, Texas. Their young mistress was Loota Laines, 12 years of age. Address their mother, care of Rev. G. W. Baber, Locksburg, Ark. RACHEL PLAGE.

DEAR EDITOR:—I wish to inquire for my people. I had two brothers, James Robinson and Charles Waters. My name was Mary Catherine Robinson. James belonged to Everett Steel, in Cambridge, Eastern Shore of Maryland. I had one aunt in Cambridge, mother's sister, Anna Jenkins. I was sold to Dr. John Hopper and he sold me to a trader, Thos. Overton. Address me at Port Allen, West Baton Rouge parish, La., care of Rev. Moses Franklin.

MARY C. EDWARD.

DEAR EDITOR:—I desire to inquire for my mother's people. Most of them are perhaps in Virgina or Maryland. She was born as near as she can remember in Halford county, Maryland, near a small town called Bladensburg. Her name was July Farrow, her mother was Giser, a sister Fanny and a brother John. All belonged to widow Farrow. The widow had a son, Malshier. Lizzie was sold about 1840 to a family near Bladensburgh; July was sold to a trader, John Blackwell, and taken to South Carolina. A few years later she passed to Georgia; she now lives in Hamilton county, Texas. Her name now is July Henry. Address me at Dayton, Tenn.

J. T. HENRY.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire to inquire for my people. I was separated from them when I was a small child. I left them in Montgomery county, Ala. I came to Texas with Sam Woodward; and when dividing out the property among the children, my youngest sister and I came to Texas. My mother was named Meally, father was James Woodward, my oldest brother was Adam, one was Jim, another was Jessie, Jennie, Eliza and Maria. My sister Jennie is in Texas with me, and my name is Candis. They all belonged to Austin and Dave Woodward, and moved from there to Mississippi. Direct letters to me in care of Trinity M. E. Church, Houston, Texas.

CANDIS BENTLEY.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire information of the following named relatives: My mother's named Maria, belonged to Perry Starks in Louisville, Ky.; my brother's named Zachariah Taylor; my sister named Dollie Ann—all belonged to Perry Starks. My sister Mary we left in Virginia. I think she belonged to a Mr. Carter at the time. We parted at Charlottesville. We were sold there from the Eade's estate, as well as I can recollect. My sister Sarah she belonged to Terry Graves in Fayette. She and I went to Missouri together. In a short time after I was sold again; and to the present time I have been unable to learn anything from them, or their whereabouts. I am the oldest boy, and was about three years of age at the time of our separation. I am about 35 years old now. I hope brother preachers will take an interest in my inquiry and help me find my relatives. Address,

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—*Rev. H. W. The Housekeeper.

The following is an old receipe for a salve which is not excelled by any in application to burns, cuts, bruises and sores of any kind. One hundred years may testify to its excellence: Two ounces of Burgundy pitch; half an ounce of beeswax; one tablespoonful of lard. Melt and mix and keep it always ready.

STUFFED BROWN BREAD.—Curl a few slices of the brown bread. well buttered. Fill them with any chopped well seasoned cooked meat, bacon, sardines, &c. Dip them in butter, as described in No. 2, and fry.

PUFF PASTE.—Mrs. Ewing, of the Chicago Cooking School, says that the best proportions for making puff paste are three-quarters of a pound of butter to a pound of flour. Spread a napkin in a pan of cold water, put the butter in the napkin and work with the hand until pliable and waxy, being careful to keep the napkin between the hand and the butter. Bring it into a compact roll and flatten to about half an inch in thickness, having first reserved one-eighth of the roll for mixing with the flour. Mix the flour and the reserved portion of butter with cold water to a stiff, smooth paste. Work it well with the finger tips for about fifteen minutes, or until it ceases to stick to the board; then roll it into a circular form, about an inch in thickness. Lay the butter in the centre, fold over the paste so as to inclose the butter, and leave the paste rectangular in shape, and roll till three-quarters of an inch in thickness. Fold over twice and roll down as before Repeat the process six times more, fold again twice and lay in a cool place for half an hour, when it can be rolled into any required thickness and baked. The paste should be turned frequently while being rolled, in order to equalize the layers, and the top should be brushed lightly with lemon juice or cold water before folding the last time. A puff paste patty case when properly made contains 2,304 layers or sheets of paste, and should, in baking, rise or puff up in height from four to seven times its original thickness.

CANDIED FRUITS.—Boil peaches, pears, plums, cherries, citrons, or quinces in a thick syrup—a teacupful of water to a pound of white sugar—until tender. Take [illegible] the fire and let remain in the [illegible] days. Take out, drain, [illegible] sugar over each [illegible]

FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

USE THE

A WONDERFU[illegible] d
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair.

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

The New Orleans Picayune continues to produce facts and figures in support of its position on the State land frauds, which were engineered by John McEnery and others. It proves from United States records that even under the questionable legislative contract Mr. McEnery could only ask for 78,763 acres of scrip, but it seems he has got 92,281 acres. Gov. Samuel McEnery has made two public rejoinders to the Picayune's statements, which are as weak and lame as the one in which he sometime ago attempted to make excuse for his promulgation of a defective school bill. The Governor would have the public believe that it is the duty of the courts, and not of himself as the chief executive, to institute judicial proceedings against the land swindlers, but they will refuse to accept this subterfuge or to place all responsibility upon either the Legislature or the dead Gov, Wiltz, though they were not blameless in the matter.

There are certain persons in most all communities whom good men and women devoutly wish they had never seen. They are disagreeable persons whose tongues keep up a continuous chatter, scolds whom it is impossible to please or satisfy. Generally they are idle, shiftless, lazy good for nothings, the best specimens of untidiness in all the community. As manufacturers of gossip, dirty tales and evil tidings they have no equals. They are patterns of everything that is undesirable; they cheer nobody, feed nobody, and comfort nobody. We know a few such persons, but most devoutly hope never to see another. We like sunshine better. Anything but a vinegar cruse.

From San Antonio District.

MR. EDITOR—Tenth to twelfth was spent at Gonzales. Found the church in pretty fair condition, but convinced more than ever that every congregation, station and circuit needs a pastor, unless the presiding elder could preside there all the while. We had one conversion and one reclaimed during our meeting. We have asked Bro. Reuben Reader, of San Marcos, to take charge of the work. Bro. Reader is a good man, preaches well, and is ordained.

We arrived at Lone Oak the 13th, in time to witness the closing exercises of Mrs. F. N. Crawford's school of a three mouth's term. Noticed, on arrival, the long line of boys, with orange colored breeches and white waists, and girls neatly and cleanly attired, with rose-colored sashes; singing as they marched in the direction of a long table, spread and loaded with choice viands, to which we were invited, and partook largely of the bounty. miles brought us to Cuero on the 18th inst. Here we rested one day (19th), and sold a few copies of "Methodism in the Field." Early in the morning the quiet of the town was disturbed and the community appalled by a young colored man, named Peyton Woods, being brought in, who had been shot and mortally wounded by Walter Turrian, a white man, who was lodged in the Cuero jail. Young Peyton Woods died the same evening a little after 7 p. m. His murderer shot him while mounted on horseback. The ball passed through his right hand, cutting the reins in two, entered his right side, little to the right below the nipple, passed near the region of the heart, out from the left side into the air with a murderous hum. Thus ends the earthly career of another young colored man in the very dawn of manhood. Both were cattle-herders, in the employ of foreman Beard, en route with 3,000 head of cattle belonging to Messrs. Armstrong and Boyce, to Nebraska.

The Lord willing I will tell you something about Victoria in my next. However, I beg leave to notice some superfluous remarks made by Bro. B. J. Donuell, in his letter to the Monroe County Sun. He is styled a prominent colored man, but cannot impose his views on the gospel of Christ, etc., without attempting to rob his colored brethren of the manhood accorded them, by their foes, throughout periods down to the present exigencies. If I were white I should doubt the sincerity of his love very much, especially when Bro. Donnell gushes out. "I love the white people as a people, as friends, and as citizens." I trust, my dear brother, you are able to give better evidence of your great love than your chaffy words. What does he mean by the words, "the colored Bishop-worshipers to the contrary notwithstanding?" But has the audacity to invite colored people to the M. E. Church in sufficient numbers to elect a colored Bishop. If my colored friends outside of the M. E. Church can have no greater motive than to crowd into our church on purpose to elect a colored Bishop, they had best stay away, unless their aim may be to bring the election of that officer in God's church on a level with the manners and methods of the corrupt politicians who are striving as they live to disgrace and destroy the government of our country. We would be too low if we should descend to your level. My sentiments are and will be in favor of colored men and women filling any position in the church and State for which they have qualified themselves to hold. I have no apology to offer for these sentiments. I do not believe that the election of a colored man to the bishopric depends upon black majorities near as much as his qualifications. The action of the last General Conference convinces one of this fact, if he is not too stupid to know anything worth knowing in such matters. The colored delegates to that session were less than forty, yet there were 229 votes cast in favor of a colored Bishop. This is so, if I err not in figures. Are those white brethren who voted so largely in favor of the question ignorant worshippers of men, or colors? or of God and the best interests of the church of which which they were distinguished members? In fine, is it criminal for a worthy man, whatever may be his color, to desire to be a Bishop, or President of the United States of America? I think it would be criminal if the church or State should so far forget their interest as to elect an unworthy man to fill either of these high and responsible positions. Bro. Donnell, in his gush, says, "I would not live without the white people." The best reason for that, my brother, may be that you can't. It is said in Holy Writ, "No man liveth to himself." He says, "I want to learn wisdom of them. They have it, and I intend to get some of it in the M. E. Church among them, out of the church, wherever I can." And I reply, amen! I trust loud enough for the angels in glory to hear me, for the good Lord knows that I am in favor of Bro. Donnell getting a great deal more, ever so much more wisdom before he goes out of our church. But hold, dear brother, don't go before you are able to "produce a spelling book or a reader." Make your books, when you are able, so that they will read upwards, not "down trodden at its head." I would suggest when you get through with that chosen job, "never serve on any of the several committees on the re vision of the Bible."

Yours truly, in love,
MACK HENSON.

Victoria, Texas, April 23, 1883.

Proceeding of Theological and Sunday-School Institute.

At 10 o'clock yesterday the Theological and Sunday-school Institute was opened at the Central Tennessee College. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. L. M. Hagood, R. Harper, of this city, Rev. T. O. Carter, editor of the Methodist Advocate, Chattanooga, and Rev. E. W. Moseley, presiding editor of Trenton district, M. E. church.

After the appointment of a committee on permanent organization, Bishop I. W. Wiley delivered an address on the work of the ministry, eminently practical, full of sound teaching, and listened to with close attention. The students interspersed the exercises with spirited singing.

In the afternoon Rev. M. Williams, of Franklin, opened the session with devotional exercises, and the committee on organization reported as follows:

J. Braden, D.D., President; Vice Presidents—S. P. Bell, V. C. Randolf, E. W. Mosely, M. Williams and E. Tyree; Rev. James F. K. Moreland and C. E. Alexander, secretaries; R. Harper, treasurer; Revs. D. Cook, J. F. Moreland, A. Phillips, executive committee.

The report was adopted.

Revs. D. W. Hays, H. W. Key and E. W. Mosely were appointed a committee to report on the feasibility of holding annual sessions of the Institute.

Rev. James F. K. Moreland read an able paper on the "Divine Institution of the Gospel," prepared by Rev. Jos. Courtney, of Ohio.

Rev. R. Harper, of this city, read an excellent paper on the "Life work of Arius."

At night, Rev. T. Carter, recently a missionary in China, delivered a most entertaining lecture on the custom of the Chinese and missionary work in the Celestial empire. Space forbids a synopsis of this admirable literary effort.

WEDNESDAY.

Dr. Hubbard delivered an excellent address on Ministerial Hygiene. Dr. O. Fitzgerald delivered an admirable address on "Gifts and Graces." Dr. Vincent delivered an incomparable address on the work of the Christian minister. Rev. V. C. Randolf read an interesting paper on "Preparation of a sermon." Rev. W. Thirkield's address on "Elements of Power" was good. At night Biseop Wiley all but surpassed himself in an address on the Christian Ministry.

THURSDAY.

Rev. C. E. Seward conducted the opening religious exercises.

Rev. D. W. Hays read an interesting paper on "The Relation of the Press to the Conversion of the World," followed by a lively discussion.

The subject of Sabellianism was ably treated by Rev. L. M. Hagood, and a discussion followed.

At 3 p. m., Dr. Vincent delivered an address on the "Minor Duties of the Pastor." It was an admirable account of the "little foxes that spoil the vines," in a minister's conduct and character.

President Thayer, of Clark University, delivered an address on the "Baptism of the Holy Ghost essential as a preparation for the the Christian ministry." It was enjoyed by all.

At 8 p. m. President Thayer delivered an address to pastors.

FRIDAY.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. M. Williams, of Franklin. The President read a very interesting letter from Rev. W. E. S. Hammond, of Indianapolis, Ind., regretting his inability to be present and fill his engagement, and expressing great hope for the future of the colored race, and specially the hope that the evangelization of Africa would be greatly hastened by the education of the colored youth of the South.

Rev. H. W. Key gave an outline of the work in the Tennessee conference, and alluded to the aid given to the colored people in the conference, during the past sixteen years. This aid had been given through the Church Extension Society, the Missionary Society and the Freedmen's Aid Society, which organization had spent in all over two hundred thousand dollars in aiding the colored people in Middle and West Tennessee, besides the aid given in donations of books and papers through the tract and Sunday-school agencies of the M. E. Church.

Dr. Vincent gave one of his most admirable addresses on "Bible Study," at 10 o'clock, which for soundness of teaching, points of wit, beauty of illustration, happiness of delivery, is very seldom heard in an assembly.

Rev. Dr. Cunningham, editor of the Sunday-school publications of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was present, as he said, to keep his engagement, but his physician had positively forbidden him to speak or do any work at present. He expressed his great delight in hearing the admirable lecture of Dr. Vincent and his great interest in the work of Central Tennessee College and in the education of the colored people.

At 3 p. m., Dr. St. Vincent delivered an "Secular Education." The Doctor advised men not to think themselves entirely destitute of sense because they have not a diploma from some college, when they have intelligence enough to grapple with the business affairs of life, nor to fail to have a collegiate education, if there is any possible chance for them to have it. Without it he said they may succeed, but with it they could likely succeed better. Birhop Campbell of the African Church was present. He addressed the Institute. He said his advantages were few and while he could use none but the English language, yet he did not intend for any man to speak that language out of his sight. At 8 p. m., Rev. W. Thirkield delivered an address.

SATURDAY.

The opening exercises were conducted by Rev. J. F. K. Moreland. The "Pastor in His Study," was the first topic considered. The thought of the speakers was that the preachers should have time to study from three to five hours daily, that this study should be systematic, and that it should be earnest. A drowsy man does not gather ideas from what is read half awake. Rev. O. O. Knight spoke on the work of the M. E. Church in the south. He reviewed the past, and pointed out the state of society at the close of the war, and showed clearly that the M. E. Church had done a work that could have been done by no other branch of Methodism, and the good fruit of this work is becoming more and more apparent. The practicability of the required hours for study for the ministry was considered and the rule in the Discipline agreed to as feasible, which requires all the Methodist ministers to spend the morning of each day in study. The course of study was considered as somewhat above the reach of many young men who are admitted to the conferences in the south as well as elsewhere. At 3 o'clock, Rev. A. H. Gillett, general agent of the Sunday-school union of the M. E. Church, spoke on the pastor in the Sunday-school. To-morrow morning at 11 o'clock Rev. Dr. Vincent will preach in the college chapel. The Sunday-school exercises of the institute will be continued through the most of next week.

CORRESPONDENT.

One pure life will do more toward the conversion of the world than any number of number of volumes on the "Evidences of Christianity." The casuist may perplex a reader by suggesting difficulties and creating doubts, but a holy life defies all casuistry; it is evermore the most powerful of self-defences. We care not for a learned church, a wealthy church, or a theological church; but for the world's sake, let us strive for a pure church.—Rev. Josseph Parker.

Caste discrimination on account of color is one of the relics of the "might-makes right" age of the world. Man self taught has always been a respecter of persons, and only by revelation does he learn the great truth of the brotherhood of his race. As the Church more perfectly represents the spirit of Christ, so it will more entirely accord to all its members equal privileges without regard to race, color, or social position. And the best way to win such treatment on the part of those who do receive it is to deserve it, and to persevere in deserving it.—Western Christian Advocate.

MISSISSIPPI.

H. Henderson, Fayette: "We have got a double lot for the erection of the new church, and have paid on it $20. Our Sunday-school is moving on. During past quarter there was raised for pastor $22.60."

O. L. Crump, Kosciusko: "There are three churches on this work. The one in town owed to Mr. Thompson $185 and ten per cent. interest, for building it, and it will take about $250 to complete it. I have raised $54 for indebtedness. The salaries for the ministry, and the indebtedness and finishing the church will amount to $817.80. At the other points both need a new church. I found my people down and cold in spiritual matters. My wife is a student of Rust University, but we found such a bad state of affairs, she cannot get off until fall. There are about five saloons [illegible] and every one of them busy [illegible] poisons, which find its way [illegible] of members of the church [illegible] use tobacco. I have [illegible] fiddles and banjos here [illegible] years before. The [illegible] gives school four months, and the town corporation four more. Many children are running the street every day. The parents belong to some church, but do not love or come to the Sabbath-school or send their children. I trust our people will look to what the Lord has done for them."

TENNESSEE.

J. D. Dooley, Spring City: "Elder Provine was present with us at the quarterly meeting April 14–15. On the Sabbath the congregation was beautifully addressed by him.'

A. Burdett, Friendship: "My second quarterly meeting was held at Mayzie Grove by Elder Price. We paid him $20.45, for missions $2, pastor $40. We are sorry to lose our beloved elder who has left Friendship to reside in Brownville. Mrs. H. C. Price is an estimable Christian lady, and Miss Mary Price was secretary of our Sunday-school. The entire family stood to their posts in the church. We hope the Master will bless them. The church brethren bore the expense of their removal."

TEXAS.

D. Edwards, Pleasanton: "Three have joined the church, and two backsliders are reclaimed. Pray for the down pouring spirit on the western fields."

Green Bragner, Denison: "Elder Gates held my first quarterly. We were all glad to meet him and hear him preach. He assisted us in planning the construction of our new church building. We expect to have the lumber on the ground before long. The elder preached to the children with power on Sunday morning, and the sacrament in the evening was administered to 32 persons. Love feast Tusday night was a decided success. Elder's collection $8.25; subscription to the church $60.45."

ARKANSAS.

J. T. Thompson, Emmett: "I reached my work, Camden circuit, March 16th. We have no members here, as this is a mission field. The circuit extends over three counties and includes the towns of Emmett, Prescott and Bowden, on the Iron Mountain R. R. We have secured a good lot in Emmett, and hope to build and organize a church in that town this year. The way seems to be open for our church, and if we can get suitable places to hold services we can organize a grand work here."

VIRGINIA.

The Washington annual conference is very large in territory, embracing Maryland, most of Virginia, West Virgima and the District of Columbia. It numbers more than 150 ministers. The last session was held in Alexandria, Va., and presided over by Bishop Warren. John W. Chickering, who was in attendance, wrote to Zion's Herald, of Boston: "Two things struck me with great force: the rapid change in qualification and culture in the few years since I first saw a body of colored preachers; and the remarkable results of their labors so far as developed in the reports and statistics. There was not, I think, a single charge without conversions and additions—the latter aggregating, if I rightly heard, over three thousand; a Pentecost, indeed, among these widely-scattered and feeble bands of disciples."

MARYLAND.

A colored brother, Mitchell, purporting to represent a Southern Educational Society for the elevation of the colored people, desired the appointment of a committee to investigate the subject with a view of securing our endorsement. The Preachers' Meeting, however, declined. Our Methodist work in the the South through our conferences, our Freedmen's Aid Society, our schools, seminaries, Biblical institutes, &c., commands the confidence of our Church and taxes their beneficence, in addition to all our varied local and general denominational interests. We are therefore not prepared to encourage calls on our people privately and publicly for this or similar societies.—Baltimore Methodist.

Macedonian Cry from "Our Brother in Black.

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR.

After twenty years of freedom the Methodist Episcopal Church South has now finally come to the same conclusion respecting the education of the Negro that the Methodist Episcopal Church, the American Missionary Association, the Northern Baptist, and the other Northern Christian bodies had attained some eighteen or twenty years ago. And here, a month or two ago, she tangibly formulated her convictions in the premises by the establishment, in the City of Augusta, Georgia, of an institution of learing for colored students. The school is named after the late Senior Bishop of the M. E. Church, South, Paine Institute.

This is the first and only school for the negro established by the Church, South. It is to be hoped that it will be tenderly fostered, that it may prosper and prove to be the first fruit of many others. Rev. Morgan Calloway, D.D., formerly a professor in Emory College, at Oxford, Ga., and a co-laborer there with the progressive Dr. Haygood, has accepted the call to the presidency of Paine Institute. Not long since Dr. Calloway preached a farewell sermon to the students of Emory College and the citizens of Oxford, preparatory to his withdrawal from his new field of labor. But for lack of space we would gladly give it to our readers entire. Its spirit throughout is that of a consecrated Christian missionary. The Central Methodist (Church, South) commenting thereon, says: "It is a production of unusual merit, clearly setting forth profound truths." It advises its readers to "read it and catch its spirit."

We give room to the following excerpts:

"The brotherhood of the races, now and then disputed, is without controversy a tenet of the Christian church. Sometimes, however, like other commonwealths, the church, from lethargy or passion, or other discreditable reason, permits her statutes to be broken and even her fundamental law to be set at naught. The doctrine of brotherhood has ample advocacy though not abounding in illustration. The kinship of the human family is the burden of the song of the communist, is the holiday ritual of the capitalist; it is the probable result of the studies of the ethnologist; is the prophecy, at least of comparative philology; it colors the argument of the statesman, and it is the eloquence of the orator; it is the creed of the clergyman and the unction of the preacher; it is the implication of diplomacy, and the only possible nexus of the races; it is the communion of saints. In all the appeals of the gospel, it is the first article of catholic Christianity. It was the lesson of the sheet, of the call to the Gentiles, of the parse at Jacob's well; it is the statement and reiteration of the "faith once delivered to the saints," it is the heart of the history of the entire Christian movement; it is in the Lord's prayer, and in all the prayers of all who follow the Lord; it is in the Sermon on the Mount, and in every sermon since uttered by all who hold to the doctrine of that sermon; it is in the discussions of the college of the apostles, and in the theologies of all the doctors who follow that scoool; it is the baptism of Pentecost, "when devout men from every nation under heaven," Parthians and Medes, and Elamites and the rest, felt the holy flame, and in all on whom the tongue of fire has since rested; it is in Peter's sermon and in every missionary sermon; it is incarnate in the person of every evangelist; it is in the great Bible houses of Great Britain and America, in their marvelous supply of the Word, and is emphasized in the revised edition of the Scriptures; it is in the missions among every kindred, and tribe and tongue among men.

* * * * *

Why in our educational and evangelistic enterprises at home we should exclude the negro from the scope of their beneficence, while missions are organized and sustained by us here and elsewhere for the white man, the red man, the yellow man, and even the black man when at antipodal distance, may admit of apology, but not of justification. Entrusted to us for tutelage and guardianship, we should be unfilial to our Father and unbrotherly toward His child, were we to deny him the assistance, his moral and intellectual impotence invoke. A tr[illegible]ther is tenderer to the unfortunate than to the favored. Pagan chivalry draws its sword for the defenseless and the weak, and Christian charity must not be behind in helpful ministries. The Christliest mission is to the poorest of the brethren. If it be expressive of a proper sentiment to sigh over the woes and wasting of the American Indian, or a source of pride to point to the Hawaians as a "nation born in a day;" if Mungo Park lives in our memory for first carrying the gospel torch in the jungles of Africa, and if he who in our day making in the same dismal regions a tour unmatched in daring adventure save by perils that Paul recounts, is enshrined in own hearts, in the name of the Christ we ask, are we to let the seven million negroes in our midst perish for lack of knowledge, and the civilization of Africa, for which Livingston died and Stanley imperiled himself, be indefinitely postponed? Are we Christian men and women permitting the sophistry of a former servile relation to impose on our judgment and retard our offices of kindness to the race that cries to us from the depths of a pitiable poverty? Shall we deaden the call of duty and of conscience by the silly, selfish, sinful subterfuge that others liberated them, and by these others they should be cared for?

* * * * *

The work of education with the freedman is begun, and it will go on whether we take part or not; but it is the judgment of wise men not speaking for the church that, we of the South, as best knowing his capacity and character, and being most deeply involved in his welfare, and he being indissolubly bound up with us in fortune, should on account of our position and the closeness of our relations, past and present, be entrusted with the resposible duty.

* * * * *

Every throb of humanity and every sentiment of Christian brotherhood and charity, should lead us to open our hearts and our purses to his needs, his industrial deficiencies, his mechanic inaptness, his moral lowness, his educational wants, his lingering feticism; not satisfying ourselves in a serene but unassisting sympathy, but by the power of a personal presence and a personal persistence bring to bear the resources of an accumulated experince in the ethics of home, and of probity in business and politics and the sanctities of religion, elevate him to the character as well as the rank of a civilized, Christianized citizen. The independence of a life time, and our intimate knowledge of his temperament and talent, make us his qualified instructors.

But besides these considerations, and our nearness of attitude, we ought to teach him because of an indebtedness coeval with the colonial period. Not to speak of lighter services at our homes, and in personal attendance, it is in order to recall the fact that the negro's lusty strokes felled the forests from the Chesapeake to the Gulf of Mexico; that his spade drained our swamps and lowlands; that he followed the plow over every acre of our fields; that his pick dug out all the ores smelted in our furnaces; that his scoop and dump cart graded our Southern railways, and that though he does not monopolize the labor in our factories, yet his labor produced the cotton our mills have spun and the mills of America have woven. His toil alone clothes at least the poor of two continents. If exemption from the severer forms of bodily toil be a relief, if leisure for learning or pleasure produced without sacrifice be a boon, if the prosperous industries and the high civilization of our section be a blessing, for this relief and boon and blessing we are largely indebted to the negro.

We have spoken of the negro as related to the conduct of the war, but it remains to be said that, in relation to us as a friend, during that period, and to our wives and children as guardians, that the testimony of his fidelity is on the lips of every surviving soldier. It is easy to conjecture how, with a race less loyal to home and patron, the testimony in the case might have been a narrative of lawlessness and license. What he refrained from, therefore, is to his credit. But in the four years of darkness and demoralization when, besides those of military age, every boy whose muscles were equal to the support of a musket, and every old man with vigor enough to mark time was called to the front, the negro, commanding as a patriarch, and reverent as a priest, kept sacred vigil at our homes. Besides this, with a foresight not developed for himself or his family, but evoked by virtue of his office, and the piteous destitution of our loved ones, he provided for their wants. "They were ahungered and he fed them." What he did is to his honor."

In conclusion he said that those who answered the call to help in education and elevation of the negro must be men "who see in this educational undertaking the possible removal of the bitterness of sectional feeling, who would rejoice at the securement of genuine fraternity among the Methodisms, and regard the education of the negro as tending to such fraternity, who see in this effort of the church the tokens of the proudest triumph of the Cross hitherto achieved—a broad international exposition of religion, a consummation of the doctrine of charity and brotherhood that shall hush the buzz of discord in the churches of Christ, seal the lips of the scoffer and infidel, and more adequately illustrate the power of the Cross in transforming the national as well as the personal heart, and more conspicuously and convincingly put it before the public mind and press it upon the public conscience.

I count myself a Christian, and as such, with the humility which the name implies and the consecration which the Spirit gives me, I shall answer the call of my Master."

Waco District—From Dallas.

MR. EDITOR—I reported a part of my work sometime ago, and now I continue it. Leaving Waco, I came to Martin's circuit, G. Wilson, pastor. His quarter was held February 17. The brethren did not turn out in full on account of high water. The pastor reported his work. No benevolent collections. The Sunday-school was in poor condition. It is promised with the committees to commence at once to arrange better plans for the raising of the money, and to put the Sunday-school in better working order. I preached to a large congregation, and administered the Lord's Supper to sixty.

At Martin and Big Creek, Rev. D. Humphries, pastor, quarter was held February 24th and 25th. Brethren were notified and on hand. The report was very encouraging. They are doing something in the way of benevolence. There are three Sunday-schools, two of which are largely attended. At Big Creek the Sunday-school has purchased an organ and paid for it. Their pastor seemed to be the right man in the right place. The trustees are preparing to build a parsonage; I hope they will carry out their design. The love-feast was a time long to be remembered. I preached to a good congregation, after which the sacrament was administered to ninety-six. Everything passed off delightfully.

Leaving Martin brings us to Bremond, Rev. W. J. Mitchell, pastor. His quarter was held February 26. The brethren were on hand. The report was not as good as the pastor desired; his wife being sick five weeks prevented him from attending to his work. He is trying to get the people to a higher standard. The quarter passed off smoothly. Preaching at 8 p. m., after which the Lord's supper was administered to forty-five. The people are well pleased with their pastor, and have purchased a lot with a house with four rooms for a parsonage.

Leaving Bremond I came to Austin to spend a few days with my family after being absent five weeks, and here I met the Board of Church Extension. After the business was transacted relative to some churches asking aid, Rev. C. L. Madison, President of the Board of trustees for Conference Seminary, then called a meeting of said Board for the purpose of disposing of three lots, as we had six lots besides the five acres, and the money to be turned into the building Conference Seminary. It is the desire of the trustees to let out the contract for the building [illegible] soon as practicable. In the re[illegible] of conference treasurer, stati[illegible] amount received from each [illegible] for the conference year [illegible] sent in $20 for the write[illegible] absent at the time he [illegible] report, had $62 more, [illegible] raised on my subscri[illegible] making $82 in al[illegible]

Going to Dal[illegible] pastor, his qu[illegible] 17 and 18. [illegible] showing [illegible] bers, h[illegible] cause[illegible] to p[illegible] cou[illegible] a grand one; many witnessing for Christ. On Sunday I preached and administered the sacrament to a good many.

Leaving Dallas brings us to Denison, Rev. G. Bragner, paster. His quarter was held March 24 and 25. The report was very encouraging here; $63 have been raised and expended in a small house of worship for the present, which will be used for a parsonage when the church shall be completed. The pastor, myself, Bro. Henry Lott, Washington Marshall and William Hawthorn have let out the contract for the building to commence soon. The love feast was a pleasant meeting. I preached to the children and at 3 p. m. and 7 p. m. to a large congregation; after which, 32 communed at the Lord's table, and 2 joined the church. A subscription of $66 was taken up for the church. Bro. Bragner is doing a grand work in this place, though his oppositions are many.

After remaining five days in Denison I took a flying trip to Sherman in the interest of our church. The preacher, Bro. Jefferson Buell, had been to his work, but on account of the small pox he left. Bro. Jacob Marshall, one of the local preachers, has charge of the work at present. At Pilot Point, Bro. Buell, the pastor, had been but once. On his arrival he states that he was surrounded by five or six men who drew their pistols on him, and made him promise to never be seen at Pilot Point any more. The quarterly was to be held on 31st of March and 31st of April; the pastor being absent it was omitted. I preached twice and administered the sacrament to 34 persons. Bro. Bragner will preach twice a month until the pastor returns.

At Fort Worth, Bro. E. Hall, on account of the small pox, his quarterly was omitted. I learn that Bro. Hall has organized with sixteen members and the prospect for the future seems to be good.

Calvert Rev. B. F. Smith, pastor, his second quarter was held April 4. The brethren were all on hand. The report of the pastor was very encouraging. The Sabbath-school was in a growing condition, and had raised for missions $2.15.

The District Conference convened in Calvert, April 5. Rev. B. F. Smith, had made ample preparation to take care of them. All of the traveling preachers except two were on time and reported their several charges in good condition. Rev. H. Swann, from Austin, was with us and preached two sermons during the conference which will long be remembered. The services were largely attended day and night. Yours in Christ,

S. GATES.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

A Word Concerning that Sunday-school Convention.

I exceedingly regret the collapse of the Sunday-school Convention above referred to. I had arranged with Rev. A. H. Gillett, Sunday-school Agent for the South, to hold it at Holly Springs, April 16–18. When he fixed the date he informed me that I would soon hear from him again, notifying me as to what he wished done preparatory to holding the convention. Not hearing from him I [illegible]ed up the matter in t[illegible]es. I wai[illegible]

He then ex[illegible] his deep regrets for the dis[illegible]ment, and to compensate [illegible] it, he proposed to attend our [illegible] District Conference, even if he has to neglect some other work. I'm sure we would be delighted with his attendance. Now, had I received Bro. Gillett's letter, all parties would have been duly noti[illegible] and would not have gone to Holly Springs. The fault was in the mail. Of course we are not re[illegible]sible for the change in the time of the Indiana Conference, [illegible] for the postponement of Bro. Shumpert's District Conference, [illegible] possibly by his having the Conference Minutes to publish.

Iutense excitement has been created in South Carolina by the prosecution by the government of persons concerned in frauds at the last Congressional election in that State. Ex-Chief Justice Willard, one of the prosecnting attorneys, has received an anonymous letter, declaring that his life is in imminent danger and that he mnst nol pros. the cases, in order to save his life. Jndge Willard has been interviewed, and says the evidence on which arrests have been made is of the most convincing character; that the Congressional elections in Sonth Carolina were carried by the votes of one-fourth or one-third of the legal voters against the zealons efforts of the remaining three-fourths or two-thirds; that it is obvious the laws must have been set at defiance to procure this result; that the Government counsel has good reason to believe that persons were prevented from voting and that false returns of the votes were made. The prosecntion finds the greatest difficulty in controlling its witnesses, as they are bribed and intimidated, and threatened so that the chances of obtaining conviction are slight. Even the Democratic State committee have come forward to aid the defendants in escaping.

Yonng Folks' Corner.

THE CONCEITED GRASSHOPPER.

There was a little grasshopper
  Forever on the jnmp;
And as he never looked ahead,
  He often got a bump.

His mother said to him one day,
  As they were in the stubble,
"If yon don't look before you leap You'll get yonrself in tronble."

The silly little grasshopper
  Despised his wise old mother,
And said be knew what best to do,
  And bade her not to bother.

He hurried off across the fields—
  An nnknown path he took—
When, oh! be gave a heedless jump,
  And landed in a brook.

He struggled hard to reach the bank—
  A floating straw he seizes—
When quick a hungry tront darts ont,
  And tears him all to pieces.

* * * * * * *

Good little boys and girls, heed well
  Yonr mother's wise advice:
Before you move, look carefully,
  Before yon speak, think twice.

Bless his Heart

In a very elegant palace car entered a weary faced, poorly dressed woman, with three little children, one a habe in her arms. A look of joy crept into her face as she settled down into one of the luxurious chairs, bnt it was quickly dispelled as she was asked rudely to "start her boots."

A smile of amnsement was seen on several faces as the frightened group hurried out to enter one of the common cars. Upon one yonng face, however, there was a look which shamed the countenances of the others.

"Auntie," said the hoy to the lady beside him, "I am going to carry my basket of frnit and this box of sandwiches to the poor woman in the next car. You are willing, of conrse?"

He spoke eagerly, bnt she answered: "Don't be foolish, dear; yon may need them yonrself, and perhaps the woman is an impostor."

"No, I'll not need them," he answered decidedly, hut in a very low tone. "Yon know I had a hearty breakfast, and don't need a lunch. The woman looked hungry, anntie, and so tired, too, with those three little habies clinging to her. I'll be back in a minnte, anntie; I know mother would'nt like it if I didn't speak a kind word to the least of these when I meet them."

The worldly annt brushed a tear from her eye after the boy left her, and said, audibly: "Just like his dear mother."

About five minutes later, as the lady passed the mother and the three children, she saw a pretty sight—the family feasting, as perhaps they had never done before. The dainty sandwiches were eagerly eaten, and the fruit basket stood open.

The eldest child, with her mouth filled with bread and hntter, said, "Was the pretty boy an angel, dear mamma?"

"No," answered the mother, and a grateful look brightened her faded eyes, "bnt he is doing an angel's work, bless his dear heart!" And we, too, said: "Bless his dear heart!"

Bands of Mercy.

What can they do for our Public Schools?

Make the children in them, as they have in the French schools, more kind to their teachers and each other,—more kind to everybody and everything,—carry hnmane and merciful ideas and edncation, throngh cards and hadges, into homes where no snch ideas or education have hitherto entered, and prevent crime. Ont of 7,000 children who have gone ont from one English pnhlic school, with this kind of instrnction, not one has ever been arrested for any criminal offence.—Our Dumb Animals,

A Holy Life.

A holy life is made np of small things. Little words, not eloqnent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles or battles, nor one great heroic act of mighty martyrdom make up the trne Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the river, great and many," rushing down in torrents, noisy and in force are the true symbols of a holy life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little follies, indiscretions and imprndences, little foibles, little indulgences, and of the flesh; the avoidance of such little things as these goes far to make np, at least, the negative beanty of a holy life.

To the veteran preacher, conscions that his snn is setting, that his voice has lost its ancient melody, that his old strength is daily diminishing, and that he is no longer able todo snch effectnal service for his Lord as he did when in his prime, few spectacles are more delightful than the sight of yonng ministers taking their ordination vows in an Annnal Conference. It awakens no mean jealousy in his soul, bnt grateful gladness, for he can say, with the late Charles Kingsley, "It is the highest pleasnre that a man can have who has tnrned down the hill at last to helieve that younger spirits will rise np after him, and catch the lamp of trnth, as in the old lamp hearing race of Greece, ont of his hand before it expires, and carry it to the goal with swifter and more even feet.—Zion's Herald.

Ex-Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, and Dr. Stoddard, of Chicago, propose a new party, to be called the Prohibition and Anti-secret Society party. Only the other day, when the danger of widespread innndation was imminent, it was announced that there was not a dollrr in the State Treasury to the credit of the levee fund. Send your children to school every day, and accompany them to Sunday-school every Sabbath.

Mr. Spurgeon says drunkenness is a sin—not a disease. This is both doctrinally and biblically true.

Gen. W. W. Dudley, Commissioner of Pensions, warns the public against the imposture of frauds and dead-beats, claiming to represent the Commissioner of Pensions.

The receipts of the American Missionary Association for the last five months of the present fiscal year show a serious falling off. This is much to be regretted, for there are no agencies, operating in the South, which are doing more faithful work.

The ladies of New Orleans are earnestly contending against the smoking car nuisance upon the city street cars. They deserve every encouragement in their efforts do away with this palpable outrage upon the rights of probably not less than three-fifths of our population.

The population of the Indian Territory is made up of some 70,000 Indians, 32,000 colored people, who were formerly slaves of five tribes of red men, and who speak the Indian dialects and follow their habits; and also of 15,000 whites. The Territory now has over 200 common schools and ten high schools, with 6,000 children in attendance. Nearly all the tribes have forsaken the pagan religion. The traffic in intoxicating liquors is absolutely prohibited; and no Territory of the United States contains more churches and well attended Sunday-schools. The Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterian and and other churches have prosperous missions in the territory.

The Manual of the Methodist Episcopal Church for April is one of more than ordinary value. The analysis of the benevolent collections in the several conferences and pastoral charges, Rev. J. W Young, is worthy of careful study, especially by every presiding elder and pastor. The missionary, Sunday-school, tract, church extension, freedmen's aid and educational departments are all filled with valuable information, and the Book Concern gives notice of sundry books which everybody should read. It is more than ever apparent that if the pastors will avail themselves of the information which the Manual gives and inform their people of the facts, each one of our benevolent causes will gather a rich harvest from the publication of this Manual. No Methodist who cares to be informed about the benevolent work of our church can afford to be without it.

The Methodist Quarterly Review for April is before us. It opens with a biography of Rev. Henry B. Bascom, D.D., LL.D., one of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, by Rev. W. H. Milburn, with a fine steel engraving. It is followed by a critical paper, "A glimpse of Old Testament eschatology," by the late Prof. Taylor W Lewis. The second article on Methodist doctrinal standards, by Rev. Richard Wheatley, is devoted mainly to the review of the late Dr. Thomas' trial in Chicago. We think that the great majority of the Methodist church, without any regard to what friendly and unfriendly critics may have said, justify the decision of the judical conference. The Beginning of Life is a well written paper by Prof. S. D. [illegible], Ph.D. Rev J. N. Fradenburg, Ph.D., has his second article on "The Religion of Babylon and Assyria." Daniel Curry, D.D., has an able paper on "Methodist Foreign Missions." "The Problem of our Church Benevolences" is a paper that must have caused its author, Rev. J. W. York, weeks of hard labor. Among the chief excellencies of this number of the Quarterly is the review of the quarterlies, book notices, and the general literary intelligence. Every Methodist preacher should subscribe for it. Address Phillips & Hunt, 805 Broadway, New York.

Our Publishing Houses.

The Publishing Houses of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whether in New York or Cincinnati, are ours both in fact and in law. We suppose that the church established, maintains and administers these Houses, not for the benefit of the persons who have been or may be her agents, but for her own advantage. Patronage given to these is not patronage given to Phillips & Hunt or Walden & Stowe, but to the church. These Houses are the institutions of the church, and the agents are the servants of the church, and cannot at their pleasure use the funds of either House. The church does not ask a blind confidence in the wisdom of their agents as to their management of her publishing interests. In the interval of the General Conference, the Book Committee, consisting of as able and high-minded men, lay and clerical, as our church contains, have all the business operations of these Houses under their special inspection. The books are so kept as to show the exact condition of each department, as well as the expense and profits or loss on each paper, periodical, or book published. The profits arising from the publication of these papers, periodicals and books are applied toward the reduction of the debts of the Houses, and divided among the several annual conferences for the benefit of the superannuated preachers, their widows and children. So it becomes the duty of every Methodist preacher to heartily recommend the books, papers and other publications of these Houses to the consideration of his people. While we acknowledge there is room for improvement, and there always will be, yet we believe that our own publications, including our Sunday school helps, have reached a degree of excellence unsurpassed by any other publications in America. Our Sunday-school literature is the best on the continent, and should have the preference to all others. On this question we do not see how there can be room for difference of opinion. We deem it the imperative duty of every Methodist preacher to see that the Sunday-schools on his charge are supplied with Methodist publications. He owes this to the children of to-day, and the church of the future. He is "to take care that every society be duly supplied with books and Methodist literature." The church is everywhere hemmed in by enemies. The preacher ought not to be satisfied with the name of a convert; that convert needs to be instructed in the doctrines and discipline of the church, and so instructed that he is able to give every man a reason for his hope. One of the prime duties of a pastor is to instruct and fix the views of his people. And to do this he must circulate our books and papers. Converts are coming to the church by hundreds. The wise pastor will start them off well, and with some church paper he will give them a chance to learn our doctrines and discipline. We know of nothing more weak and helpless than unread Methodists. They may be bulky but they are without strength. Hence the motto of every pastor should be, "A Methodist paper in every Methodist home." Brethren, clerical and lay, local preachers and exhorters, class leaders, stewards and trustees, Methodist men and women, what are you doing to put the SOUTHWESTERN into the thousands of Methodist homes where there is no church paper. You will find it your ally in every time of need.

Ten Million Dollars for Colored Soldiers.

We earnestly call the attention of our readers to the fact that recently a bill passed Congress granting colored soldiers equal pay with the white soldiers. When the colored soldiers were first admitted into the army, they received only seven dollars per month, and the white soldiers thirteen dollars per month. The American Congress has at considered the injustice, and concluded to pay to the negro soldiers, out of the enormous pension appropriation, the difference of six dollars. We would urge colored soldiers to prepare their claims, and have them sent to Washington for pay. Preachers, teachers, and others should spread this welcome news. Ten million dollars is a right snug amount to come at this time, in addition to the $500,000, which now lie in the U. S. Treasury at Washington uncalled for. The Lord help them to make wise disposition of these millions in securing homes and educating their children. This is tardy justice, but it comes at the time that the people to be benefited will be better able to appreciate it, and turn it to their material improvement. It comes in the twenty-first year of freedom. Surely, the Lord reigns in righteousness.

How to Secure More Country Business.

A planter living in the neighborhood of Alexandria, in this State, and who buys each year a large amount of supplies, writes to us complaining that the merchants of New Orleans, particularly those in the grocery business, do not advertise in the papers, and consequently lose trade which they could easily secure were their names better known in the country.—Times-Democrat.

This statement is only too true, and can be readily verified. Scarcely a week passes but some letter, requesting the names of some reliable business houses in this city, reaches this office. Our business men should study their own interest and advertise. The SOUTHWESTERN goes weekly to about 4,000 homes, 800 postoffices, and over 500 pastors. The great bulk of our readers are entirely dependent for reliable information upon the SOUTHWESTERN, hence its great value as an advertising medium. Our terms are very reasonable. Send for rates and advertise in the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Methodist Advocate, referring to the contemplated university to be located at Chattanooga, says: "Every home will share its transforming power, its refining touches, its ennobling effects." Will Bro. Carter tell us what "transforming power," or "refining touches" are to come to the homes of those whose children are to be excluded from it?" He proceeds:

We have great faith in the wise managers of the Aid Society. They have accomplished wonders during the last fourteen years in establishing institutions of learning for the colored people. Now that they have decided to build this University for "our white members," we shall expect it to be done if we only do our part well.

Yes, the Freedman's Aid Society has "established institutions of learning for the colored people." This was its legitimate work. It came into being for this purpose. But there is no brand of Satan upon one of them; their doors are open to all races; they say "whosoever will let him come," white men and black men, brown men and red men, men of all shades of color, nationalities and races, are freely welcome here. The sin of caste is not tolerated in one of them. But now our brother of the Advocate finds great satisfaction because the "managers of the Freedman's Aid Society have decided to build this University," from which colored pupils are to be excluded, and thus do all it can to foster and perpetuate the sin of caste.

Our Chattanooga contemporary makes frequent reference to the great central university for whites, and the assistance it receives from the "Aid Society," as if conscious the omitted term "Freedmen" would be a misnomer in such a connection.

The writer joined the Methodist Episcopal Church over forty years ago. His recollections and experiences go back full half a century. His ancesters were intelligent, virtuous and respectable. But he was not one of those religious Topseys who were "never born but growed up." It took the Lord's old-fashioned strait gate struggle, and regeneration to make a Christian of him. Many who prayed with and for him, at that time have gone to their graves. He stands a trophy of the struggles of the dead, and is under a special vow to Methodism. To him anything less than the most intense religious radicalism would be out and out atheism. Years ago he ate of the honey and drank of the milk of Canaan, and from that day he has had no longing after this world's little pleasures, no hankering for the leeks and onions of Egypt. The milk and honey of Canaan effected a radical cure in him; for all of these years he has not had the least longing for a single garlic of Egypt; not that he lives without some fault or error, he cannot say that he has ever passed a day without some mistake; he can say, however, that the sinning propensity has been crucified, and that through the blood of the Lamb, he is a saved man, so completely saved that he has no longings for the garlics of Egypt. Thank the Lord, a taste of the milk and honey creates a disrelish for the leeks and onions.

South New Orleans District.

Taking into consideration the coming time there is no branch of Christian work more important than that of the Sunday-school. The preachers, class leaders, stewards and trustees, of to-day, will be soon sleeping their long sleep, and if their children, now so young and tender, are properly trained and educated they will soon become the strong, sturdy oaks in Zion. The pastor who does not have his eye upon the children, and has little or no interest in the Sunday-school has made a fearful mistake; he is in the wrong place, and the sooner he steps down and out of the pulpit the better. Now and then we find a local preacher more noted for his illiteracy than for his grace, who seems to think the Sunday-school a baby institution and its labors at best children's play, to be done by one or two weak and tender people in the church. If we were a pastor in charge no such local preacher could secure our influence or vote for the renewal of his license. Thus far, as we have passed along over the district, we have found the preachers in charge faithfully attending to this department of church work and the Sunday-schools uniformly increasing in numbers and efficiency.

At Bayou Sale Bro. Richardson has had no place for preaching or Sunday-school service, and has been able to accomplish but little in this direction. He has, however, prepared the way for the future. A new church has been erected and is now inclosed and will soon be ready for use. "One soweth and another reapeth, some harvests mature quickly and some slowly, some work looks to immediate results and some to more distant. But to all workers in this harvest field it is certain that in due season they shall reap if they faint not. Bro. Richardson is sure of his reward. "God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love."

At Baldwin, Bro. Fitch, as president of Baldwin Seminary and pastor of Baldwin mission, is doing a good work. The opening of the Seminary has been full of promise; thus far fifty-four scholars have been enrolled; the present attendance is forty-three. The students are making commendable progress. Next year there will be classes formed for Latin and Greek and higher mathematics. Bishop Wiley says, of all our schools in the South there are none more pleasantly located than Baldwin Seminary.

La Teche never appeared better than at present. At the quarterly conference all the reports were in perfect order. The entire collections for all church purposes were over $150. The reports of the classes were as follows: Class No. 1, $26.25; No. 2, $8; No. 3, $6; No. 4, $10. Here is a church with a membership of fifty-seven, the entire class collections for the quarter were $50.25. The Sunday-school is constantly increasing in numbers and strength The parsonage has been finished and is ready for the coming woman who shall be so fortunate as to become the wife of the pastor of La Teche Methodist Episcopal Church. May God give them long life and sunny days. La Teche Seminary is having a prosperous year. Over 215 students are enrolled. The present attendance, by personal count, we found to be over 190. We were delighted with the appearance of this school. Its one great need is suitable buildings. With these it could soon become one of the largest schools in the South.

At Franklin, Bro. Williams' third year bids fair to be his best. The church property, which he found suffering from neglect, has been put in good condition. The little annoyances left by some of his predecessors in the form of debts have been paid. There is no misunderstanding between him and his people. All are pleased to have him as their pastor and preacher. He has no palaver, hates shams and frauds, and has wonderful ability to detect either. His religion is wholesome and fresh—free from all sour drippings and ancient superstitions. The business of the quarterly conference moved without a ripple—reports all in order. Under the superintendency of Mr. J. E. Hoskins the Sunday-school has increased full one-third.

In passing over the district we have found every preacher pleased with his appointment, and the people satisfied with their preachers. Have heard no word of complaint. At one point one of the chief women has been appointed a class leader; at another some are stewards, and one a district steward, one superintendent of the Sunday-school. In each instance they afford a striking illustration of the thought that women can do good work in the church of God and be womanly too. C.

A Trip to Summit, Mississippi.

Saturday morning, April 28, at 7:30 o'clock, just as the special train of Gen. Diaz, ex-President of Mexico, and party, the returning to Mexico, arrived at the depot of the "Great Jackson road," in this city, the writer boarded the north-bound train over the same road for Summit, Mississsippi, to attend a ministerial meeting of Gulf District of the Mississippi Conference. As one train came in with its festive company, the other sped forth with its motley crowd of men and women. Gliding over a smooth track, built of steel rails, upon a firm gravel ballasted road-bed, the various stations, Kenner, Manchac, Ponchatoula, Tangipahoa, McComb City, and intermediate stations, were rapidly left behind, and at 12 o'clock, m., we arrived at Summit, Miss. On the train the great topic of interest to everybody was the destructive cyclone which had visited Beauregard and Wesson, Miss., and had slain and wounded so many people; besides leaving such dreadful marks of its ravaging visitation. The baggage car was full of mattresses and other articles for the relief of the cyclone sufferers, and for several days before and since, nearly every train has been crowded with visitors to those unfortunate towns. Although when at Summit, the writer was within only twenty miles of the places mentioned, press of other matters prevented him from visiting these scenes. Enough could be learned of of the disaster while at Smumit, however, to make any human soul shudder. Stepping out of the train at Summit, the writer was kindly met at the depot by Prof. Fred. H. Bunton and Dr. L. Eugene Mullon. Hurrying from here, it was not long before Rev. J. H. Cook, our pastor here, and Rev. W. McDonald, the presiding elder, were found. Greeted with a warm shake of the hands by these brethren and others who were present; it was not long before dinner was prepared, when our bodies were all refreshed for the afternoon session of the ministerial meeting. At 3 p. m., the ministerial meeting convened with Rev. W. McDonald in the chair. Rev. A. E. P. Albert opened the meeting with singing and prayer; after which a highly profitable discussion was elicited from the essays presented. The first one was by Rev. J. B. Smith of Pass Christian, Miss., on the "Government of the Methodist Episcopal Church," which brought out some interesting remarks from a number of the brethren. The sacraments, the best method of conducting revivals, and other interesting subjects were discussed by Rev. J. H. Cook, J. B. Smith, H. May, Dorsey, and others. At 7:30 p. m., another session of the meeting was held, when Bro. May delivered an address, reciting the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society in the South. The other benevolent societies of the church were also represented by the brethren. Prof. Bunton also read an essay upon "The work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South," for which he deserves much credit. It was pointed and practical. The question—"What is the best method for securing subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN?" after a free expression of the warmest sentiments in which Dr. Mullon, who used to carry the SOUTHWESTERN in its infant days in a bag from Dr. Hartzell's office to the postoffice, spoke highly of the paper; it was decided that the best plan was to keep the paper interest constantly before the people in the church and in the homes. The paper was heartily endorsed and the editors received a shower of thanks for their valuable services (!). This was an interesting meeting.

Next day, April 29th, was a beautiful day, and grandly did the people flock to the church. The Sunday-school was both profitable and pleasant. The 11 a. m. sermon was preached by Rev. A. E. P. Albert. During the afternoon and evening Revs. H. May and L. M. Mitchell, pastor of the A. M. E. Church (who kindly closed his church upon this occasion. and worshipped all day here with our people), and W. McDonald, the presiding elder, preached soul-reviving sermons. The whole amount collected during the day was $35. At the close of the exercises the brethren scattered to their different fields of labor, better prepared, it is hoped, for their posts of vast responsibility. Leaving Summit, in company with Rev. J. B. Smith, at 2 a. m., Monday by 7:30 a. m., the writer arrived home filled with many pleasant recollections connected with this short visit among our people at Summit. May the Lord bless them all. A.

Dr. I. Eugene Mullon, a classical graduate, and afterwards Professor of Languages in New Orleans University, and recently a medical graduate of Meharry Medical College at Nashville, Tenn., is practicing his profession in Summit, Miss. Although it has been less than six months since Dr. Mullon graduated in medicine, he has already succeed in building up a splendid practice. Only a week or two ago the leading druggist of Summit told the doctor that taking the number of prescriptions filled, as a criterion, his practice was the equal to that of some of the most talented and successful physicians of the place. The man and his Alma Mater, are both honored by such reports.

What has become of the Sunday League? Too little work has been done to suspend operations already.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Simpson Chapel, New Orleans, ever since Brother Jackson entered upon his work has enjoyed a continuous revival. More than fifty have been converted to God, a large number of backsliders reclaimed. Over fifty have been received on probation. The manifestation of God's power among the people have been glorious.

For some years our brethren at Plum Street have been struggling in the midst of poverty and opposition; but deliverence has come. The German M. E. Church, South, on the corner of Plum and Jefferson streets, has been bought for the sum of $1000. Four hundred down and six hundred in four annual payments of $150 each. The four hundred down was furnished by two special friends in New Orleans, and is a preferred claim to be paid as soon as possible. Sabbath last our brethren moved from the hall where they have worshiped to the church. A large and attentive congregation with glad hearts listened to the word of the Lord as preached by the pastor and others. Bro. Mason is full of courage and the people are ready to work.

Sabbath was a good day at Sixth Street. During the day Brothers Little, Marshall, Albert, Mason, Osborn, Beal and Cushman preached short impressivs sermons, and called collections, amounting to $101.65. Fifteen months ago there was a debt upon this church of $800. They have collected and paid $750. One more effort and Sixth Street will be free.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The outlook for our church at Glencoe is very encouraging. The church is now framed up, all the lumber and weatherboarding are there on the ground, and it is now hoped to finish the building so as to get into it by the first of June.

D. Shelby, pastor, at Allen, reports his first quarterly conference through D. J. Price, secretary. Class No. 1 reported $4.25; No. 2, $2; No. 3, $3.50. Estimated for pastor, $315; presiding elder, $25; missions, $10. Elder Duncan preached on three occasions and strongly.

On the evening of the 4th inst., the Ladies' Aid Society of Ames M. E. Church, gave a literary entertainment and sociable in the vestry of the church. The literary exercises were a success in every respect; after the literary performance, refreshments were served. The occasion was a pleasant one, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather.

ARKANSAS.

The Arkansas Mansion, of Little Rock, May 5th, says that on Saturday, April 29th, at 3 p. m., a large concourse of citizens gathered to witness the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the Philander Smith College, established under the auspices of the Freedmen's Aid Society. The exercises opened with prayer by Prof. Mason, who also delivered an address full of good counsel and information. He was followed by Gov. Jas. H. Berry, who, as the chief magistrate of the state, and no doubt from his heart delivered a very terse address, encouraging the progress of education among the colored people. He urged those who are engaged in this good work to do all in their power to cultivate and enlighten the minds of their race. Col. Whipple then added his opinions to those of Gov. Berry, and urged the colored man to come up higher in the scale of moral worth and intelligence. The Masonic ceremonies were conducted by Acting Grand Master Augustus Richmond and Deputy Grand Master George Cragin. The completion of the college building is put down for September next, at which time Prof. Mason will open the college for students.

TEXAS.

W. McKenzie, Cold Springs: "Ellen Pullam held our second conference, preached Sunday, and administered sacrament to a large congregation. Churches are in better condition than for many years. Collection, $10.20. Ellen Pullam is greatly beloved by the people."

TENNESSEE.

D. W. Hayes, in the Western, says "the small pox has disappeared from Chattanoooga, and there is an increase in church attendance. One has been converted, and several are seeking. The Sunday-closing law, which had long remained inoperative, went into effect last Sunday week. The saloon men are indignant."

J. T. Henry, Spring City: "My second quarterly was held by Elder Provine. The brethren gave written reports, and the elder seemed to be pleased with the condition of our work. He preached and gave a lecture on education. The large congregation were aroused by his thrilling words. At love feast one professed faith in Christ, and the elder left us for other parts. The meeting was continued till Tuesday night, and 2 professed faith, and there were 3 accessions. Nine have been added this quarter. We have secured two new church lots with deeds."

E. M. Manson, Clifton: "We are having regular Thursday night class meetings and the members turn out to them splendidly. The spiritual and financial condition of the work has been a little dull on account of the small pox, but the clouds are subsiding and giving away and things are looking up. Our Sunday-school is getting on nicely, taking up the missionary claims once a month. The majority of the members of the church attend the Sunday-school, and seem to want to know more about our holy religion. We have lost several members from our ranks this year, some by death and some by emigration. I am teaching in connection with my circuit work, and the children are improving very fast; a good number of them have learned to read and write, and I think some of them are trying to get ready for the Central Tennessee College. We are expecting a sub-district conference here in June. The SOUTHWESTERN is much better than it used to be and it is becoming one of the best religious papers that the church affords. The West Tennessee district conference was one of great interest and profit to all present."

ALABAMA.

It is believed the Huntsville district conference, which met at Scottsboro, April 16, left a deep impression for spiritual good. Rev. O. R. Franklin presided. On Sunday Rev. James Moore, of Huntsville charge, preached at 11 o'clock to about 1500 persons.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON VII. May 13. THE SPREAD OF THE GOSPEL. (Acts xi, 19—30.)

You remember how cruel men put good Stephen to death. The enemies of Jesus drove a great many people away from their homes, and we find in our lesson that some of the disciples are far away, in Antioch, a city in Syria.

They are busy preaching about Jesus. God blessed the work, and a great many people believed in Jesus. Here, at Antioch, people who loved Jesus were first called Christians, and now all over the world followers of Christ are still called Christians.

At last word came to Jerusalem about the grand times at Antioch, and Barnabas, came to help the disciples. Barnabas worked, and saw help was needed, so off he went to Tarsus, where Saul, now called Paul, lived, and brought him to Antioch. Paul once helped drive some of these Christians away from their homes, and now he is only too glad to come and tell them about the wonderful change in his heart. Now he loves this Jesus enough to be ready to die for him as Stephen did.

Barnabas and Paul stayed about a year and then were sent on an errand of love to Jerusalem. A great famine was in Judea, and people had very little if any thing to eat. The Christians at Antioch took up collections, and sent Barnabas and Paul to carry the money to help the poor in Jerusalem. Loving Jesus makes people want to help others. People who never try to help any one do not love very much.

Are you a Christian? That means belonging to Christ. He died to save you, and if you do not belong to him it is because you won't. If you do not, kneel down right now, and ask Jesus to give you the new heart full of love so you can call yourself a Christian.—Western.

NEW BOOKS.

SEBA'S DISCIPLINE. By Maria Oliver. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Price $1.50. For sale at Eyrich's book store, 130 Canal street, New Orleans.

"Seba's Discipline" is a leaf from the book of every day life, and the trials which constituted that discipline are such as occur to many. But the interest of the book does not lie altogether in the story. Wrought into it are certain truths and lessons which the writer skilfully impresses upon the minds of her readers, and which can only serve to round out and perfect the lives of those who heed them. They teach that no earthly affliction or trouble is without its proper use, and that it is only through spiritual discipline that the whole being becomes purified.

STUDIES OF NEGLECTED TEXT, by Chas. S. Robinson, D.D., Pastor of the Memorial Church, New York City. Published by the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York. For sale by W. D. Skillman, 90 Camp street, New Orleans.

This is a volume of sermons selected from those delivered in the course of the author's searching pastoral work. They are peculiar in that they are founded upon passages of Scripture seldom chosen for the pulpit. As a preacher and expositor Dr. Robinson is clear, earnest, forcible and impressive. These sermons are published with an earnest hope that they may lead to a wider study of God's Word and a better understanding of the neglected texts. 329 pages. Price $1.25.

The farmers of Pike county, Alabama, do not raise their meat and bread at home, hence it is that they have borrowed $200,000 since last October.

The Colored Press Convention meets in St. Louis next July.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The May Wide Awake, closing volume XVI, opens with a lovely Isle of Wight frontispiece designed for Joaquin Miller's piquant sketch, "Mr. Tennyson's Fairies." Next, Mr. Hayden celebrates apple blossom time in a delicious orchard picture, illustrating Miss Watkins' poems. The long "short story" of the number is "Caryl's Plum," by Margaret Sidney, with four illustrations; and Rev. E. E. Clark represents the business men of Portland in his third and last paper on "Our Business Boys." Col. Hayne follows with "Old Geoffrey's Relic," a dramatic poem. The artistic charm centers in Hovenden's full-page drawing for Burns' famous lines, "A Man's a Man for a' that," and in Bodish's Picture Serial, "Through Spain on Donkey-Back." Marion Harland's "Cookery for Beginners," tells "What to do with 'Left-Overs.' The Chautauqua Readings, as has been well said, constitute almost an additional magazine. Only $2.50 a year. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, publishers.

The May Centurp makes appeal to a large variety of tastes. By way of history and adventure there are three illustrated papers: "The Aborigines and the Colonists," by Edward Eggleston. The first two papers by H. H., on the Spanish Missions of Southern California, entitled "Father Junipero and his Work," and thirdly, a paper of great readableness and ethnological value, by Frank H. Cushing, on his "Adventuree in Zuni." There are three sketches: One of Cardinal Manning, with a portrait, by Mr. C. Kegan Paul; an exposition of Salvani's King Lear, by Emma Lazarus; and a charming light essay by Henry James, Jr., on du Maurier's caricatures in "Punch." In fiction there is an installment of Mr. Howell's serial "A Woman's Reason;" a short story by F. R. Stockton in the Rudder Grange series—"Pomona's Daughter;" and the first half of a story of much freshness and humor by Joel Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus"), namely: "At Teague Poteet's." In "Topics of the Time" are brief papers on "The Effect of Civil Service Reform upon Parties," and "The Appointment of Postmasters."

The Chautauquan for May has an abundance of thought producing articles, of great interest to Chautauqua students and others. Price 20c. Meadville, Pa.

Our Little Ones (Boston: Russell Publishing Company) for May tells about the young fisherman, Eda amused the baby, and is filled with illustrations and short stories. Price $1.50 per year.

MasterI, a weekly magazine, for $3 a year, is a New York venture. The No. 1 is good, devoted to useful pastimes for young people, and illustrated. Single copies 10c. 805 Broadway, N. Y.

The Biographer is a monthly, of 23 Park Row, New York, devoted to portraits and sketches of prominent personages. Single copies 25c; $2.50 a year.

After a long absence the Journal of Education, of New Orleans, again appears on our table. The word "Louisiana" has been dropped from the title, and "For Home and School" appended. The title page is neat, and typographical improvement generally is noticed. There is a fair summary of local and general intelligence of an educational character. Price $1 yer year.

The Missonary Review for May-June comes to us from Princeton, N. J., freighted with missionary news and statistics from all parts of the world. We observe that in its review of foreign missions 1881-82, under "Methodist Episcopal Church, North," it classes the work of the "Methodist Episcopal Church." The blunder is misleading and stupid, if blunder it should be called, for every intelligent churchman knows that the affix "North" has no business there.

The May number of Haus und Herd, our German monthly, celebrates the advent of spring. The leading articles are a paper on Joseph Cook, by the editor; a sketch of Evangelical work in Germany, by C. Weiss; the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by the editor; and a paper on Sunday-schools by Dr. Christlieb. The recent Ohio flood is the subject of an illustrated article. There is a good variety of excellent reading matter, making it one of the best literary publications of the mouth The frontispiece is a steel engraving, "Good Morning."

"Ninety-four thousand persons," says Dr. Oswald, in the opening article of the April Popular Science Monthly, "die every year in the United States of consumption," and he then goes on to show how this fatality may be materially lessened and the frequency of the disease reduced by the rational employment of "The Remedies of Nature." Prof. T. S. Perry, in "Science and Conscience," sketches a scheme by which religion and science may live together. The paper is followed by Prof. T. C. Mendenhall's valuable address, delivered at the last meeting of the American Scientific Association, on the part that should be given in in the scheme of general education instruction in physics. The editor, in his "Table," presents vigorous arguments in favor of the study of Nature and Science against the demands of the classicists that preference be given to their favorite branches; and, in another article, favors the education of women to be women, and to fill woman's sphere in life. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

MARRIAGES.

Hell for their home near Rocky Fork, Williamson county. Mr. Coleman has just professed hope in Christ. May the Lord bless them. H. P.

William H. S. Mays, infant son of Mrs. S. W. Mays and Rev. J. C. Mays, died March 13, was dedicated to God, and the cause of education, but the Master took him to Himself. Sister Mays says: "Brother, I know his going is my loss. He cannot return, but I am going to him. I feel I have gained miles on my heavenly pilgrimage. It seems that he has taken me by the hand to lead me gently to the promised land. My hope has been always bright since I found Jesus precious to my soul, but now it is much brighter." It was my humble office, to join in holy wedlock these two Christian laborers. Both have written to me of their bereavment. They certanly have my sympathy and prayers. May the benediction of a Father in heaven be ever upon them.

Give Them a Chance.

If the thousands and tens of thousands of weak and weary sufferers throughout the land, who, in spite of care and skill, are steadily drifting downwards, could have the benefit of that subtile and singularly vitalizing agent which is called Compound Oxygen, the help, and ease, and comfort it would bring to wasting bodies and depressed spirits would be blessings beyond price. If, reader, you have an invalid wife, or mother, or daughter, or sister, or any one who is under your care and dependent upon you, and to whom life has become a burden through weakness and pain, consider seriously whether you are not bound, in both love and duty, to give this sufferer a chance of recovery, or, at least, the blessing of ease from pain. You are offered the amplest means of information in regard to this new Treatment. If you can examine testimony without prejudice, and can weigh evidence with judgment and discrimination, you can hardly fail to see that in Compound Oxyge there is a healing power that is simply wonderful. Let, then, the sick and suffering whom you care for and love, and for whom you have not been able to get relief, have a trial of this new remedy. It can do them no harm, and, seeing what it has done and is doing in so many thousands of cases all the probabilities are in favor of its doing them good. Send to Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, for their "Treatise on Compound Oxygen, its Nature, Action, and Results," and learn all about the remarkable cures which are being made by this new agent: The Treatise will be sent free.

The Housekeeper.

A Letter for Hou ekeepers.

BY MRS. L. C BRADEN.

I notice that the kind editors of the SOUTHWESTERN have devoted a corner to Honsekeepers. We read in the church papers many articles on the doctrines taught in the Bible, and on the workings of the church in foreign lands, in the temperance cause, and in the Sunday-school. Much good advice is given to people in various conditions in life. We are better and wiser for what we read. We thank the SOUTHWESTERN that it has not overlooked us. We believe that God has given us our work, and what can be nobler than to make happy homes where our better natures are developed and we can teach our loved ones the first principles of all that is good. There is a tendency in this age to place housekeeping in the backgrounnd, and housekeepers often really get the idea that they are mere drudges and are not appreciated, and cannot do what they might in more public life.

One of the sweetest songs I ever heard is "Home, Sweet Home." In it we are told, "Be it ever so humble there is no place like home." To its truthfulness every heart responds. The author of that song touched a tender chord in the human breast and its echoes are resounding all over the world. If there is no place like home, then there is no one like a home-maker. Only think of that! ye tired and discouraged housekeepers. What could a home be worth without the kind and loving heart at its head!

We are doing our part towards making people better and happier. The world as it is cannot do without us. Preachers of the Gospel and teachers in their work know well the value of home training. Great responsibilities rest upon, and cares accumulate and sometimes we get over anxious.

I love to read that little episode in the history of our Savior, where He visited the home of Martha and Mary. How, like us housekeepers, Martha was! She loved the Savior and tried to please him, by her "much serving." She was becoming rather a heavy burden in her own strength. His rebuke, "Thou art careful and troubled about many things," though it seems a little harsh, was only to teach her that there was a better way to serve Him; and we too often forget to sit at His feet, and learn the right way, and we bear burdens that we need not. I suppose we are not take unnecessary care; He who has given us our work will give us strength to do it, if we ask Him. Whenever we feel overburdened, that little short prayer, "Lord help me," uttered at any time, soothes ruffled nerves wonderfully and is a better tonic than any medicine I know.

Nashville, Tenn.

Here are some recipes which are very good for every day use and might do for visitors, if accompanied by a hearty welcome:

LEMON PIE.—Squeeze the juice of half a lemon in a dish, add three-fourths of a cup of sugar, two eggs, one tablespoonful of corn starch, and a cup of water. Mix well and bake in one crust.

A nice simple cake can be made with one cup of sugar, three-fourths of a cup of butter, one cup of milk, two eggs, one of raisins, one teaspoonful of baking powder, and flour enough to make a stiff batter.

TURKEY TO ROAST.—A good sized turkey should be roasted two hours and a half or three hours, very slowly at first. Stale bread is better than rolled crackers for stuffing. Save all the bits of bread and dry them. When well dried roll with a rolling pin on a bread board. Take of these fine crumbs enough to fill [illegible] of the turkey quite full [illegible] spoonful of black [illegible] tablespoonful of salt, teaspoonful of powdered sage, two eggs well beaten, two tablespoonfuls of butter, and cold water enough to moisten, add a tablespoonful of onion chopped fine.

A VERY CHEAP PUDDING.—One quart of flour, one half pound of suet chopped very fine; add a good pinch of salt; wet with water; roll out and spread a layer of any kind of fruit you please over it; roll it up, and put it in a cloth, leaving room for the pudding to swell. Steam for an hour and a half.

CHOCOLATE CUSTARD.—Break two sections of chocolate in a half dozen places, put in a pan over boiling water, with milk enough to barely cover it; mash and stir perfectly smooth, then add the rest of the milk (one quart in all, reserving three table-spoonfuls in which to dissolve the corn starch), one cupful of sugar, the yolks of six eggs, a heaping table-spoonful of corn starch; beat the yolks, add the sugar and corn starch (dissolved in milk), stir all slowly in the boiling milk in which the chocolate is dissolved, add a pinch of salt, and let cook a few minutes, stirring constantly. Eat cold with white cake.

ONE DAY NEARER HOME.

BY MRS. T. E. HANCOCK.

I'm one day nearer my home to-night,
Nearer than ever before;
I'm one day nearer the fields of light,
Away on the other shore.
I'm one day nearer to wearing my crown,
Nearer than ever before;
Nearer to laying my burden down
Safe on the empyrean shore.

I'm one day nearer the pearly gates,
Which the angels left ajar;
In the golden city a harp awaits
My coming from afar.
I'm one day nearer my Father's house,
Where the shining angels be;
I'm nearer the great white throne,
And the beautiful crystal sea.

I'm one day nearer the shining host
On the fadeless, golden shore;
They crossed the mystic stream of death,
And will come to us no more.
Yet I listen—I wait for a phantom barge,
To bear me to their side;
I watch for the boatman's noiseless oar,
To sweep the silvery tide.

The boatman pale will come for me,
And grasp my wasted hand;
Together we'll cross the unknown sea,
This side the golden strand.
And when we reach the other shore,
I shall meet the angel band,
Who wait to deck my youthful brow
With flowers of the fadeless land.

The whole number of women reported as pursuing gainful occupations in the United States, in 1870, was 1,836,288, In 1880 the number was 2,647,157, showing an increase during the ten years, of 810,869. This result shows that the number of women engaged in occupations has increased at a much larger rate than the female population, and is mainly due to the growth of manufactures under our protective policy, which have opened new, lucrative employments to women as well as men. Fifty years ago women could not earn over $1,50 to $2.50 per week, inclusive of board. Now, women are able to earn two and three times as much. The wages of men have increased in the same period, but not as much, proportionately as the wages of women.

It is the purpose of God that from every nation and kindred and people and tongue some shall be gathered to swell the great white robed multitude around the throne. How confidently then may we in these last days "ask in faith nothing doubting," that a glorious ingathering from heathendom may take place! It is "the good pleasure of his will" that it should be so; but in order that it may be so, we must pray and yield ourselves and our substance more freely to God; to go, or to give that others may go, for, "how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?" —Religious Beyond.

Some people are like eagles which rise easily and sail high; others remind us of the bobolink, ever ready to fly, but slow to leave the "swinging briar or weed." Napoleon conquered his enemies before they began to organize. The unready is the unsuccessful. Dispatch ends the business before the cautious and dilatory man draws his boots on.—The Christian Witness.

A GOOD COMPARISON.

The Rev. William Roulatt, a well-known Methodist clergyman, residing at Naples, draws the following amusing, but apt comparison between Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a ferret.

"A ferret when placed at the entrance of a rat hole, enters the aperture, travels along the passage, seizes upon the rat, exterminates his existence and draws the animal's defunct carcass to the light. And in like manner have I found Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge to operate upon worms, those dreadful and dangerous tormentors of children. This remedy, like the ferret, enters the aperture of the mouth, travels down the gullet, hunts round the stomach and lays hold of the worms, shakes the life out of the reptiles, sweeps clean their den, and carries their carcasses clear out of the system. This, at least, has been the effect of the Vermifuge upon my children."

—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung.."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krekhiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

A few years ago, as a stranger rose in one of our city pulpits to begin the service, several of the congregation began to leave the church. He was a lame man, and the pulpit was located near the doors.

"Wait a moment, my friends," said the preacher, "till I get my hat, and I'll go with you."

Down he came, limping, hat in hand, and left the church. This abrupt closing of the services taught the people that there was at least one minister who would not be treated with contempt. On a certain occasion, the eloquent Dr. E. H. Chapin, being sick, was compelled to ask a friend to preach for him. As the stranger rose to announce the opening hymn, a score of persons rose to go out. This clergyman also was equal to such an emergency.

"All," he said, "who came here to worship Dr. Chapin will please leave now; but those who came to worship God will sing the forty-third hymn."

That stopped the exodus.

A little girl was sent to a store the other day to buy some lace. The clerk, after putting up the package, said. "Well, there is one and a half yards of lace at ten cents a yard. How much does it come to?" To which the miss pertly replied: "Well, I'm not going to tell; I have to study arithmetic all the rest of the week, and I'm not going to bother my head with it Saturday."

Hop Bitters are the Purest and Best Bitters Ever Made.

They are compounded from Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake and Dandelion,—the oldest, best and most valuable medicines in the world, and contain all the best and most curative properties of all other remedies, being the greatest Blood Purifier, Liver Regulator, and Life and Health Restoring Agent on earth. No disease or ill health can possibly long exist where these Bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.

They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels or urinary organs, or who require an Appetizer, Tonic and mild Stimulant, Hop Bitters are invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable, use Hop Bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

Do not suffer or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "Invalid's Friend and Hope," and no person or family should be without them. Try the Bitters to-day.

I have seen men make great fortunes only to lose them. I have seen men pass from beautiful homes to the penitentiary, and I have seen their wives and children in one year flashing with jewels, and in the next struggling to keep away the wolf that was staring in at them at the door. But I have never seen the righteous forsaken. I have never seen those fall into such trouble who studied to be quiet, and did their own business and worked with their own hands. The man who makes edges that will cut, the man who builds houses that will stand, the doctor who will cure, the teacher who knows how to teach, and the lawyer who maintains both justice and the sanctity of truth will not fall whether the times be good or bad.—*Rev. Ague Cure is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic, and other poisonous minerals form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL ... d
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

In every instance, where the quarterly conference comences before 7 p. m. the quarterly love feast will be held the same evening, except at points where I have appointed to stop only one night. Let due preparations be made for the best possible results at the quarterly meetings in each charge. In the language of the great Apostle, "Let every thing be done decently, and in order." Remember, only written reports will be accepted. Class leaders will find disciplinary form for their report on page 45 of the discipline of 1880. A. E. P. ALBERT, P. E.

Editorial Notes.

Why don't yon take yonr children to church with you?

Your safety, happiness, and all yonr sacred interests unite in demanding that yon banish, now and forever, all intoxicants from your house. Away with the accursed stuff! "Tonch not, taste not, handle not the nnclean thing."

President Woolsey says that: "the ratio of divorces to marriages or to popnlation in the United States exceeds that of any conntry in the Christiau world". If this is true as donbtless it is, it presents a horrible depravity, and an unpardonable looseness in the morals of this natiou.

The western towns are making their liqnor licenses high. Des-Moines, Iowa, adopted $1000; Boone, $500; followed by Daveuport, Burlington, Lyons, Atlantic, and other places in the same State. Morris, Illinois, adopted $500, Paris $800, payable quarterly; Danville $800.

The Kansas Methodist thinks that the next General Conference shonld elect ten or fifteen new bishops and theu wisely locate them in all the important centres of the conntry. We think that Louisiana shonld have a resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and another in Texas. In no other way conld the interests of our Church be better promoted. There are multitudes of onr people who never saw a bishop, and they would give a barrel of sweet potatoes most any day to feast their eyes an honr or two by looking upon a live bishop.

Thanks, mainly to "Curtis," of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, who discovered the scheme while on a western tour, and to the decided conrse of that journal, a great wroug has been averted. An error was made, a miscalculation in surveying the Zuni Indian reservation, and the intention of the government that it should inclnde the springs, by which they had converted a desert into fertile soil, not carried ont. Recently Senator Logan, of Illinois, has been prospecting in the West, and his son-in-law Paymaster W. T. Tucker and associates have taken up six claims, in all 2400 acres, embracing these springs. If granted it would practically cnt off the water supply of the Zunis. The intention of the government, and the error of the surveyor was admitted, and yet Senator Logan after personal inspection was ready to take the land if he could get it. The Zunis are neither warlike nor nomadic; they support themselves by farming and stock raising, and every principle of honor demanded their protection. "Cnrtis" and the Inter-Ocean wrote np the matter as it deserved, the snrveyor added his testimony, and finally President Arthur issned an executive order, ameuding the origiual oue of Presideut Hayes, so as to inclnde within the Znni reservation, and render void the claims of Tucker & Co. The New York Times says fitly "it was a piece of work in which no Senator of the United States onght to have been engaged," aud which "no honorable man cau defend."

At the May dinner of the New York Saturday Night Clnb, Mr. Clark Bell presided, with Gen. Grant and Ex-Senator Roscoe Conkling at his right. During the evening Gen. Grant was called on to speak and he dwelt upon the relations between this country and Mexico, the wonderful resonrces of onr neighboring republic, and the maintneance of a close alliance. Ex-Senator Conkliug followed, and after expressing his belief that the failnre to nominate Gen. Grant for President at Chicago has cost this nation in progress fully ten years, he said the Democrats were about to take control of the country, "the so-called fight against bosses was the particular form that a certain class of men give to a raid npon superiority." These sentiments were not applnded by the Saturday Night Club.

Some Christian men and women of this city, withont reference to their ecclesiastical relation, are forming an organization to better provide for those who are poor aud ueedy and also to protect themselves from impostors. We have iu this city a large number of warm hearted and Christian people who are anxious to do their whole duty to the deserving poor, and at the same time do not want to encourage tramps who are a pest to any commnnity. This is an effort in the right direction, and has not begun any too soon. It is well-known that we have a large nnmber of poor in our city to say nothing of those who are freqnently imported.

The appointment of D. Randolph Keim as chief examiner of the Civil Service Commission, on the nnanimons recommendation of that body, was generally regarded as an egregious blunder. Mr. Keim is charged with being a defender of machine political methods, and therefore disqualified to be a genuine civil service reformer. The President, in deference to pnblic protest, withheld the commission, and subsequently appointed Charles Lyman, of Connecticut, who is chief clerk in the United States Treasurer's office, to the position.

The article on the mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Sonth, entitled "Why There?" from the pen of Rev. T. C. Clendenning, of Galena, Illinois, and which we repnblish from the Northwestern Christian Advocate, is a thorongh, practical and most truthful presentation of a serious qnestion. Onr readers will thank us for placing it before them. We commend it to the church everywhere as expressive of the sentiments almost unanimously entertained by the colored membership, and by the whites long and intimately connected with the work of our church. Let Bro. Clendenning's article be read and pondered.

Why There?

REV. T. C. CLENDENNING,
Galena, Ill.

Why is the Methodist Episcopal Church in that part of the Sonth uot occnpied by her previons to the late war? Is it because that territory would be destitute of Methodism but for her presence? Surely not. If we take no account of non-episcopal Methodist churches, we still have the Methodist Episcopal Church Sonth; African Methodist Episcopal Chnrch; African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America. Are those churches genuine Methodist Episcopal chnrches? In doctrine they are identical with the Methodist Episcopal church, and in government they are almost identical. The Methodist Episcopal church by the ratification of the work of the Cape May commission has pnblicly asserted the legitimacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church Sonth. She sends to, and receives from all those churches fraternal greetings and messengers. Are those churches aggressive? In the order named above, the first nnmbered at the close of the war surely not more than 500,000; now she reports 850,000. The second then, 50,000, now 391,000; the third then, probably, 25,500, now 300,000; the fourth then organized with about 80,000. now reports 125,000. Two years after the war the Methodist Episopal church reported 1,146,081, now 1,724,420. From these figures it will be seen that, so far as numbers are concerned, they are, to say the least, qnite as aggressive as is the Methodist Episcopal church. Are those churches advocates of slavery? If they were, the institution has beeu dead for twenty years. They have no power to effect its resnrrection. Do they advocate it? The membership of three of them, aggregating 816,000, is composed entirely of ex-slaves and their children. The man who can believe them to be advocates of slavery is beside himself. Is the Methodist Chnrch South such au advocate? There is nothing of it iu her discipline; nothiug of it in annnal or General conference action.

Recently I have traveled down the Mississippi to New Orleans, across Florida to Jacksonville, up the Atlantic coast to Washington, back throngh Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky homeward. I met and conversed with a nnmber of gentlemen from varions parts of the Sonth. Not one of them expressed regret for the overthrow of either slavery or the rebelliou. On the contrary, they all with one accord (save oue young blood from Louisiana) did assert satisfaction with these results. I believe those men represeuted, as they professed to represent, the feelings and sentimeuts of the Southern people. It seems to me unjnst to charge the Methodist Episcopal Church South of to-day with being either proslavery or disloyal. As a matter of fact, the political platforms upon which they stand, and the principles which they vote upou, these subjects are almost identical with those of the opposite party. It cannot be that the Methodist Episcopal Church extends the fraternal hand to that church, saying, "We are brethren in Christ, bnt we believe yon are hypocrites and liars when you vote." Because that cannot be, therefore it cannot be that the Methodist Episcopal church is iu the Sonth to act as a protest agaiust the spirit of slavery and reason in the Methodist Episcopal Chnrch Sonth. Are those churches interested in the ednication of the people? and have they denominational schools under their care? If any mau donbts, let him ask one of his miuisters or, better still, one of their college agents. Do they iudeed need money? and will they accept and rightly appropriate it, if sent from the North? It is donbtful if money given to the cause of education conld find more ueedy, more worthy, or more efficieut channels for the accomplishment of good, than in the demauds calling for it offered by those chnrches. This is especially true of the colored churches

Are the doors of those chnrches open for the receptiou of ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Cenrch who may desire to live and labor with them? Every door of every church (nnless it be that of the last organized) to every mau, woman, and child from the Methodist Episcopal Church who will accept of their invitation to enter. is as wide open as is that of the Methodist Episcopal church. That territory has Episcopal Methodism four layers deep withont the Methodist Episcopal church. These Methodisms are certainly living branches of the Methodist vine. They are one in doctrine and economy, and in evangelistic and educational work, with the Methodist Episcopal church. They have channels open, and ready to be opened. in which they can appropriate the money and means which she is willing to give to bless the people of the South. They are ready to receive, aud will most cordially welcome to all rights, privileges aud labors, all those ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal chnrch who may wish to live and labor with them. Why, then, has the Methodist Episcopal church as a distinct organization entered, and why does she remain in that territory? A few years ago I conld have given an answer that practically satisfied myself, although there have been for a long time some ugly facts in the way of my answer that I conld not entirely ignore. I shonld have said that she is there to plant anti-slavery, anti-secession, anti-caste, Methodism. While those colored chnrches are anti-slavery and loyal, yet they all recognize the color line. The Methodist Episcopal church is there to ignore it. As to slavery and secession, my answer has been blown to the winds by facts already referred to iu this letter. How is it with regard to caste? Alas! alas! for my answer, the Methodist Episcopal church has done but little on that line, and is doing less and less as the years go by. Wherever aud whenever she gets a little nucleus of white ministers, she at once organizes conferences ou the color liue. These conferences have no more real affiliation with each other than they do with the black and white conferences of other churches. The Methodist Episcopal church is establishing her schools on the color line. Either because the white children of the South will not attend school with the children of color (and these children are mostly adults), or for some reason nnknown, this church is establishing separate schools for the whites and blacks. More than this, the last General conference authorized the Freedmen's Aid Society (officered by white meu) to appropriate a part of the funds raised for the educatiou of the freedmen to the support of these schools for the whites. Although that actiou was taken not quite three years ago, there are now fifteen of these white schools, while there are but twenty-five for the blacks. 'Tis true this aid to schools for whites, was to be rendered only "wheu it could be done without embarrassment to the schools for the freedmen." That being the case, it is to be taken for granted that a sufficieut number of schools have been established for the freedmen, and these schools are above all financial embarrassment. How about New Orleans university, Wiley nniversity, Clark university, Walden seminary, Texas seminary, aud, indeed, almost every other one of these schools? Why are they so earnestly crying for money throngh Drs. Rnst and Hartzell, if they are in this comfortable condition, and if after caring for them there was a surplus fund snfficient to assist more than half as many more schools for the whites? Bnt, be it it remembered, that to no one of the white schools, helped with money raised by the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, would a colored youth, in all probability, be admitted oue whit qnicker than to Vanderbilt or Emory.

When the members of the Methodist Episcopal chnrch meet for public worship in the south, do the rich and the poor, the black and the white meet together, feeling that "the Lord is the maker of them all?" Where the conferences are organized on the color line that answers the question. They are so organized, I believe, everywhere except in Mississippi, South Carolina, Louisiana aud Florida. In South Carolina there is not a single white church. I do not know if there is one in Mississippi. Florida has asked for divisions and color line. Louisana has at least one white church. Where? In New Orleans. In that city there is a large number of colored Methodist Episcopal churches, but a little handful of whites must have a church building and service to themselves. Iu each of the conferences in Missouri there is a colored district; they are each what the name indicates. In Alabama recently, it is currently reported, one of the ministers of the white Methodist Episcopal conference publicly iuformed the negroes if they came to his church they were to take seats in the gallery. Bro. T. pastor of oue of the largest and most impotant colored churches in the South (himself a white man), said to me: "The Methodist Episcopal Church is takeing the same positiou ou the questiou of color as that occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church South." Bro. D., member of another conference and principal of one of the best schools, I found mourning over the same fact. The most intelligent colored ministers of onr church, with whom I was privileged to meet, refered to the same matter with deep interest In view of certaiu facts, he declared it almost impossible, iu some places, to hold our colored members. As I understood him, he seemed to doubt whether it could be done very much longer, nnless there was a change in the method of procedure. The colored people in giving the reasons for the divisious among them as Methodists, could only say of those in the Methodist Episcopal Church, "Dey hes white bishops."

If the Methodist Episcopal church in her distinct organization is in the south to protest and work against caste, then there has never beeu a more stupendous failure since the world was made. Whatever may be said of the first few years after the war, yet there is no fact more clear than this, to-day her tendency and influence and work are all upon the side of caste. Her conferences are caste conferences, her schools are caste schools, her worship is caste worship.

Now, if the Methodist Episcopal church is not in the south to work against the spirit of caste, will any man give a clear statement of the object and the reason for her distinct mission in that part of our conntry? Why should Episcopal Methodisms there be six layers deep (ours is a double layer), simply on account of color? If this color line must be recognized, why then, let it be recognized at once, openly and above board. Snrely episcopal Methodism does not need six machiues and six companies of workmen to do the work which two at most ought to accomplish. If this color line must be recognized, then let not the Methodist Episcopal church bear the responsibility of a further division of those Methodist sheep, even if this further division will afford some of those colored brethren the luxury of "whtie bishops." If this color line must be recognized, then no longer let us have the responsibility of wasting the Lord's money (when there is so much need elsewhere), by building three, four, five or six schools, or churches; or sustaining as many preachers and sets of general church officers, when two at most are sufficient. If this color liue must be recognized, then let the Methodist Episcopal Church seek the union of all colored Methodist; open the way for and advise her colored membership to unite with the African Methodist Episcopal church. Let them take all their chnrches and schools and other property. take all the white men and women they need to help them in the initiation or further progress of their work. Let future contributions for them be given to them, and not to others. If this color liue must be recognized, let the Methodist Episcopal church do her part to make colored Methodism one, and white Methodism one also. If this color line need not, and ought not, to be recognized, theu why is the Methodist Episcopal church guilty of such recognition? In a word if this distinction should be made, then the Methodist Episcopal church as a distinct organization in the south is only creating and perpetuating divisions, and for no good reason. If this distinction should be made, and nevertheless it is made by this church, then what does she more than others? Do not even all other Methodisms the same? Why there? —Northwestern.

Says Zion's Herald of Boston: It is a little ridiculous to those who knows the real condition of matters at the State Almshouse, Tewksbury, to read the astounding statements that are passing through the press of the country. One wonld suppose that babies were deliberately murdered there in order to sell bodies to medical students; that it was overrun with rats and horribly dirty, and that a large bnsiuess was done in tanning human skins for slippers! "O tempora! O mores!"

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. A. Luster, Eola: "We are getting along very well, and the church is prospering. We have commenced repairing the old parsonage, and hope to be able to move into it in a few weeks."

Rev. Wm. Davis, at Washington, reports a growing interest in all the departments of his church.

E. D. Bowers, Springfield: "I arrived at my work, accompanied by the former pastor, J. W. Lewis, Feb. 22d. I found a handful of Christians that received me with warm hearts. I have 20 full members scattered for miles through the country, but I have walked all through my circuit and succeeded in gathering them together. We are few in number, but are working methodically. We have our cards out for 3d Sunday of May, and a grand basket meeting to be given, the proceeds of which shall be to repair our church. Our presiding elder, M. Dale, held our first quarterly conference, April 28th, and found the church in a good spiritual condition. Reports all correct. The estimation for preacher is $100; presiding elder, $12. Collected this quarter, $16,65. At Ohio, 9 miles from Springfield, Judge Kemp donated a lot to the Methodist Episcopal Church, but as there are now many churches in the act of building and the amount of money in the Church Extension all invested, I was advised by the elder to wait until the first of the year. We anticipate a good work this year, as the white friends visit us and take an active part in the church. The Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition. We are organized into a missionary society; officers and preachers of the church attend regularly; average attendance 20; total number, 45. But we anticipate a large school shortly."

MISSISSIPPI.

M. Brown, Shubuta: "My work is in a prosperous condition. Received this year 45 members in full connection, and 25 on probation."

P. Harris, Yazoo City: "At first quarterly conference we had a reviving sermon by Rev. G. Jackson. Elder Barney was in the chair. The reports from leaders and stewards were good. Sunday-school is prospering with 150 on the roll. Rev. J. Holmes preached at 11 o'clock on Sunday; the elder talked to the Sunday-school in the morning and preached to a large congregation at three; 157 partook of the Lord's Supper. We have an increase of 24 members and probationers, and have collected $90 for wintering the church. We have a class of young people who are carrying on the home mission work and they deserve praise."

L. J. S. Bell, Coffadeliah: "Collection for pastor was $22,35, and not $2,25 as printed May 3d. We had a glorious time yesterday at Mount Zion. We are moving forward in the good work."

TEXAS.

W. J. Mitchell, Bremond: "The ninth session of the Waco district conference convened in the Calvert M. E. Church, April 5th. Rev. S. [illegible], presiding elder, in the chair. [illegible] brethren answered to their names. Committees were appointed. The presiding elder's report showed the work to be improving. Pastors' reports showed a revival spirit at all the charges. The reports of local preachers, exhorters, class leaders, district stewards, and Sunday-school superintendents, were called for and read with interest. Marlin was the choice for the next district conference. The Sunday-school was addressed by Revs. A. Foster, R. Gates and S. Gates, and gave us some good thoughts. At 11 o'clock there was an old-fashioned love meeting. In the afternoon Elder S. Gates, and at night Rev. [illegible] J. Burris, preached. The pastor, B. F. Smith, took excellent care of the conference."

H. C. Cavender, Pleasanton: "There is a large attendance each Sunday, and class meeting every Saturday night."

A. Brown, Mexia: "Elder Gates held first quarterly conference, and preached a rousing sermon. Forty-nine were at Lord's Supper. Collection $5,35."

Aaron Taylor, Crockett: "I found four appointments on Madison circuit, and out of 150 I can testify to 85 met in love feast. We have plenty to do."

TENNESSEE.

J. L. Massey, Martin: "I have made a visit to Union City; preached there twice and have organized a church with 13 members. They are trying to purchase a church lot. All are good Methodists who have just moved in from other parts. I will have to preach in the courthouse on my next appointment. We ask all to help them both by means and prayers. All amounts received will be acknowledged in the SOUTHWESTERN."

MISSISSIPPI.

N. Cannon, Bay St. Louis and Pass Christian Circuit: "Our first quarterly conference was held at Pearlington, M. E. Church, March 3 and 4. Rev. W. McDonald, P. E., was on time. Our session was a pleasant one, with a full attendance, and the brethren made their reports in a business-like manner. The elder met the Sabbath school on Sunday morning and gave good instruction. At 11 and 3 o'clock he preached sermons full of the Holy Ghost, and administered the sacrament to 55 persons. Elder's collection, $17,50; paid pastor $46,75. The estimating committee estimated to pay the pastor $5; traveling expenses $33; presiding elder $70; Bishops $5; for conference claimants $5; for benevolent causes $75. I have four Sunday-schools doing well, and my circuit is in a prosperous condition. Pearlington has bought a bell for the church at $55."

FLORIDA.

Rev. S. B. Darnell, of the Cookman Institute, Jacksonville, writes to N. Y. Advocate, April 20: "Our season is over, and the visitors flown. Small-pox scare hurried them off, broke up my school, and prostrated business temporarily. In twenty-four hours my school, fled, and left me with nine, and opportunity to meditate on the 'transitory condition of all temporal things.' We are somewhat embarrassed in financial matters from this sudden collapse of affairs. We owe yet about $800 on the new building. I am certain we made no mistake about the construction of it, for we could not have accomodated the pupils. Indeed, this year adds 50 per cent., filling all the available space, requiring us to use our dining-room and office for recitations. Family are quite well. Have some fear from small-pox; 43 cases; 21 deaths up to this; all colored save 4."

The "Catholic Directory" reports for 1883 that the Roman Catholic Church has in the United States 13 archbishops, 59 bishops, 6,546 priests, 6,241 churches, 1,180 chapels, 1,768 stations, 31 ecclesiastical seminaries, 81 colleges, 579 academies, 2,491 parochial schools, with 428,642 pupils; 275 asylums, 185 hospitals; and a Catholic population of 6,832,054. The Catholic Standard, of Philadelphia, finds much fault with this table. It thinks the reports present figures of increase unsupported by facts. The Catholic Standard ought to know.

Rev. J. H. Riddick, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, formerly of Baltimore but now of Staunton, Virginia, made complaint to the officials of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company that he had been ill treated and ejected from the Viaduct Hotel, Relay Station, belonging to the company, because of his color. The company has issued a statement that it makes no distinctions whatever, and instructing the managers of the hotels to treat all patrons with civility. Mr. Riddick declares that he will have his rights vindicated.

East Tennessee Conference---Chattanooga District.

MR. EDITOR:—I commenced my second round on the Jasper circuit, as nothing could be done on the Chattanooga Mission or circuit my first appointment. On my second round, Revs. B. B. Briant and T. Jackson, pastors, were kept in on account of the small-pox around Chattanooga. Part of these charges were not infected with the disease, but the excitement prevailed so it was not safe to call the people together. On February 10th I went on the Jasper circuit, Rev. J. A. Boyd, pastor, and found him at his post. His reports were somewhat encouraging at that time, but since then he has quit the work, and I have supplied it with Rev. Marvin McCagg, a local preacher.

For Kingston circuit, Rev. A. J. Fletcher, pastor, the quarterly conference was held at Rockwood. Bro. Fletcher had been laboring under some mistake, but he is moving on. The Sunday-schools are very good both at Kingston and Rockwood. Rev. J. C. Tate had been here in a protracted effort with some success, and had closed and gone to Glenmary.

At Robertsville circuit, Rev. G. W. Coman, pastor, the conference was to be held at Shady Grove, but owing to excessive rain fall the creeks arose and we could not cross them till Monday. I then left Kingston for Shady Grove, but the conference was moved to Oakdale, to one of the blasting furnaces. Had preaching and administered the sacrament. On Tuesday, at Oakdale, I found Rev. J. C. Tate, conference evangelist, in a protracted effort. In some respects the conference reports were encouraging.

On Soddy circuit, Rev. Sam. Burnett, pastor, the first and second conferences were held, because the excitement over the small-pox was such that the people could not be got together. Bro. Burnett in the commencement of the conference year thought he could not stay on the work, because he could get nothing for his labor. He told me he thought about Job, and would stay. I trust in him. I baptized 5 and took 1 in full fellowship, and when I left on Monday morning he was laboring in a protracted meeting, with 8 at the altar Sunday night.

On Ebenezer circuit, Rev. Jacob Wade, pastor, we held all our regular meeting services. After preaching at 11 o'clock Sunday, the sacrament was administered to colored and white bowed at the altar together. It was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. At three in the afternoon the Sunday-school met; the exercises were short but pointed. Our educational work was not forgotten.

On Riceville circuit Rev. A. Roach is pastor. He is a young man but not very able bodied. He has too much work for one man to do. He is taking up a new work and looks after it this conference year. On some portions of this circuit the people are very poor, but willing to do what they can to carry forward the work of the Lord.

On Georgetown circuit, Rev. Moses Cox, pastor, the first and second conferences were held together. Part of the circuit had been infected with the small-pox, and the excitement was all over the work. When the conference was held the prospects were very encouraging for the future. Though this is a poor circuit they seem to be earnest Christians.

On Cleveland circuit, Rev. H. N. Brown, pastor, the conference was held at Ooltewah instead of Cleveland. Services had been suspended for several weeks in all the churches in Cleveland. The pastor's report was very encouraging. He had held a two weeks' meeting on the circuit, one professed faith in Christ, one was relicensed, five additions to the church, and raised $12.50 to pay on church lot. We need a better house to worship in. The people are trying to do something in that direction.

On Big Spring circuit, Rev. William Bluford, pastor, the first and second conferences were held together. The excitement over the small-pox interfered with any one that did not live in the community; therefore we had to wait till it had abated. The pastor's report was very encouraging. He had taken up new preaching places, and found 14 members like sheep having no shepherd, he gathered them into the folds, an addition to the church from work assigned him at conference.

On Washington circuit, Rev. T. J. Henry, pastor, the conference was held Saturday evening. The reports were very encouraging, especially the benevolent collections. The pastor reports new fields open to our church, and he had succeeded in getting two lots. They will be deeded to the M. E. Church. The people of Spring City were glad to see the work of God there once more revived. Bro. Henry is working up all the interests of the church.

At Chattanooga station, Rev. W. Hayes, pastor, the charge has suffered dreadfully with the small-pox this conference year, losing 25 or 30 members. The Sunday-school is prospering. Several added to the church last quarter. The trustees and pastor have built a parsonage with three rooms on the church lot. I anticipate they will begin a new church if there is no epidemic in the city this year. Seven or eight new preaching places were opened to the brethren this year on the district. I am still puseing the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE into the hands of preachers and people.

From Pearl River.

DEAR EDITOR:—As this is my third and last year upon Pearl River, I desire to say that I feel gratified with the past year's work. I feel that more ought to have been done than we have accomplished, but we hope to do better. A year ago we collected money enough to ceil our church, and appointed a committee to purchase, but through bad management they failed to get it. We had trouble in getting the money out of the hands of the committee; then we entrusted it to the justice of the peace, who promised to get the lumber forthwith. He failed also; and one year has passed, and we have no ceiling and no money. We expect to bring the justice to the bar, and get both justice and the money. This church is in a beautiful location and surrounded with pine trees, and about twenty-five or thirty yards runs a beautiful stream of water emptying into Pearl River. It was bought under Dr. Hartzell in 1873, and is 30x50 feet. We are building a church about ten miles distant, on the line of the Northeastern Railroad, now under construction, and we expect to have it ready in two or three weeks, all debts paid and clear title.

Elder Dale held our first quarterly conference on the 22d. There was a full attendance. One local preacher had died. Tho reports showed the circuit to be in a thriving condition; eight have been converted, with seventeen on probation. The pastor's salary was raised from $200 to $300; presiding elder's from $20 to $28.

Our church at Mandeville is being put in splendid condition by the officers and trustees. Joseph Delaney, a local preacher, and myself occupied the pulpit last month. A nice fence is being built around the church property. On the third Sunday in June we expect to have another baptizing in the lake at Mandeville, and we invite all friends to attend.

From San Antonio.

MR. EDITOR:—Wednesday preceding the quarterly conference, held on the 7th inst., we closed a protracted meeting resulting in 15 conversions. All excepting one joined our church. Rev. R. Reader, of San Marcos, was with us and rendered valuable service. Rev. T. Wadkins and Rev. W. H. Mosby spent a couple of nights with us, and did much good. Our quarterly conference was a success. Class leaders, stewards, trustees and committee on parsonage furniture reported favorably.

On Sunday the elder met the Sabbath school and spoke some very interesting words to our little folks, which we hope will prove a blessing. At 11 o'clock Rev. S. Gibbs preached for us. At 3 and at 8 o'clock p. m. the elder preached two sermons that will no doubt be long remembered by our people. We presented our list to those who had subscribed various amounts for the repairing of the church. The result, including P. E. collection, which was $33.10, amounted to $417.05. Mr. Editor, our aim is to be ready for the annual conference. Our people at this point love their presiding elder and will support him. The sacrment was administered at night, and 112 partook thereof. Our love feast was a success. Many spoke for the Lord; collection $3.05. I am glad to note here that our people are seeming to be more interested about their own business or duties than heretofore. Our church is winning favor every day. Our congregations are generally so large that we can scarcely find room to seat them. Many of the people come to the church and are compelled to stand up all the while service is going on, from the fact that they cannot find seats. Our people are talking of building another church within two years. Allow me to say just here, if the Methodist Episcopal Church expects to do much good in San Antonio, she will have to make ample provisions for the sheltering of her people. If she does not, others will. The tide is turned toward our church. Pray for its continuance. The two Baptist denominations are expecting to build this year. The African Methodists contemplate building a parsonage. Many improvements are being made among the people, and Methodists are not known to stay behind even if they get behind. Remember, the words above are not spoken simply for convenience sake, but because they are facts. I mean the provisions that ought and must be made for the sheltering of the people who are seeking shelter under the roof of the old M. E. Church. There are many who could no doubt speak upon this important question of the necessity of building another church, if asked to do so, namely, the pastor in charge of Trinity M. E. Church, Avenue C; also the Rev. Hammond, one of the presiding elders of our Iowa conference, and many of the white citizens of this city who attend our church, who find it often difficult to procure seats. Yours in Christ,

J. R. CARNES.

Houston District Conference.

DEAR EDITORS:—The Houston District Conference held its first session for this conference year at Columbia, Texas, in Haven's Chapel, April 26th. The conference was called to order by Rev. F. C. Moore, P. E. I. B. Scott and C. C. Minegan were elected secretaries. All of the charges were reported except one. Thirteen charges reported 109 conversions, probationers received 101, received by letter and into full connection 31. Several had taken the benevolent collections. The district was reported in a pretty fair condition financially.

The following are among the resolutions passed during the session:

HOUSTON SEMINARY.

Resolved, That this District Conference set apart the fifth Sunday in July as a day to take a collection for the Houston Seminay, and that the money so collected be sent to C. C. Minegan, Financial Agent, Galveston, Texas, St. Paul M. E. Church.

OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH.

Whereas, The Word of God and the Discipline of the M. E. Church are both so explicit in their teachings regarding the proper observance of the Sabbath day, and its sanctity is being less and less regarded by many of the world and also of the church; and

Whereas, We understand it to be the boast of many of the secret and benevolent societies in our midst that they are founded on God's Word, and are intended to be helpers and not hindrances to the church; therefore be it

Resolved, That we call the attention of our pastors to ¶ 32 and ¶ 34 of our Discipline, and urge them to instruct our people accordingly, and enforce the law on those members who neglect their own church by going on excursions, attending society meetings and ice-cream saloons on the Sabbath day, all of which hinder the church in saving souls and rob her of her spiritual power.

Resolved, That all our local preachers and exhorters, and other persons desiring to become such, be and are hereby notified that this District Conference will hereafter neither license nor renew the license of those who are regularly engaged in ordinary work on the Sabbath day.

The regular business of the conference was interspersed with literary exercises by those appointed to prepare papers. The subjects were all of practical importance, and their discussion seemed to be heartily enjoyed by all present. It was the unanimous request of the conference that Bro. I. B. Scott forward his address to the SOUTHWESTERN for publication.

On Sunday Haven Chapel was literally packed. Preaching at 11 a. m. by Rev. G. W. Smith, at 3 p. m. by I. B. Scott, and 8 p. m. Rev. S. Hardwell. During the day there were twenty-four added to the church, eight infants baptized, and $40 collected for ministerial support.

The session was closed on Monday evening with an educational mass meeting. Rev. C. C. Minegan was appointed to address the meeting. He was followed by a number of voluntary speakers. The cause of education and the claim of the Freedman's Aid and Houston Seminary were faithfully presented. Some cash and a good subscription list were taken.

We are satisfied the cause of Christ and Methodism were furthered by this session of our conference. The conference was well entertained by the pastor, Rev. J. Guess, his people and their friends. Next session is to be held at Houston, Trinity Charge.

health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN' IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

THE LITTLE BIRD.

A little bird with feathers brown
  Sat singing on a tree;
The song was very soft and low,
  But sweet as sweet could be.

And all the people passing by
  Looked up to see the bird
That made the sweetest melody
  That ever they had heard.

But all the bright eyes looked in vain,
  For birdie was so small,
And with a modest, dark brown coat,
  He made no show at all.

"Why, papa," little Gracie said,
  "Where can this birdie be?
If I could sing a song like that,
  I'd sit where folks could see."

"I hope my little girl will learn
  A lesson from that bird,
And try to do what good she can,
  Not to be seen or heard.

"This birdie is content to sit
  Unnoticed by the way,
And sweetly sing his Maker's praise
  From dawn to close of day.

"So live, my child, all through your life,
  That be it short or long,
Though others may forget your looks,
  They'll not forget your song."

New York Evangelist.

A Drop of Oil.

The sewing-machine went hard. Brother Will came and looked over Amy's shoulder and knit his brow, as was his custom when in a puzzle. At last, turning back the machine, he glanced over the works and said:

"Do you oil it here Amy?"

"Why, no; I never thought of that."

A drop of oil was supplied, and in another minute the slender needle was flying through the work like a fairy It was easy now to turn the wheel. That drop of oil on a dry spot in the machinery made all right.

There are many other places where a drop of oil works just as great wonders. For cold mornings, when tempers are apt to get frosted as well as toes and finger-tips there is no magic like a few sweet, cheery words. So when one is in anger and ready to do or say rash things just give him a "soft answer," and you will see how it can cheer and brighten the way for yourself and all about you.—Young Reaper.

Our Boys.

We are always being told what, we should do for our boys, but it strikes us that boys, to become the sort of men that are wanted in these times, must do a great deal for themselves. We may train them in good principle, but there is one thing they must do for themselves which no one else can do for them, and that is to stand fast. Boys who seemed to be true, and manly, and honorable have often made sad shipwrecks, just because they had not firmness enough to stand fast in what they knew was right. The Bible says: "Cleave to that which is good."

The very expression "cleave" shows that it is sometimes pretty hard work to stick to the right. We must, as it were, hold on with all our might. Now, boys, that is just exactly what you will have to do. Many of you have to go out into the world exposed to all sorts of evil and all sorts of temptations. Keep out of their way if you can; but if your path lies among them keep your eyes open to your danger, and quietly but determinately resist them. And that your brain and judgment may be clear, and that you may have the benefit of the reason God has given you, never let a drop of stimulants pass your lips. Sign the pledge, and stand fast by that, and you will have good, safe standing ground for your own feet, and may be able to hold out a helping and upholding hand to some companion just beginning to tread the slippery downward path. It will be safety and security for yourselves, and, besides, you know—who knows better than the boys—the strong can always help the weak. It will be easier for somebody else to stand fast just because you do.

Everybody is using, and everybody is recommending to everbody's friends Brown's Iron Bitters as a reliable iron medicine, a true tonic.

The Election Cases.

The trial of certain persons charged with participation in the late election frauds in this city, now pending in the Criminal District Court, presents a case of prime importance. The public will watch the proceedings narrowly, and justice will be demanded without regard to ulterior considerations. The question at issue is not a party question but it does involve the integrity of the Democratic organization in New Orleans. It has been charged that under existing auspices a fair election has become an impossibility here, and it is true that the great body of the honest voters of the community are well-nigh hopeless of protection by the courts. If that impression continues to prevail, a political revolution may be very shortly expected. The people will take the matter into their own hands, and the whole machinery of the party will be abandoned, if not for a new organization, at least for a reorganization.

The crime of ballot-box stuffing is the gravest of all crimes against society. It strikes at the very life of free institutions, and discredits the whole scheme of self-government. It is very common nowadays to hear it said that universal suffrage is a demonstrated failure, and we must admit that it is wherever its decisions are reversed with impunity. Here, in New Orleans, it has been little better than a farce for a long time past; but it has been a farce with tragical results, in the form of extravagance and debt, and a general contempt for all constituted authority.

In the last election the offence, heinous as it was in itself, was rendered peculiarly exasperating by the flagrant and high-handed manner in which it was committed. There appears to have been scarcely any attempt at concealment, and the whole case was made out without difficulty within a very few days after the result of the count had been announced. It is difficult, therefore, to understand why the proof which was so conclusive then can fail to carry conviction now.

In regard to the defendants in the particular case now in court we desire to say nothing which might have the effect of prejudicing the hearing which the law accords them. If they are innocent we desire their acquittal. We only ask that the prosecution shall discharge its duty without fear or favor, that every material fact shall be fully disclosed, and that technical evasions shall not be allowed to defeat the ends of justice. There is no possibility of doubt as to the fact that a great wrong has been perpetrated, and certainly somebody is responsible for it. The poll lists have been tampered with, and if a sincere and earnest effort is made to reach the guilty parties, it will not be a difficult matter to furnish the necessary evidence.

The people will not be hoodwinked by the plea that the crime was a secret one, and its nature unsusceptible of proof. What they demand is substantial justice, and they will not be satisfied by a verdict based upon legal quibbles. It is time that the light fingered gentry who manipulate the ballot-boxes and the election records should be taught that their occupation is as criminal, as disgraceful and as dangerous as pocket-picking shop-lifting, or highway robbery. The courts have no right to discriminate between one class of criminals and another; but if any distinction is to be made, it should be in favor of the rogue who wrongs only the individual as against him who attacks the rights and interests of the whole community.—*N. A Story About Bishop Simpson.

The Harrisburg Patriot says: "The Bishop made his first appearance in Lancaster one Sunday morning, very unexpectedly to himself and the people called Methodists of that city. His home was in Pittsburg. He was traveling over the Pennsylvania Railroad to Philadelphia, and a breakdown detained him over Sunday in Lancaster. After breakfast he sauntered out to find a Methodist church, and, after walking Duke street, he met a good Methodist, the Mr. Carpenter McCleery, who engaged the Bishop in conversation. Dr. Simpson was plainly dressed, and looking anything else than a bishop as to looks. Brother McCleery judged from his conversation that he was a local preacher, and the good preacher did not enlighten him to the contrary. The preacher in charge of the Duke street Methodist Episcopal Church finally arrived, and the Bishop was introduced to him as 'Brother Simpson, a local preacher of the Pittsburg Conference.' After considerable persuasion the Bishop was prevailed upon to preach. What disappointment was visible upon the faces of that congregation that morning! They expected to be bored by a 'country clodhopper.' The Bishop gave out the opening hymn and then prayed. Those who thought they were going to to bored began to think differently, and when the Bishop announced his text, 'The Greatest of all is Charity,' expectation was on tiptoe. A grander, more eloquent, more feeling discourse was never delivered in that church. As the Bishop was elaborating his points, and carrying his congregation to the highest pitch by the magnificent roundings of his sentences, the thought occurred to the preacher sitting in the pulpit that this must be Bishop Simpson, and upon concluding his sermon the preacher asked him, 'Are you not Bishop Simpson?' The Bishop's modest and naive reply was: 'They call me so at home.' The preacher immediately turned, faced the congregation and said: "You have had the extreme pleasure of listening to Bishop Simpson."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

GENTLEMEN—having been afflicted for a number of years with indigestion and general debility, by the advice of my doctor I used Hop Bitters, and must say they afforded me almost instant relief. I am glad to be able to testify in their behalf.

A LITERARY AVALANCHE.

"What IS the world coming to? The poorest man now is put on an equality with the richest, so far as books are concerned."—CENTRAL BAPTIST, St. Louis, Mo.

A Point. All books here advertised are ready for immediate delivery. 2nd Point. You can pay for the books after you have received and examined them. See particulars under "Fair Terms to Buyers," given below.

3rd Point. To secure my best bargains, you must always order promptly. The terms here given are good for ten days only. The "nimble six-pence" is one item essential to the low prices.

4th Point. Booksellers generally do not supply my publications, but slander them instead. Some are friendly at heart, but I can allow them only small discounts, and the "pressure" of millionaire publishers, and of "interest," incline the majority against me.

Library of Universal Knowledge.

"It is the crown of the cheap and solid literature movement of the day."—PRESBYTERIAN JOURNAL, Philadelphia.

I have again secured control of the publication of this greatest of American Cyclopædias, and am again able to adopt, substantially, my old price-list. The present are uniform with the former American Book Exchange editions.

This is a verbatim reprint of the 1880 London edition of Chambers's Encyclopædia, with copious additions by American editors. It gives an amount of matter about 10 per cent. more than Appleton's Cyclopædia (price in cloth, $80.00), and 20 per cent. more than Johnson's Cyclopædia (price $51.00 in cloth). For the general reader it is the best Encyclopædia ever published, whatever the price. Prices for the set of 15 volumes are as follows: Extra cloth, $15.00; half russia, $20.00; full library sheep, marbled edges, $23.00.

Special Offer. On condition that you order within ten days from your receipt of this paper, I will send you by express, or freight, at the following special prices: Cloth, $11.50; half russia, $14.50; sheep, $16.50. See particulars under "Fair Terms to Buyers," below:

"We admire a man of pluck and brains. He may be cast down, but he cannot be destroyed; he may be brought to the dust, but, gathering new vigor and resolution from his very misfortunes, he raises a conqueror above them all. A few months ago we were made sad by the news that the American Book Exchange, of which Mr. John B. Alden was business manager, had failed. We were indebted to this house for many beautiful and remarkably cheap books, and our dealings with Mr. Alden, extending over a period of years, were always pleasant and profitable to us. We always found him prompt and honorable. The literary monopolists—the enemies of 'good books at low prices'—had a short season of triumph. They had succeeded in strangling the great 'Literary Revolution,' but while the echoes of their rejoicings are still heard, behold, the irrepressible Alden appears in their very midst at the head of a 'Literary Rebellion,' which, in the dismay it creates in the hearts of the enemy, and in the magnitude, and glory of its achievements, bids fair to outstrip the late 'Revolution.' So mote it be."—RECORD, San Augustine, Texas.

The Great British Novelists.

These choice editions of the world's most eminent novelists, are printed in the large and beautiful type shown by these three lines.

Whoever desires to possess (and who, with comfortable purse, does not?) the complete writings of the four greatest novelists of the world, wants them in dress worthy of such grand productions. Good large type, good paper and printing, and handsome binding, are essentials; if possible, one wants also the numerous illustrations of the best artists.

I have recently been so extremely fortunate as to secure the control of the entire "plant" and all of the manufactured stock of the superb "Caxton Illustrated editions" of the Complete Works of Dickens and Thackeray. The Dickens is published in 15 large 12mo volumes, large long primer type, with about 300 full page illustrations.

Dickens. It is acknowledged on all hands to be the best edition of Dickens published in this country. The binding is especially unique and beautiful, the best English cloth, with ink and gold designs, and the set is packed in a neat paper box. The following is a list of the volumes, each containing over 800 pages:

1 Pickwick Papers
2 David Copperfield
3 Martin Chuzzlewit
4 Nicholas Nickleby
5 Bleak House
6 Little Dorrit
7 Dombey & Son
8 Mutual Friend
9 Oliver Twist, Italy and Am. Notes
10 Old Curiosity Shop and Hard Times
11 Two Cities and Sketches by Boz
12 Barnaby Rudge and Edwin Drood
13 Expectations, Traveler, Miscellany
14 Christmas Stories
15 Child's History of England, etc

The price of this edition has heretofore been $22.50 per set, which I have reduced to $14.00. My edition is absolutely the same as heretofore published. The reduction is entirely in price, nothing in quality. Separate volumes, $1 each.

Thackeray's. Works may be described in the same words which I have applied to Dickens, as to type, illustrations and binding, except that they are bound in eleven volumes. The following is a list of the volumes:

1 Vanity Fair
2 Pendennis
3 Newcomes
4 Virginians
5 Philip, etc
6 Henry Esmond, etc
7 Paris, Irish Sketches, etc
8 Barry Lyndon, etc
9 Roundabout Papers
10 Burlesque, Yellowplush, etc
11 Christmas Books

The price of the edition heretofore has been $16.50 per set, which I have reduced to $10. Separate volumes, $1 each.

Waverly. This delightful edition of Scott's Waverly Novels is just published, uniform in all respects with Dickens and Thackeray. The volumes contain over 800 pages each, with profuse, fine illustrations. The following is a list of the volumes:

1 Waverly and Woodstock
2 Black Dwarf, Old Mortality, Quentin Durward
3 Bride of Lammermoor, Legend of Montrose, Chroniclers of the Cannongate, etc
4 Kenilworth, St. Ronan's Well
5 Guy Mannering, Anne of Geierstein
6 Rob Roy, Heart of Midlothian
7 Ivanhoe, The Talisman
8 The Monastery, The Abbott
9 Fortunes of Nigel, Count Robert of Paris
10 Redgauntlet, The Pirate
11 Fair Maid of Perth, The Antiquary
12 Peveril of the Peak, The Betrothed

It is much the handsomest edition ever published at anything less than double the price here asked. It can be supplied in sets only. An edition much inferior to this, printed from these same plates, has heretofore sold at $18.00; I reduce to $12.00.

Eliot. George Eliot's complete works are published uniform in size and general character with the above, but without illustrations. It is the only complete edition, including her poems, and much the finest published in this country. The following are the volumes:

1 Middlemarch
2 Daniel Deronda
3 Romola
4 Adam Bede
5 Felix Holt
6 The Mill on the Floss
7 Scenes from Clerical Life, and Silas Marner
8 Theophrastus Such, The Spanish Gypsy, Jubal and Other Poems.

This edition has heretofore sold at $12.00. I reduce the price to $7.00 for the set of 8 vols. It can be supplied in sets only.

Amazing offer. Notwithstanding the very great reductions in the retail prices as above, I offer you still further reduction on condition that you order within ten days from your receipt of this paper (see full particulars under "Fair Terms to Buyers") as per following net prices, to be sent by express:

Any separate volumes of Dickens or Thackeray each 70 cents.

Dickens' Complete Works, per set..... $10.00
Thackeray's Complete Works, per set..... 7.00
Scott's Complete Waverly Novels, per set..... 8.50
George Eliot's Complete Works, per set..... 5.00

"Permit me to congratulate you on being right side up again. The greatness and success of a man consisteth not in his being able always to stand up, but in his being able to get up as often as he falls or is knocked down."—DR. JOSIAH CURTIS, Nacoochee, Ga.

"You don't know how glad I am to see you on deck again, as your own captain and pilot. I enclose $4 for Irving's works in two volumes. It is cheaper than stealing."—FRED. THOMPSON, Lynn Centre, Ill.

Works of Washington Irving.

The expiration of the copyright on his writings frees them from the short-sighted monopoly which has heretofore kept the incomparable productions of this most famous of American prose writers beyond the reach of the masses of book buyers. I now have ready:

MODEL OCTAVO EDITION.—Complete in two volumes, aggregating about two thousand pages, containing all of his writings except the "Life of Washington." Price, per set, cloth, $4; half Russia, red edges, $5.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION.—The same as the above, printed on finer paper, very richly bound, in three volumes, cloth, extra gilt, red edges, and enclosed in a neat box. This edition is sumptuously illustrated with 64 full-page colored engravings by celebrated artists. Price for the set, $7.50.

Extra! If ordered within ten days, I will send you Irving's Works as above by Express (see "Fair Terms to Buyers") at the following special net prices: plain cloth, $3; half russia, $3.75; Illustrated, $5.65. Previous to the publication of this edition the cheapest edition of Irving was $32.50 per set.

"I am glad you have tackled Irving. The fearful prices of the monopolists have kept it off my shelves so far. I give you this week a first-class notice. You deserve it without any consideration of books in return."—P. J. SMALLEY, (Editor) Caledonia, Minn.

The Irving, in three Vols., is the finest thing I ever saw at the price. Indeed, it is not the fault of the hero of the literary rebellion if lovers of good literature go without books. There is a place in the future history of America for this same hero, should he conquer a final success, second to that of Rowland Hill in the History of England.—MRS. E. A. RUSSELL White Pigeon, Mich.

"If there is to be a Republic of Letters, you ought to be one of its chiefs Whatever . . . may say, one thing is patent to all, you are leveling up the masses to a higher plane of thought, and as a missionary of good are doing better than you think."—M. S. COWELL, Lockport Ill.

I am watching with much interest and hope, your struggle. With one of your pluck, repulse is not defeat, and if your health is spared a few years, I am sure you will redeem every pledge you have made to the patrons of the old American Book Exchange, and reap a rich pecuniary reward for yourself.—M. E. BOYNTON Boiling Springs, Ala.

Fair Terms To Buyers.

Any books which you may order which are not found, for any reason, satisfactory, MAY BE RETURNED if immediately, by cheapest conveyance, at my expense, and your money will be immediately refunded.

Orders under $5.00 net must be accompanied by the cash.

Orders over $5.00 net, will be filled by express, O. O. D., AND PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION ALLOWED BEFORE PAYMENT is required. Business references, or a small cash payment, should accompany orders from persons unknown to me. Full remittance with your order will save the express charges on the return of the money.

Orders will be filled WITHOUT THE C. O. D., and you can pay for them after arrival and examination, if any merchant of good business standing will certify:

"M. . . . . is known to me as honorable and responsible, and will either pay for, or return immediately upon receipt, any goods which he may order."

Let this be signed and inclosed with your order. It is only a simple guarantee, by one who knows you, that you are honorable, an evidence of your good faith. The name of a "Merchant" is required, because the "Commercial Reports" tell me in a moment what is the business standing of any merchant in the United States. You, a farmer, doctor, or clergyman, may be of the highest standing, but I have no means of knowing the fact.

The Elzevir Library is sent prepaid at the prices advertised. All other books are sent prepaid at LIST PRICES, but when sold at NET PRICE on special offers, transportation charges will be paid on arrival of the goods by the person receiving them; if desired to be sent by mail, add 15 per cent. of list prices, to cover postage.

Transportation will cost you much less, proportionately, on a large package than on a small; it will be wise, therefore, to combine with your neighbors and make your order as large as possible.

Over 50 lb in weight can usually be sent more cheaply by freight than by express, but in that case you must pay actual cost of boxing and cartage. Roughly estimating, $10 worth of books at list price will weigh 20 lbs. By freight, the Railroads charge anything less, the same as 100 lbs.; therefore make your order large as possible.

THIS COUPON

Must be cut out and returned with your order (mentioning the name of the paper from which it is taken,) within ten days, from receipt of this paper in order to entitle you to the special discounts offered in this advertisement.

Remit by Bank draft, Express or Money Order, or registered letter. Fractions of one dollar can be sent in postage stamps. Address,

THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1883.

W. F. Steele, D. D., of Bennett Seminary, Greensboro, North Carolina, on a postal to the editor, says, "Amen to your articles about white schools; in fact, amen to your whole paper."

From the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., we have received a copy of "Answers to Inquiries about the United States Bureau of Education, its Work and History," prepared by Charles Warren, M. D.

There is a world of difference between saying and doing. The Saviour saith: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven."

We call attention to a notice in another column of the Tenth Anniversary of New Orleans University. An occasion like this ought to enlist the interest of all the colored people; and we hope to see Wesley Chapel crowded.

Albert Stickney's attack upon the jury system, in last November's Century, has called out several replies which, with a brief rejoinder by Mr. Stickney, will be grouped in the Jury Century under the title "Both Sides of the Jury Question.,'

Our agents will soon receive statements of their accounts. We expect an immediate examination will be made and errors promptly reported; also that money collected will be forwarded, and old accounts settled as agreed before the meeting of the annual conferences. The safe rule is to send something on account every quarter, and no mishaps will occur at the end of the year. We do not wish to have any accounts with agents who do not expect to conform to the rule, because they would simply be obstacles and not helps in the support of the paper.

W. W. Pugh writes from Bertie, La., to the Sugar Bowl, of New Iberia, on the Atchafalaya outlet question. He says: "Diminishing the flow of water entering the Atchafalaya will be a certain benefit to that section of the State, and the water confined to the Mississippi, under any and all circumstances, can only involve the additional labor of raising the levees, while can be done, whereas the owners of lands lying on the basin cannot protect themselves against the immense body of water which finds its way to the Gulf through the Atchafalaya. Whatever course is decided on in regard to the Atchafalaya should be carried out very gradually."

She has gone before him. Mrs. Hannah S. Grant, mother of ex-President Grant, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. May Corbin, on Panama avenue, Jersey Central Heights, on the afternoon of May 11. Mrs. Grant rose in the morning apparently in good health, but was seized with severe pains in the region of the heart shortly before noon. A physician was summoned, but she expired before his arrival. Mrs. Grant was born in Berks county, Pa., November 23, 1789, and was married to Jesse R. Grant, at Claremont, Ohio. She was the mother of six children, three of whom are now living, Mrs. Corbin, U. S. Grant, and Mrs. Cramer, wife of the present United States Minister to Switzerland. Her remains will be interred in the family plot, in Spring Grove Cemetery, Cincinnati. This excellent woman lived to see her dutiful son advanced from a humble occupation in life to rank with the greatest military captains of the age, and to twice hold the executive office of the nation. A grateful country holding both mother and son in highest esteem, tenders the bereaved family the deepest sympathy. God bless and comfort Mrs. Grant!

Civil Service Rules.

The Civil Service commission rules, approved by the President and cabinet, provide that no person shall use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body. No person can be removed for refusal to contribute to a political fund, or to render political service. The civil service is divided into three branches: The departmental service, the classified customs, and the classified postal, or such postal and customs offices as contain fifty or more officials. The examinations are to be open and competitive. The subjects for examination will be penmanship, copying, orthography, and letter-writing; arithmetic, fundamental rules, fractions and percentage; interest, discount, and elements of book-keeping, and of accounts; elements of the English language, and the proper construction of sentences; elements of geography, history, and government of the United States. For places in which a lower degree of education will suffice the examinations will include only spelling, copying, writing, and arithmetic. The commission reserves its right to hold examinations of a higher grade when necessary. The examinations are strictly to exclude the expressions of religious or political opinions, nor, if known, shall any discrimination be made by reason thereof. Applications must state the qualifications of the applicant as to age, residence, citizenship, health, and whether or not he is an habitual user of intoxicating liquors to excess, and what he knows as to the employment of other members of his family in the public service.

No one can be admitted to examination for the postal service under sixteen or over thirty-five, or to the departmental service who is under eighteen or over forty-five years of age. The rule in regard to sex is: In case the request for any such certificate or any law or regulation shall call for those of either sex, the four highest on the list of the State from which vacancy is to be filled of that sex shall be certified; otherwise sex shall be disregarded in such certification. Every original appointment is probationary for six months, at the end of which time, if the service is satisfactory, the probationer must be absolutely appointed, but otherwise he is to be deemed out of the service. The following officials are excepted from examination: The confidential clerk, secretary of any head of department or office, and heads of bureaus; cashiers of collectors and of postmasters; superintendents of money order divisions in postoffices; the direct custodians of money for whose fidelity another officer is under official bonds; but these exceptions shall not extend to any official below the grade of assistant cashier or teller; persons employed exclusively in the secret service of the government, or as translators or interpreters, or stenographers; persons whose employment is strictly professional, as doctors or lawyers; but no person so excepted shall be either transferred, appointed, or promoted, unless to some excepted place, without an examination under the commission. Examinations of applicants for potions in Washington are to be held in places convenient as possible for them.

The sessions of the New Orleans Preachers Meeting are, weekly, more and more interesting. Brethren from the country, and members of other conferences, when visiting this city, should make it a point to attend these profitable and highly interesting meetings. The sessions are held every Thursday at 10.30 o'clock a. m. in Wesley Chapel, on Liberty between Poydras and Perdido streets.

The Latest Grab.

The committee of the Louisiana Senate appointed to investigate the workings of the board appointed under act No. 93, of 1880, have published their conclusions. Senators W. W. Leake, J. N. Augustin and Murphy J. Foster sign the report. Act No. 93 was passed for the benefit of State officers who had rendered services in prosecution of tax and license suits, and who were entitled to pay for same prior to the remission by the convention of 1879 of interests, costs and fees due January, 1879, provided taxes were paid by January, 1881. The claims approved by the board were to be receivable in payment of any taxes and licenses due the State prior to January 1, 1880. The board issued, without conformity to law, 2,824 certificates, amounting to $281,799.64. In some cases of ex-Sheriffs' certificates were issued where no remittance had been made by the constitution, and where claims were prescribed before 1879. Auditor Jumel received $29,181 for certificates of redemption, the parties sued had not paid their taxes, and the Auditor's claim was against taxpayers and not the State. The Attorney General was allowed $17,528.14 for commissions on judgments against delinquent taxpayers. His fees are regulated by law on the amount collected and paid into the treasury, and not on the amount of judgments obtained.

The following parties were the beneficiaries of the board: Thos. Duffy, J. R. Alcee Gauthreaux, J. C. Eagan, W. P. Harper, Thomas P. Handy, Thomas L. Maxwell, Ben Armbruster, W. G. McConnell, Allen Jumel, J. V. Guillotte, John Curry, E. E. Buckner, A. Micou, Eugene Waggaman, James Graham. They are the recipients of the proceeds of the treasury raid. The committee say:

In conclusion, we can only add that it was a physical impossibility for the board to have examined the statements of claims, or for the secretary to have issued the 2,583 certificates within the time stated. Reviewing the foregoing facts, we are compelled to submit that we have never known a more reckless expenditure of public funds or a greater abuse of pulic confidence. We recommend that this report be published in the official journals of the State and submitted to the General Assembly at its next meeting.

The Gauthreaux defalcation, the crippling of the public school system, the overthrow and retirement of Gov. Nicholls by a ring, the scheme to tax State and municipal bonds, and to repudiate public indebtedness, the oft repeated fraudulent elections, the land swindle, and the treasury raid under act No. 93—are the natural fruits of the White League crusade against the fair expression of the popular majority at the polls, and show the insincerity of the high and vain pretensions of its leaders. No parallel to these later and bolder robberies can be found in what are sometimes called 'the darkest days' of the reconstruction period. Caste government has been tried and found wanting, and an early return to government by and for the people will bring the speediest correction of existing evils.

Our cotemporary of The Central Methodist, M. E. Church South, says: "The question which rises in dignity and importance above all other questions in the Northern Methodist Church is the perfect social equality of the races." If by Northern Methodist is meant the Methodist Episcopal Church, our Bro. is mistaken. Social equality is not the doctrine of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She has never taught it, nor urged it upon her members. She believes that it is the inalienable right of men and women everywhere to choose their own social companions. He who misstates or misrepresents the faith of another cannot be doing God's service. Hear him on colored schools: "While they have no desire to send their children to schools with negro children, yet they propose in their educational work in the South that those receiving their bounty shall, as a condition precedent there, consent to become the social equals of the blacks." Mistaken again. There is not a Methodist school in all the North from which negro children are excluded. Nor is there one in the South where the students, whether black or white, are required to associate as equals. That is not the policy of the Church. She never urges social affinity or social equality. Cultured and refined people, whether black or white, can have no social enjoyment with the ignorant and rude. Read this on "race instinct:" "To talk of overcoming race instinct is the merest folly, and an effort to to do so is but to fight against that providence by whose fiat these instincts were formed." This sounds wise and pious, but we are in the dark on this question of "race instincts" and ask for light.

A Surprising Statement.

Who can we trust? We take the following from the Chattanooga Daily Democrat, May 9:

Yesterday we had the pleasure of meeting the Rev. Dr. Rust, secretary of the society which has charge of the location of the University. He arrived from Nashville in the morning and left for Atlanta in the afternoon.

Dr. Rust says all fears of any mixing in the University are groundless. No such idea was ever broached in their councils. There is not a breath of dissension in the society on that subject.

The Doctor expressed great satisfaction at our prospects, and prophesied a grand future for a city so situated and populated by so enthusiastic a people.

If Dr. Rust is correctly reported in the above, his numerous friends in the South will learn the facts with the deepest regret and be compelled to acknowledge that they have been mistaken in their man. Nevertheless the foundation standeth sure; God is not on the side of caste.

At the spring meeting of the Trustees of the Slater fund, Dr. Haygood in his report presented the condition of Negro education in the South as gathered from over 70 institutions of learning, giving a list of the branches of study pursued therein. From the report it was evident to the Trustees that the industrial facilities South were less than the mental and moral. Trustees requested the general agent to prepare a statement of his observations and conclusions as based upon the statistics he had collected and upon all the points that had been discussed in the meeting, with recommendations for the future action of the Board. A resolution was adopted to confine aid to such schools as are best fitted to prepare young colored men and women to become useful to their race, and that institutions which give instruction in trades and other manual occupations which will enable colored youth to make a living and become useful citizens will be carefully sought out and preferred in appropriations from this fund, and that as far as practicable scholars receiving from this foundation shall be trained to some manual occupation simultaneously with mental and moral instruction, and that to initiate this policy set forth in this resolution the sum of $20,000 be spent under the direction of the general agent during the year 1883.

The decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court, that the property donated by Paul Tulano for educational purposes in New Orleans is taxable, is sound law, no matter how disappointing to those who expected to profit by Mr. Tulane's liberality. Mr. Tulane gave to certain persons in this city real estate for the purpose of using the income thereof for the intellectual, moral and industrial education of the white youth of the city. The exemption clause of the State constitution applies only to "buildings and property used exclusively for colleges or school purposes." In support of its decision the Supreme Court refers to proceedings of the constitutional convention, to several provious decisions bearing on the subject, among others to one (30 An. 259) wherein the parsonage of a church used as a home for its minister had been denied exemption. The tendency of legislation in this as in other States has been to bring exemptions within the narrowest possible limits. Were it decided that real estate, the income from which was devoted to religious and educational purposes, should be exempt from taxation, it would soon lead to grievous abuses and the withholding of large amounts from the public treasury for the support of government.

The decision rendered by Judge Billings, against the city of New Orleans, in the Gaines case amounts to $1,925,667,82. The only hope for relief is a reversal of this decision by the Supreme court of the United States, to which an appeal will be taken.

Dr. W. H. Watkin, Sanitary Director, reports a decided decrease in deaths from small-pox; and that, with the exception of a few cases of scarletina, the city is entirely free from contagious or infectious diseases.

Some of our exchanges suggest the nomination of Robert T. Lincoln, Secretary of War as the next Republican Presidential candidate.

Brethren of the La Teche district, by examining the conference notices, will find several important corrections in the appointment of their quarterly meetings.

TENNESSEE.

Rev. Calvin Pickett, the pastor of the M. E. Church in connection with the Central Tennessee University at Nashville, and a member of the Tennessee Conference, is visiting our vicinity seeking aid to erect a church. The point is an important one for our denomination. Bro. Pickett is a leading man in his Conference, vigorous and devoted. He is sure of success, and already sees the hopeful signs of the completion of his work. We bespeak for him the sympathies of our readers.—Zion's Herald.

ALABAMA.

Rev. C. P. Davis, of Newton, closed a five days' meeting, resulting in 14 accessions. He has organized five flourishing Sunday-schools, two new churches, and eight classes of children for instruction. He has received 33 into the church. This is only his second quarter. When he came he met with some opposition from opponents of the church, but this did not prevent success.

Rev. S. D. Sanders, of Enon, reports: "We have just completed our parsonage, and I moved into it the first day of May. It is located right in the north corner of the Enon Church lot. The lot contains one acre valued at $500. We have a very good Sunday-school."

VIRGINIA.

Rev. E. H. Vaughan, presiding elder of Roanoke District, Virginia Conference, desires five young preachers to supply places. He may be address at Lafayette, Va.

TEXAS.

Robert Williams, San Augustine: "We are moving on nicely. I found 15 or 20 members at San Augustine; all at Nacogdoches had gone to the A. M. E. Church. Elder Ripetoe held our quarterly conference, and about 40 partook of the Lord's Supper; two were received in the church. For some cause the preacher sent to Sabine and Shelby did not go to his work, and the presiding elder assigned me to it. We had a very nice time on that work this quarter."

W. A. Fortson, Victoria: "Our first quarterly conference was held by Elder M. Henson, who was as usual vigorous and ready for work. Reports from the pastor, class-leaders and superintendent showed the work to be in a good and prosperous state. Sunday morning, after a profitable study and recitation of the lesson, the elder gave us some instruction. At 3 p. m., the church was filled with a very large congregation, which listened to a very instructive sermon. Six children were baptised, seven received into the church and one on probation. Sunday night the pastor, Rev. P. Carmichael, preached and administered sacrament to 148. Monday night, at love feast, many testified and seemed to be spiritually revived. Our work here is growing; $26 40 was collected for the elder and $4 10 for missions. In connection with our church work here, I desire to speak of the grand effort our people are making in erecting a school-house 30x60, two stories high. When complete they expect to have it chartered as a college or high-school. This building, when complete, will be worth between $2000 and $3000, and will be another institution in west Texas for the progress of the people. People from all sources are helping us with their money, and leading men highly commend us for such an effort. Our people in Victoria are coming to the front. Brethren pray for our success."

Peter Thompson, Mineola: "Our second quarterly meeting was a glorious occasion. There were 61 at communion service, and the elder preached a noble sermon. We have added ten new benches and a nice little bell. The church is at work for the Master."

S. Coleman, Waelder: "Rev. Lee Reed, our pastor, has just got the Sunday-school on a good footing. Bros. Levi Allen and John Boatwright, and Sisters Rachel Williams and Mary Parsons are good teachers. Rev. John Henry is the superintendent, and is experienced in the work."

MISSISSIPPI.

B. L. Nevils, Okolona: "On the 8th, at Prairie Mount Church, we baptized 4 adults; received 2 on probation and 20 into full fellowship. We have two lively Sunday-schools with an average attendance of about 42. On account of much [illegible] and [illegible] we have been [illegible]. We expect to build [illegible] this fall. Pray for us."

Theological and Sunday-school Institute.

MONDAY

The sessions of the institut were resumed this morning in the college chapel. Rev. G. W. House conducted the opening services. A paper on the "The Circuit Preacher and the Sunday-school" by Rev. J. P. Price, presiding elder of the West Tennessee district, was read. The subject was discussed quite fully. Rev. A. H. Gillet spoke on the organization of the Sunday-school. The subject of the use of the catechism in the Sunday-school was ably discussed and the general use of the catechism in the schools most cordially approved as well as special classes for catechetical instruction. Music in Sunday-school was considered and the more general use of the same hymns that are used in church service, including melodies usually sung, strongly recommended. At 3 o'clock the subject of Bible construction was presented by Rev. A. H. Gillet, and at 4 o'clock the primary class, by Miss L. Hitchcock.

TUESDAY

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. H. W. Simmons, of Gallatin. Rev. James F. K. Moreland read an interesting paper on the relation of the Sunday-school to the church. The paper took the ground that the church is made up, as a part of its organization, by the Sunday-school, not as full membership but as the training school for the soldiers of the future church militant. The indifference of a large part of the church membership, and official boards was taken as evidence that the true relation of the Sunday-school and the church is not well known.

Rev. S. P. Bell read an interesting paper on the origin and growth of Sunday schools. In the discussion it was asserted that the work of the Sunday-school aggresssive. All the children should be in the Sunday-school.

Rev. W. Thirkield presented the relation of the Sunday-school to the benevolent enterprises of the church. The unpopular subject collections was discussed, and the unwillingness of the people to give to the various collections. The result seemed to be that the preachers are most in fault, on account of failing to systematize the work, to give information, and to rouse the enthusiasm of the people. Rev. A. H. Gillett conducted a normal exercise on Bible evidences. Treating of manuscripts, ancient versions, quotations and references, care of copyists, decisions of early councils, and the number of various readings, which affect the sense of the renderings so little.

At 3 o'clock, the superintendent of the Sunday-school was presented by Rev. E. Tyree, and the Sunday-school teacher, by Rev. A. H. Gillett.

At 8 p. m. Rev. A. H. Gillet delivered another of his characteristic lectures to the institute.

WEDNESDAY.

At 8:30 o'clock the exercises of the institute began at the Central Tennessee College, with an address by Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, editor of the Christian Advocate of this city, who spoke on the literature for the people. The speaker alluded to the grand work the press is capable of doing, in diffusing intelligence disseminating moral and religious ideas, and elevating the morals of the nation; and spoke of the terrible work it is doing in osbcene, scurrilous pictures and literature. He alluded to the high responsible position of the true journalist and of his own work as editor on the Pacific coast and in Nashville. He became editor when the circulation of the Advocate was 7,000, this week they print 23,000 copies. The address was loudly applauded during its delivery. The institute united in singing one of the old-time melodies, "We'll Overtake the Army." Rev. V. C. Randolph delivered an interesting address on the "Home and Sunday-school" in which home religious instruction was shown to be the duty of all parents by the authority of the Divine commander. Rev. A. H. Gillett then spoke on the "Use of Illustrations in the Sunday-school" and forcibly showed how instruction of children can be made attractive instead of the irksome thing so many teachers in all schools make it.

At this juncture, on motion of Rev. S. P. Bell, a committee of three to arrange programme for next Institute, and a committee of pastors of M. E. Church in the city, on entertainment to be appointed by the president, were ordered. Revs. H. W. Simmons and H. W. Key offered resolutions of thanks to Dr. Vincent, Rev. Thirkiel, Gillett, and Bishop I. W. Wiley and Dr. Braden. It was decided to hold another institute beginning the second Wednesday in May and continue one week.

CORRESPONDENT.

Nashville, Tenn.

Rust University.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN:—Have you entirely forgotten the above named institution? At our last Conference session I endeavored to set before you the true state and condition of our work as relates to our new school building, Rust Hall, and made a most earnest appeal to you to come forward at once and meet your obligations toward the same. You seemed to be interested, and promised well, but up to this time only one, Dr. Revels, has remembered us with even the smallest amount of their subscriptions. Dr. Revels has sent us $115, being $15 more than his pledge. This is all that has been paid since Conference of over $2000 yet due, —all that we have received toward purchasing the $4000 or $5000 worth of furniture needed for Rust Hall. We have waited expectantly every week and every week have been disappointed.

Some of the brethren promised to send us some each month till their full amounts had been paid. I had great hopes that such would keep their pledges for it does seem to us that any one in health could save as much as one dollar per month even though "times are hard."

Now, dear brethren, it is but five weeks till Rust Hall is to be dedicated, will not each of you who are still in arrears send us something before that time so that I may be able to report "progress" at least?

The dedication will take place on Tuesday, June 12th. Many distinguished persons are expected to be present. Dr. Rust will, of course, head the list. Either Bishop Warren or Wiley or both will make addresses. Dr. Lansing of New York has promised to be present to address us if circumstances will permit. Dr. Revels, of our Conference, Dr. Braden of Nashville, Rev. A. E. P. Albert, of New Orleans, and others will also speak on that occasion. The grandest time in the history of the Institution is expected. To accommodate many who would like to be present an excursion train will be run from Jackson Miss., which will bring persons at half the regular rates. Let every one who possibly can come and see the finest school building in the State and hear words of truth and wisdom from the lips of our wisest and best men. Respectfully,

W. W. HOOPER.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON VIII. May 20.
HEROD AND PETER. (Acts xii, 1-17.)

Our lesson is about a prisoner, in a dark prison. Soldiers watch it so the prisoner can not get away. Peter is the man. Do you know why he is in prison? The king, Herod, has killed James, one of the disciples, and now he intends to please the Jews by killing another. A king Herod tried to kill Jesus when he was a little baby. That Herod was grand-father to this Herod who has Peter in prison. God took Jesus away, and our lesson tells us he led Peter away from danger too. James was dead, and the church knew Herod meant to kill Peter, but they prayed, O so earnestly, that God would save him. Peter was bound fast with chains to two soldiers, one on each side, but he slept in his chains, because he trusted God. What God did was right, Peter knew, so he trusted even in prison. One night an angel came to Peter, and led him right away from the soldiers, past the great iron gates, and brought him to his friends, who were praying for him. O, what a joyful time they had when they opened the door and saw Peter! Our text says the angel of the Lord is around those who love God What grand help that is. God does not always bring his people out of trouble just as he did Peter, but he takes care of them and loves them, and when they suffer for him he rewards them by joy in their hearts and a home in heaven by and by.—Western.

COMMENTARY ON ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS. By F. Godet, D.D. Translated from the French by Rev. A. Cusin, M.A., Edinburgh. The translation revised and edited with an introduction and appendix by Talbot W. Cambers, D.D. Funk and Wagnalls, Publishers, 10 and 12 Dey street, New York. 544 large octavo pages. Price, cloth, $2.50.

Dr. Godet is spoken of as an eminent scholar and a devoted Christian. He is the author of numerous works, this commentary on Romans the most recent. As an expositor he is clear, earnest and forcible, exegetical and theological; and while the student may not always agree with him, he has before him the reasoning upon which they rest, and from this will receive important aid in formulating his own views. For homiletical purposes the work will be of great value.

Howard Crosby, D.D., says: "I consider Godet a man of soundest learning and purest orthodoxy."

Arthur Brooks, D.D., says: "Any one acquainted with Godet's other works will congratulate himself that the same author's clear logic and deep learning, as brought to bear upon the difficulties of the Epistle to the Romans, are to be made accessible through this publication."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Mr. James Bryce, M. P., in his essay on "England and Ireland" in the forthcoming Century, mentions, among other interesting facts, that the so-called "National" party in Ireland, while it may seem to represent the nation, yet really can claim less than half the Irish members of Parliament. Ireland has in that body one hundred and four members, of whom about forty are Nationalists. Of the remaining sixty-four, about twenty-seven are Tories, nine Ulster Liberal Protestants, and the rest nominally Home Rulers and for the most part Roman Catholics, but practically (with a few exceptions) supporters of the present Liberal Government, and therefore regarded as foes by the Nationalists themselves. These sixty-four represent technically more than half the country; substantially, no doubt, they represent less; but, at the lowest computation, more than a million Irishmen are opposed to the Nationalist programme,—and a minority like this, representing as it does most of the property and education of the island, cannot be ignored by the English Government.

The Housekeeper.

Put three ounces of tallow to one pound of resin; melt in an old glue pot carefully, and stir in fine sawdust till very thick, and spread an inch thick upon a board which has previously been covered with sawdust. When cold, break into lumps an inch square in size. These are excellent fire kindlers, and sell at a good profit.—Tribune and Farmer.

LEMON SPONGE.—Put one ounce of gelatine into one pint of cold water, let it stand five minutes, then dissolve it over the fire, add the rind of two lemons thinly pared, three quarters of a pound of lump sugar, and the juice of three lemons; boil all together two minutes, strain it, and let it remain till nearly cold, then add the white of two eggs well beat and whisk it well ten minutes; put it lightly into a glass dish.

BEST ICED TEA.—Iced tea is offered at supper and at lunch. If you wish to have it perfect, and without the least trace of bitterness, put the tea in cold water hours before it is used; the delicate flavor of the tea and abundant strength will be extracted, and there will not be a trace—if one's taste is the judge—of the tanic acid which so often renders tea disagreeable and undrinkable. You need not use more than the usual quantity of tea. If it is to be served at a 1 o'clock meal, put it in water soon after breakfast, and ice a few minutes before serving. The best way is to have ice broken in a pitcher and put one lump in each glass.

How to make nice gravy is a problem many housekeepers never solve. Grease is not gravy, neither is raw flour. Almost any kind of meat-liquor or soup-stock, from which all fat has been removed, may be made into nice gravy by simply adding a little seasoning and some thickening; if browned flour is used for the latter the gravy will require but little cooking, but when thickened with raw flour it must cook until thoroughly done or the gravy will taste like so much gummy paste. It is best to brown a quart of flour at a time. Put in a skillet, set in the oven, or on top of the stove; stir often until it is a light brown; put into a wide-mouthed bottle; cork and keep for use. All gravies should be well stirred over a rather hot fire, as they must be quickly made, and must boil, not simmer.

A prudent and economical housewife will make a soup of bits of cold meat and the broken bones of a fowl, flavored with an onion, a carrot and a bunch of parsley, that will prove more savory than a soup of twice the cost, made by a careless hand. From the toughest part of a fat and well-flavored piece of beef or mutton she will compound stews and potted dishes that will make the eater forget there are choicer bits to be had on any other terms.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Fer the SOUTHWESTERN.

A Voice frem San Felipe.

MR. EDITOR.—Your well-known paper has found its way to my residence for six years, and I have sent some subscribers each year. Now I ask space to mention some incidents by the way. I entered upon my work Dec. 28, 1882, and found 26 members. They were partly controlled by an A. M. E. preacher, and worshipped under a union head. My hard work commenced, but with the faith and Chistian zeal I have cleared those troubles away. We have much opposition here. The Southern whites are against us on account of our Northern white friends. Our troubles first originated about some property an association purchased from the board of aldermen and improved. They did not agree in caring for it, and their by-laws giving them the right, they sold it to the trustees of the M. E. Church. The deeds were written by the Rev. F. C. Moore. The time came when some of the old associates became members of the A. M. E. Church, and came for the property. They sought a weak point to get hold on, and found it in the preacher who preceded; he gave them a day in our church; but when I reached the post I said this would not do and demanded that it stop. The A. M. E. preacher went in several times; my trustees told him they would enforce the law; he blamed me for the whole thing, and next went to the board of aldermen complaining that the Yankee church, with white presiding elders had taken possession of the property, they had given for public worship. They sent me a messenger to open the door to any religious denomination. With deeds in hand, and feeling competent for my pastoral charge I told the messenger to go back and tell them we were ready to assert our exclusive claim to possession. The messenger never returned. We have had a hard winter, with much loss of stock. On my way to an appointment in March I counted 42 head in a distance of eight miles. Six persons have joined the church by letter and four on probation. Elder Nichols was expected April 1, and his failure to come was a sore disappointment. Your paper finds its way to sixteen subscribers on my charge. We shall pray for the editors.

Yours truly,

WILLIS H. JACKSON.

A colored girl, Miss Mary L. Harding, who made heroic and successful efforts to educate herself for missionary work in Africa is now receiving notice from the press, having recently graduated from the State University. The Detroit News says: "Mary used to collect the wash for her mother on Monday mornings, and when her hour for recitation arrived before the collection was accomplished, she would go to the recitation room en route, and, depositing her bundle of clothes in a corner, attend to her recitation, then pick up her bundle and go her way. Colored girl, though she is, there was so much native dignity about her, that no jeer or unkind comment followed from even the most heartless student." The mother shared the hardships and the two women together conquered the difficulties in the way of the poor girl who seeks a college education without funds to start on, and now Miss Harding has been appointed a missionary to Africa by the Presbyterian Board. Her mother expects to accompany her.—Ex.

Luke Nevil, a colored man, recently secured a decision from the Supreme Court of Illinois, against the Pullman Car Company, for damages for refusing to sell him a berth in one of their cars, after he had offered them their usual price.

There are over $500,000 of unclaimed money belonging to colored soldiers and their heirs in the treasury at Washington. The surviving soldiers, widows and orphans should get in their claims.

They belonged to Jack and Albert Fulch. Before I left Anderson H. Smith my name was Mary Smith, it is now Mary Pigegee. Address me at Clarksburg, Texas, care of Rev. I. Kirby.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish information of my brother Philip Terrell. I belonged to Anthony Tinder's estate, and brother went away with his young master, John Cushing Berry, to Texas. I wish to hear also of George Terrell, who belonged to Mr. Lemoud Davis. They were sold at Orange Courthouse, Virginia, when small boys. Father was Phillip, and mother Ann Terrell. MRS. MARY SPRADLEY.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish to inquire for my kin people. The last heard from they were in Jackson county, Georgia. Owner was John Pendergras. He had a son, Fletcher, and a daughter, Salina. My mother was Harriet; sisters were Mollie, Jane and Manda. There were three children of us. I was brought to this State by John Glover. Address me Lockesburgh, Ark., care of Rev. G. W. Baber.

HESTER ANN PENDERGRASS.

Edward Tigh, of Jackson, Minn., left his home on December 8, 1882, and his whereabouts are now unknown. He is a stone mason and plasterer by trade, six feet in hight, weight about 200 pounds, age 38 years, strong build and heavy voice. Was troubled with heart and kidney disease. His wife and family of four small children fear he is dead, and any information concerning him will be thankfully received.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire information for my grandmother and children. We belonged to Mrs. Peggy Achili. She lived in South Carolina, Winsborough county; my mother died there when I was three weeks old. Mrs. Achilli moved us to Mississippi, and stopped in Yallabusha county. I was there until I was 12 years old. After this we were carried to Greenwood, there to the trading yard and sold at a sheriff sale. We were bought by Ben Walters, who lived in this city; he gave me to his daughter, Mary Simmons, and she brought me to Texas. My grandmother's name was Lucy Walter; her children, Rachel, Cherry and Sam Walter; my father was Jack Walter; my mother was Mary Achilli. Since I have been free I took the name of Ed. Kneeright. Address Ed. Kneeright, at La Grange, Fayette co., Texas, in the care of M. Smith, pastor.

MR. EDITOR—I desire information of the following named relatives: My mother's named Maria, belonged to Perry Starks in Louisville, Ky.; my brother's named Zazhariah Taylor; my sister named Dollie Ann—all belonged to Perry Starks. My sister Mary we left in Virginia. I think she belonged to a Mr. Carter at the time. We parted at Charlottesville. We were sold there from the Eade's estate, as well as I can recollect. My sister Sarah she belonged to Terry Graves in Fayette. She and I went to Missouri together. In a short time after I was sold again; and to the present time I have been unable to learn anything from them, or their whereabouts. I am the oldest boy, and was about three years of age at the time of our separation. I am about 35 years old now. I hope brother preachers will take an interest in my inquiry and help me to find my relatives. Address, REV. J. I. TURNER,

GO TELL THE GLAD TIDINGS.

BY MRS O. C. BALDWIN.

Go tell the glad tidings; go tell
What Jesus has done for thy soul:
He has saved thee from sin and from hell;
Go tell every creature below.

Go tell of his marvelous power,
To save every mortal from sin;
He commands thee, delay not an hour,
To call every sinner to him.

Go tell of his wonderful love,
That would ransom from death and despair;
From his presence foul Satan will flee;
Tell what his great love does for thee

—Harvester.

The sunken eye, the pallid complexion, the disfiguring eruptions on the face, indicate that there is something wrong going on within. Expel the lurking foe to health. Ayer's Sarsaparilla was devised for that purpose and does it.

If you can afford nothing else, give your children an education. A trained mind goes through life, cannot be stolen, and is not convertible. Good schools, good books, and general reading matter—get them these if they have to do without other things; and, to secure a right direction to educated mind, give them by word and example good principles. Let them grow up with the idea that it is not needful to be rich, famous or influential; but that it is essential to do what is right.

Forty Year's Experience of an Old Nurse.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never failing success by millions of mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhœ, griping in the bowels, and wind colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price twenty-five cents a bottle.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.
By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.
WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung.."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Bound in cloth, gilt, 272 pages, and portrait. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, 60 cents.

Address, PHILLIPS & HUNT,

The Warner Observatory.

The increased interest in the study of astronomy that has taken place within the past few years is simply wonderful. Formerly only professional astrooomers studied the heavens; now telescopes of every size and description may be seen pointing from the roofs of houses and private observatories. As a consequence more discoveries have been made during the period specified than ever before in the same length of time. This result is due to several causes, as will be shown hereafter. Among the number of discoveries made by independent workers, may be noted the following; Mr. Burnham, of Chicago, with only a six-inch telescope, has discovered over one thousand double stars wholly new to science. Mr. Barnard, of Nashville, Tenn., with a five-inch instrument, has discovered two comets, within the past year. Prof. Schaeberle, of Ann Arbor; Mr. Brooks, of Phelps, N. Y., and Mr. Wells, of Albany, have made cometary discoveries of an important nature. Professor Swift, of Rochester, has discovered two intra-mercurial planets, several new nebulae, and seven comets, for which he has been awarded three German medals and the LeLande prize of the French Academy of Sciences. Professor Hall, of Washington, is the discoverer of both of the moons of Mars, and Professor Bond of the eighth satellite and transparent ring of Saturn.

Of course, many fine private observatories have been erected recently in various parts of America, among the number being Professor Draper's at Hastings, N. Y.; Professor Morrison's, at Glasgow, Mo., and Professor Rutherford's, New York. By far the finest private institution of the kind in the world, however, is the Warner Observatory, at Rochester, N. Y., of which the above illustration represents the new and large refracting telescope. This instrument is more than twenty-two feet in length, is composed of sheet steel and brass, is driven by clock work to exactly equal the earth's axial motion, and mounted in the most modern and improved style. It is capable of magnifying 2,500 diameters, thus bringing the moon within ninety miles of the earth. The entire cost of the telescope and observatory in which it is mounted exceeds $100,000. The Warner Observatory was erected from the private purse of Mr. H. H. Warner, who has also endowed and furnished it most liberally. In addition thereto, he has paid out several thousand dollars in prizes for the discovery of comets and meteors which has doubtless greatly stimulated the discoveries to which reference has been made. America will probably take the lead in astronomical discoveries over all other lands as she has already done in many other fields. And when it is remembered how beneficial an effect the study of the heavenly bodies and the countless realms of space has upon the human mind, it is certainly cause for great thankfulness that such is the case.

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physcians
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always,
And they will tell you unhesitatingly,
"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:
What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs, such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to women—
And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically, "Buchu."
Ask the same physicans:
What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, etc., and they will tell you:
"Mandrake, or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill-health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid, or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula! erysipelas!
Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact almost all asedise frail.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

USE THE

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The ingredients keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH. Medicated NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

The "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce cures "female weakness" and kindred affections. By druggists.

Andrew Scott, a colored citizen of Chicago, is erecting a four-story brick building with stone facings at a cost of $22,000. The main floor will be fitted for a store and the upper for apartments.

Iron in a colorless state and Peruvian bark, combined with well known aromatics, make Brown's Iron Bitters the best medicine known.

At the annual commencement of the Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, the degree of M. D. was conferred on Mrs. Mary Rodgers Owen, of Richmond county, N. Y., who had previously, attended a course in the Woman's Medical College of New York.

"Throw Physic to the Dogs, I'll None of it."

We do not feel like blaming Macbeth for this expression of disgust. Even nowadays most of the cathartics are great repulsive pills, enough to "turn one's stomach." Had Macbeth ever taken Dr. Pierce's "Purgative Pellets" he would not have uttered those words of contempt. By druggists.

Woman's Friend.

Having been troubled for many years with kidney disease, with severe pains in my back and limbs—my ankles were at times very badly swollen—I was advised to go to the hospital for treatment, which I did on the advice of a friend, but found no relief, at least only of a temporary nature, and I had given up all hope of a cure until my husband was advised to use Hunt's Remedy by a friend that had used it and been cured of a severe case of dropsy and kidney trouble. I procured a bottle, and had not used one-half of the bottle before I began to be better, no pain in the back, and the swelling of my limbs commenced to go down, and my appetite was much better, for I had become so bad that all I ate distressed me very much. It was really dyspepsia, combined with the other troubles, and I have used four bottles, and am able to do my work and attend to household duties which before had been a burden to me, and I can only thank Hunt's Remedy for the health and happiness which I now enjoy, and esteem it a great privilege and duty to give you this letter in behalf of my many suffering lady friends in Boston and the country, and can only say in conclusion that if you once try it you will be convinced as I was, even against my own will, that Hunt's Remedy is indeed a woman's friend.

You are at liberty to use this for their benefit if you so choose.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. WM. GRAY,
Hotel Goldsmith, 1416 Tremont street, Boston.

A Specific for Change of Life.

We are in receipt of a letter from J. T. Hamby, Esq., of Floral, Ark., in which the writer says: Samaritan Nervine cures female decline, and during the change of life it is a specific." Suggestive facts, truly. $1.50.

A Baggage-Master's Praise,

Mr. H. Barney, baggage-master on Eastern Railroad, Boston, says:—

"I have used Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine, in my family for months. It was recommended by friends in Portsmouth who have been cured of kidney troubles, and I find it just as represented and worth its weight in gold. My wife is using it for dyspepsia, and has improved so rapidly that I cheerfully indorse it as a family medicine of real merit, and I would not be without it."

For the Happiness of Home

From a Clergyman's Home Comes a Message Containing the Wisdom of Experience.

Home is the centre of the social system. From it proceed the best and purest influences felt in the world, and towards it gravitate the tenderest hopes of humanity. For it all good men labor while their working days last, and around it their last thoughts linger lovingly when those days are done.

Yet home does not usually approach in practice its own ideals. The mother is overtaxed with household duties and the rearing and training of her children, while the father fights the outside battle to win the wherewithal to meet expenses. Sooner or later care and toil leave their marks. It is true enough, as Kingsley sings in the "Three Fishers," that but too much working and weeping brush all the bloom from life's fruit.

"Men must work, and women must weep,"

Mental anxiety and lack of rest and pleasure induce physical disease of many kinds; whence the need of a trustworthy tonic to give health and strength in times of need. Among the good women of the land who have found such a sure anchor is Mrs. A. C. George, wife of Rev. A. C. George, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, of Chicago, whose words we have her permission to quote:

"I use Parker's Ginger Tonic in my family, and can say that we are highly pleased with it as a tonic. From my experience of its value, I recommend it as a reliable family medicine."

Please note: first, Parker's Ginger Tonic is not a mere essence of Ginger; second, it contains nothing to create an appetite for intoxicating drinks; third, it is a splendid health restorative for all who suffer from disordered Liver and Kidneys or any disease arising from indigestion and impure blood. Accept no substitute for it. Prices, 50c. and $1 per bottle. It is cheaper to buy the larger size. Hiscox & Co., New York.

Editorial Notes.

This is Queen Victoria's birthday.

Forty five per cent. of the voting population of the South is illiterate.

A large proportion of the petitions for divorce allege the intemperance of one of the parties.

Put your house and premises in order. Keep them clean, and institute frequent bathing as a sanitary precaution for the whole year.

Of all the States of the Union Georgia is the State suffering most from illiteracy. Out of a population of 1,542,180, fully 967,099 either cannot read or cannot write. This doubtless accounts for her inhuman and barbarous chain gang system, which continues to be a stench in the nostrils of civilized and Christian-hearted people.

The conference of charities met, adopted a charter, elected officers and directors, and as soon as the charter is passed and recorded will be ready for business. E. M. Hudson is president, S. B. Newman vice president, and Joseph Simon treasurer. Several prominent citizens are among the directors, and it is safe to say that the noble object of the association has been committed to safe hands. Frauds and mendicants please take notice.

The Pacific Christian Advocate reviews the condition of our work in the far Northwest. Not less than 2000 emigrants per week are pouring into the bounds of Oregon and Columbia river conferences. Congregations must get out of temporary shelters, into property of their own; revivals in school houses must be materialized in brick and mortar until all are in their own houses. There is one school in Washington Teritory, two in Idaho, and four in Oregon—too few for the times; and the moral and educational exigences will be the important work before the approching annual conferences.

In Frederick Douglass' recent letter to Hon. Geo. W. Williams, author of a history of the Negro race in America, he criticizes sharply the statements of his relation to disunionism and the exodus. Whatever Mr. Douglass' views may have been in regard to the matter, we may justly question the assertion he makes in the letter to Mr. Williams, "The exodus has turned out just as I predicted it would, a nine days wonder. It was gotten up for an occasion, has served its purpose and is dead." In the sense that Mr. Douglass' flight from bondage in Maryland to freedom in a more hospitable clime, was "gotten up for an occasion, and served its purpose," it may be justified; but in none other is it in accord with the truth of history. Mr. Douglass seems to have accepted the Bourbon version of the origin, and does not know that the exodus was a spontaneous uprising of his people, without leadership, to fly from present oppression to assured relief, just as the Anglo-Saxons have done in all nations and ages. Further than this, it is not dead. Fifty Kentucky familes have just passed through St. Louis westward, and prosperous settlers in happy Kansas homes believe the exodus was a good thing.

The balance of trade with Great Britain is certainly against us. Just now there seems to be a deluge of the most degraded Irish paupers coming to the United States. Recently the steamship Nestoria, from Galway, Ireland, arrived at Boston with between six or seven hundred Irish paupers shipped by the British Government. Really it look as if the Irish question might be transferred to and settled in this country. Roman Catholicism, ignorance, whiskey, and the misrule of England, have made Ireland a land of weakness and wretchedness. No people are more bitter in denouncing the policy of England than the Irishmen who are in America; and yet a large majority of them will vote with the party whose free trade policy would starve our manufactures and make the United States almost as weak and wretched as Ireland.

The speech of Rev. Dr. J. L. Tucker, on the "Relations of the Church to the Colored Race," delivered in October, 1882, before the Protestant Episcopal Church Congress, at Richmond, Va., is sold at 25 cts. per copy, by Charles Winkley, Jackson, Miss. The author, Dr. Tucker, has favored us with a copy, and writes as follows from Christ Church Rectory, Mobile, Ala., relative to the criticisms of that celebrated speech: "I am filling a scrap book so as to be able to see myself as others see me. Whenever I feel inclined to be vain I take that book down and presently become chastened to a properly humble frame of mind. I never before had anything to compare to this book for the purpose." Some of the criticisms have been vigorous, and we do not wonder that the Dr.'s exuberant vanity is dispelled, and he falls into a humble frame of mind when he examines the record of his transgressions. Pray for him, brethren.

On Sunday afternoon 13th inst a fearful cyclone swept over Kansas City and the western part of Missouri. The storm center seemed to gather back of Amstrong and Wyandotte, and swept with unabated fury across Kaw river, by the stock yard toward the bluffs. In the shape of an inverted funnel it whirled along traveling from southwest to northeast, across the southern portion of the city, spending its fury near Lydia avenue and East Ninth street. The new M.E. Church South chapel was demolished The German Evangelical Church building dedicated only two weeks ago was blown down. The loss in Kansas City is given at $250,000. At least 50 buildings were destroyed 250 more or less injured. Several persons were killed. Oronogo, Mo. was completely wrecked.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

"We be Brethren."

The Methodist Episcopal Church entered the South at the close of the late war with a view primarily of educating and elevating the colored race, and at the same time opened the doors of the Church to that class of white people who prefered our Church to the M. E. Church South. We mention the colored people first because we believe it was the conviction of the Church that they needed immediate help more than any other class of people in the South. But the Church has not worked altogether among the colored people. A large population of whites were found without Church privileges and without educational advantages. But all the Church could do at first was to send a few preachers among them, for it was still the purpose of beneficent Methodists in the North to permanently establish schools for the freedmen throughout the South. The unequivocal design has been from the begining to make this work a fixture. That the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society has been a grand success no one certainly dares to question. It is a monumental work that convinces the world of the practical wisdom of the Church. The country ought to be proud of it. Our Church is proud of it. And the beauty of it is that the Methodist Episcopal Church is not going to abandon this work. But the Church, according to the instruction of the last general Conference, is establishing a couple of universities for the white population in the South. Will this work for white schools withdraw any sympathy or money from the colored people? If it should, it is impracticable, for whatever withdraws support from them damages our cause in the South. But should education among the white population stimulate out people to make still greater efforts to educate the colored people our cause will not be damaged. That it is not the intention of the authorities of our Church to throw cold water on any part of our work in the South is certainly clear. More than that, our church wouldn't touch a white school if the money and sympathies which have been given for the education of our colored brethren should be turned from that channel. If the Church can not increase the contributions to the Freedmen Aid Society to such an extent that the proposed Colleges and those now established can be carred on sucesfully, then let the white schools stop. Much more money must be raised now, because the plan for educational work in the South has been enlarged. To say that the leaders do not see an increased liberality toward this work is to say that they do not understand the church, nor the instructions of the last General Conference. We notice that some of our brethren are disposed to criticise the plan to build any school for the education of the white population. Be careful, my brethren, don't strike the hand that has done so much for you and that would not turn its beneficence from you for the world. The missionary spirit of our church seeks to help the most needy first, then those who are not quite so destitute next. This truth has met a practical exemplification in the South. Our "brothers in black" have been sitting at the first table, and this order is not to be changed. Let us not unnecessarily condemn those who are "serving tables." They are not going to forsake us. Of course there has been no direct charge against the men who are administering our School funds for us. But the first thing we know our intimations will run right up against the Freedmen's Aid Society, against the bishops and against the church papers and officials. Now this is just where the matter is going to end if we precipitate a fight on ourselves over our schools in the South. We can not afford it. If our white brethren do not like to see the church spend so much money for the education of the colored population, why let them go somewhere else, for the Church is not going to stop this work. But our colored brethren must not get uneasy, nor in too big a hurry. You can't elevate a race in one day. We have encouraged our colored brethren occasionally to believe that the Church would put them into general Conference offices pretty soon, and now and then we hear a colored brother urging that a great many of the colored people ought to come into the Methodist Episcopal Church so that they would be able to elect a bishop. We must not fall out with him about this proposition, for it is not presumed that many are building their hopes on such a foundation. Character and ability are estimates of one's worth. The church will not depart from this line. We are opposed to working on any other line. Let us educate the white people if we can. They are asking for a few crumbs, and if the church can spare a loaf or two let us not begrudge it. The reason that we ought to live together in peace is because we are brethren.

Editorial Correspondence.

From New Orleans to Houston a distance of 361 miles in eighteen hours, if not so rapid a transit as some roads make, is much swifter than in the days of ox carts and stage coaches. We left the Crescent City on Friday at noon and reached Houston next morning at seven o'clock. The Morgan and Texas road furnish excellent accommodations and agreeable officers. Nothing could induce us to become a railroad conductor, the thousand and one interrogatories of the inquisitive passengers we could never tolerate. But we found all on this line patient in listening and pleasant in answering all questions, willing to give information about places, persons and things. From New Orleans to Vermilionville we pass through what is to us the most delightful part of Louisiana, and the cane, corn, rice and cotton fields, never looked more glorious.

Houston is well supplied with Methodist Churches, three M. E. Church South, two A. M. E. Church, Methodist Episcopal Church six, including those on the circuit. In architectural beauty Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church excells all the churches of the city. Rev. I. B. Scott, A. M., graduate of Central Tennessee College, is on his second year and is highly respected by all the people. His Sunday school is one of the largest in the conference, has on its roll 210. Mt. Vernon across the Bayou all last year seemed to be dozing, but now under the pastorate of Bro. Roberts is up, doing and moving on, reaching a grade of grace that always brings glory and honor to God. The drift is evidently toward an enlightened Christian zeal and true piety. Let God be praised. We know the church, all that it needs is a faithful man to feed the flock. This field tilled with care will give a glorious harvest of yellow sheaves. Bishop Bowman made a good hit when he sent Rev. M. Redick to St. James, Bro. Redick has made a good record at other points, but never better than at St. James. The change in this charge is very marked, the improvement good. Bro. Redick has the confidence and love of the people, is judicious and active in his work, and is, as a consequence succeeding finely. Over 25 have been received on probation since conference. A nice parsonage has been erected and nearly all paid for. Scott, Roberts and Redick, are men of muscular and moral power, safe and stout, ready to push or pull, as the cause of God may demand.

In the pulpit men called of God, and specially endowed with power from on high, are acting in a far higher realm than that of the newspaper, but as educators in current wisdom as to the affairs of the country and the work of the church the newspaper has the widest range, and is to day the main power in creating and directing an enlightened public opinion on the vital issues of the day. The pulpit and the press of to day have a co-operative responsibility in taking care of the moral welfare of the country. The pulpit is the standing place of one of God's messengers and only one. But God has many messengers, and let no man think that he says in the pulpit all that he intends men to hear and obey. The newspaper is as truly God's messenger as the person who stands in the pulpit, and has certain things to say that he cannot and ought not say; they do nevertheless have a meeting point, and the man in the pulpit who does not recognize this fact is sadly in the dark.

Houston Seminary is pleasantly located on the banks of the Bayou close to the central part of the city, amid the shrubbery, the pines, and magnolias of the Vosmer; place a more favorable location for an educational institute could not be desired. Every minister in the Texas conference, and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the State ought to to take pride in its welfare and use every means within their reach for its upbuilding. The school was opened late last fall, over one hundred and fifty students has been enrolled, the average attendance has been over seventy-five, seventeen have been converted to God, over seventy have taken the temperance pledge. Every Sabbath morning Bro. Campbell, the president, assisted by his wife, has a Bible Sunday-school class largely attended by the students, while during the week prayer and class meetings for the students are regularly held and well attended. The one great need of the school is enlarged accommodations. Our brethren of the Texas conference need not look abroad for much more help in this direction, they are called to this work and should with strong and willing hands move on and secure the needed additional buildings, apparatus and teachers. We were pleased with this school. Brother and Sister Campbell are doing a grand work. There is no brand of Satan on the doors of this institution. It is a mixed school. We saw sitting side by side the Negro with his dark complexion and woolly hair, and the Saxon with his pale face, blue eyes, and flaxen hair. Benediction on the Houston Seminary.

Human life is represented as a journey — with all the accidents, anxieties, labors, and struggles of a journey; never, as the quiet rest, joy and happiness of a home. He who expects to reach heaven without a struggle, a self-sacrifice, will, we fear, find himself disappointed at last. Paul refers to the ancient custom of foot racing among the Greeks to illustrate Christian life. All contestants in those races had to submit to a rigid discipline, to eat certain kinds of food, to wear certain kind of clothing, and practice a stated number of hours each day. Paul was a strict disciplinarian, and eventually he was able to say, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course." Rev. Washington Thomas is one of the old and honored members of the Texas conference. He does not pretend to know very much about books, (in fact he never pretends to be what he knows he is not) but he can read and write, he knows God, walks with him and walks for him, counting it his highest honor to be in his service. Some three or four years ago Bro. Thomas began to be afflicted with deafness; it grew upon him, so much so that he felt compelled to ask for a superannuated relation at the conference of 1881. Having a little place at Spring, Harris county, Texas, he at once moved to his own home. In the following February, the Methodist Episcopal Church at Spring was blown down, and there it lay for over a year, and nothing was done towards rebuilding it. The Church Extention Society had given fifty dollars towards that house, and Bro. Thomas felt that it was not right to have that money lost, but he was old and poor and personally could do but little; he had however the respect and confidence of the community, and when he began to relate to them his desires, nearly all promised to help him. Thus encouraged he entered at once upon the work of rebuilding the house of the Lord. Different men gave donations of lumber, which he and his good wife drew upon the ground, taking care that nothing valuable of the old house was lost, the old boards and nails, so far as possible, were all saved and laid aside for use; workmen were employed, the house erected with but a small debt of ten or fifteen dollars remaining, and Bro. Thomas the only active responsible agent. Certain reflections cross our mind as we write these facts as to what kind of a man a Methodist preacher should be. Perhaps we had better not write these lest some whom we know might think we were personal. Bro. Thomas belongs to the heroic race and has already gained the favor of his brethren, but not half so much by acts of popularity as by his character and works. Monday, May 14, we had the privilege of preaching to a small congregation in the new church at Spring. Our people at Spring need a little more systematic work; in fact, that is needed almost everywhere. Near all can see the needs of the church community, and are ready to give advice; but the difficulty is, so few put their hearts in the work or their hands into their pockets that our prosperity is not what it should be. We are in need now of active Christian workers.

O.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TEXAS.

A. M. Mason, Mount Vernon circuit: "Our second conference was held at Lone Oak by Elder Henson. He performed good service. He gave a fine address to the Sunday-school, and preached to a large congregation. His collection was $8.65. Rev. C. Scruggs also preached. Monday night we had a nice love feast. We have taken subscriptions, payable in July, to build a church edifice at Lone Oak."

A. Jackson, Groesbeck: "Elder Gates held our conference and preached three good sermons. His collection was $5.85. Pastor's salary estimated at $200. The smallpox on our work impeded it. We expect to commence very soon and complete our church."

W. H. Jackson, San Felipe: "April 22d was a glorious day; then we received 12 into the old mother church. Pray for this circuit."

TENNESSEE.

J. J. Bart, Sharon: "My quarterly conference was held by Elder Price. His sermon touched eight persons who came to the altar for prayers. Bro. J. L. Massey was with us and preached at night. We will welcome him again."

A. P. Blakemore, Springfield: "On the night of April 28th, at a public meeting at the school house, I made a brief addres; then A. Fort was called upon to draw up resolutions declaring our opposition to young ladies visiting the saloons or walking the streets after 9:30 at night, and to the men who encourage them, and the saloon-keepers who sell them whiskey. We want to take hold of our young people here and do them good. Pray for us."

J. Kenseer, Manchester: "On my way to one of my strong appointments I met with five men. Three of them were drunk, and two of them pulled out their pistols and asked me what I had in my satchel. I opened it and showed them my books. They said, "what shall we do with him?" pulled out a bottle of whiskey and drank, and said to me, "drink with us." I took my Bible in my hand and fell on my knees, and I prayed to the Lord to help me. Before I got through they went off. They said they were coming to meeting. So they did, and I preached from Romans xviii: 16. One of the men burst out in a cry. When collection was called he gave $2, and at night he came again and gave more. I gave him to understand that I only drink pure water. God help us preachers to trample under foot whiskey and tobacco. I am in a hard field."

J. B. Marbrey, Mason: "The second quarterly conference closed with grand results. All were present with their reports. The men to whom we were indebted at Mason for our church were present; we finished paying and secured the deed. The trustees borrowed $40, payable October 5th, to do this. On Sunday Elder Price preached a rousing sermon. Lord's Supper was administered to 102, of whom 14 were Baptists. Collections during the quarter: for elder, $18.50; pastor, $33.35; on missions, $5; church extension, 50c.; Freedmen's Aid, $1.75; tract, 40c.; Sunday-school, 75c.; for bishops, $1. We have something on all benevolent claims. Everything bids fair for a year of success on the circuit; ten have been received into the church. Pray for us."

LOUISIANA.

J. P. Calvin, Natchitoches: "The following named ladies and gentlemen were elected for the various offices of the Reapers' Missionary Society at the Asbury M. E. Church: President, Rev. H. J. Wright; Vice President, Miss Maggie Yarborough; Secretary, Miss Josephine Beller; Assistant Secretary, J. P. Calvin; Treasurer, Miss Allen Burns; Sergeant-at-Arms, [illegible] Mickelbery. Children's day [illegible] the children's hearts. We [illegible] for a Sabbath day's [illegible] the 16th of June, under the leadership of the Reapers and the Sunday-school."

J. Hason, Columbus: "Sickness kept me from my work near a month. Death has claimed my only child, but thank the Lord he is now in heaven. I held the quarterly meeting, as I was sick when the elder appointed his visit. The brethren agree to do more this year than they did last. My salary is estimated at $120, presiding elder $20, bishops $1; all other purposes $10."

T. J. Johnson, Camp Parapet: "We are thankful to Almighty God for the great work that has been done here in Camp Parapet. Our revival has closed with 32 converts. The people are thirsting and are anxious to go to work for Jesus. We have commenced working on the church, painting the front and whitewashing all around, making everything look lively. I desire to put a cupola on the church, so it may have the appearance of one, and we are trying to raise the money by a grand basket meeting. The people are poor, but willing to do the very best they can for the interest of the church. Camp Parapet Church had a donation of a beautiful Bible by the Southwestern Bible Society, for which we give our thanks to it, as the church had a very poor prospect of a Bible. Our church is moving on quite well. I do hope that this year will be a year of jubilee. Pray that we may go on from one degree of grace to another."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. M. Lampkin, Starkville: "The storm damaged property of my members to a considerable extent. I was in church at the time, and the darkness lasted some fifteen minutes; within twenty or thirty yards buildings were blown down."

A. N. Jordan, Rosemeath: "Our first quarterly meeting was a crowded one. Sacrament was administered to 127, and $6.15 lifted."

At the District conference held at Summit, Miss., April, '83, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the members of this conference continually present to their members the importance of subscribing for the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Resolved, That the Presiding Elder refuse to renew the license of Local Preachers who fail to subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN.

Resolved further, That we express an entire satisfaction in the management of the paper by Rev. L. P. Cushman and Rev. A. R. Albert, Editor and Assistant Editor, and we promise them our earnest support in securing subscribers.

A Letter From Nashville.

Quite an interesting event has happened in connection with our college. We have had a Theological and Sunday-school institute. For several months we enjoyed it in anticipation. At length it came, and now it is gone, but its influence for good upon us all will remain, we trust, always.

To meet and talk upon various topics in which we are all interested, and to listen to each other's ideas, and together ask God's blessing upon our labors, cannot fail to do us much good. By "forsaking the assembling of ourselves together," and trying to depend upon ourselves, and all of the time to think the same thoughts, and to work in the same old ways, it is possible to grow very narrow and selfish.

Our institute was a success, though it was not so well attended as we had hoped. We were sorry, because several whom we expected might have added much to the interest of the occasion. Among those present were Bishop Wiley, Dr. Vincent and his secretary, Dr. Bridge, Bro. Thirkield, son-in-law of Bishop Haven, Rev. Gillett, Bro. Carter, Bro. H. W. Key, Bro. D. W. Hayes, Bro. Provine and several others. Of course we had a rare treat, socially, intellectually and spiritually.

We housekeepers had our own peculiar interest in the affair. When told that so many preachers were coming we quaked a little at first. We thought of the scarcity of chickens at this time of the year, but we decided to furnish as good a substitute as we could, and enjoy what we could of the exercises ourselves. We got some good ideas, just what we needed, but our own favorite theme, housekeeping, was not deliberated upon. We can hardly blame men for such an omission. They have little idea that our particular vocation has anything to do with their brilliant ideas and wise sayings. What a fine thing it would be to have a similar gathering ourselves, a housekeepers' convention, perhaps; and why not?

Even Dr. Vincent, in a private talk, intimated that there was a glorious field of usefulness for women in the kitchen and in the home, and I do really believe he thinks that there is the proper place for them. For some of us it surely is, and would it not be wise for us to get together and discuss the best methods for doing our work? and could we not be greatly strengthened and encouraged by such a communion with each other? Surely our husbands could have no objection, if we kept to the subject under consideration and did not talk about our preaching the gospel or voting, and perhaps the increased intelligence that we would get would make our homes more restful places for them and our cooking be improved.

Now I never saw a man but who could appreciate a good dinner, and I never saw many men who cared to know much more about a dinner than to eat it, so they are really dependent upon us for much of the mental and physical vigor which they need to do their work. Poorly cooked and indigestible food unfits people for mental effort. Many a person has slept through a sermon, and their ears have been closed to much that would have done them good, because what they had eaten had made them stupid.

Who knows how many cross words have been said, how many unkind acts done and even crimes committed under the influence of unpalatable food, eaten amid disorder? Very many evils might be traced to the bad management of the home, and some of them it is in our power to correct. So it must be admitted that our work occupies an important place in whatever is a blessing to the world.

If Dr. Vincent is right, let us accept our mission, remembering that we cannot be useful or appear to good advantage in any other place if we do not belong there.

A magnificent housekeeper in any public work might be good for nothing. So long as we have stomachs as well as brains, the butcher will wield a mighty sceptre. We have reason to exalt ourselves, for no power on earth can make mere drudges of any person in whom the love of God reigns, and if "whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord and not unto men," it is not possible to do anything menial.

Now there are many points in connection with our work that sorely perplex us. The world is moving in every good cause. It cannot be supposed that we know all we may. We must keep up with the times. It certainly would be well if we could learn to do well the almost numberless little things that we have to do daily. It is said that "woman's work is never done." May be we shall yet learn how to get it done, so that we may have more time to read and study and pray.

I know of no better plan for our own improvement than the "assembling of ourselves together" in a housekeeper's convention.

MRS. L. C. BRADEN.

North New Orleans District.

MR. EDITOR—Please allow me to say something about the North New Orleans District through the columns of your paper. Have completed first round; visited every point except one (Shady Grove) from the beginning of the line to the end. I found the brethren at their posts at the quarterly conferences; not only were the members of the conference present, but a large number of the members of the church were present and we had a pleasant session at every charge. The brethren have made a grand start off this year, and I predict for them a grand year's work. I feel that I must mention especially the new men on my district. Frank Bowers came in at last conference and on a new work, called Springfield circuit, about seven miles from Pontchatoula Station, on Jackson R. R. This young man has gone to work like an old veteran, gathering the people, saving souls, and getting means to repair the church building. When I arrived at the station I found a white man there with a little horse and a little wagon with which to take me to Springfield; into the vehicle I stepped and off we started. I asked the gentleman if he had lived long in that section. Yes, about fifty years, he replied; my father said he was here when Lorenzo Dow traveled through here. My father said he was a Methodist. Ah, said I, are you a Methodist? I used to be, he said. Well, what are you now? said I. An infidel, said he. Said I, I am sorry to learn this; whose writings do you read? Bob Ingersoll's, he replied. At this point I pitched into him and he seemed to be ready and willing. From this time the horse drove himself, so spirited was the discussion at times, the persons in hearing might have thought we were quarrelling; we were not quarrelling but hotly discussing Christianity and infidelity. I think that man has read all that Bob has ever said on the subject. The discussion lasted about three hours, for it took about that time for the horse to drive himself six miles, I don't know which whipped. I do know that I engaged him to take me back to the station next morning, but he did not put in an appearance, on account of which I had to walk the seven miles. So I think he got about enough of it for that time and remained home to rest. F. P. Robinson's station, on Darrowville circuit, has started off grandly and with a little help from the Church Extension will build a comfortable church at Darrowville. R. C. Barrow, at Algiers, is doing finely. I spent a part of last Sunday with him; he is ready to begin work on the church building, putting brick pillars and ceiling. The district, as a whole, is in fine condition. I must say a word about A. Hilton, St. Charles circuit. He has started off finely; the people are well pleased; I believe he will do well; his family is with him. This is what the circuit needs, family example and influence. Father Ross is at a new work in Gretna. As yet it is small, but the few are faithful and the old veteran feels encouraged.

M. DALE.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

What the M. E. Church is Doing in the South.

For more than 200 years the Negro was held in bondage, during which time he suffered persecutions, ill-treatment and outrages imaginable—being cut off and denied any of the privileges of a man. To be found with a book in his hand was a crime for which he was surely punished, and any attempt to serve God, except very privately was also a crime. Thus hundreds, yea thousands of good men and grasping brains passed away unnoticed. Men, who no doubt would have been an honor to the people, with whom they mingled, and who might have stood foremost among the intelligent men of the world. But the great design of God decreed it otherwise, and they obedient to His command bowed in reverence to His name, and quietly whispered, "Thy will be done."

God did not intend that slavery should last forever, and at a time that He saw best, He placed in the hearts of men that feeling which caused them to greatly sympathize with that downtrodden and degraded race—the Negro, that feeling which caused them to declare slavery a shame, and which caused such men as Abraham Lincoln, Charles Sumner, Wm. Loyd Garrison and Horace Greeley, to publicly denounce it; and, together with the many thousand men who fought, bled and died for this glorious cause, to use strenuous efforts to emancipate the Negro, and give him the chance to show himself a man.

They were succesful, for the 1863 brought to the ear of the slave the welcome news involved in the Emancipation Proclamation, which declares that the Negro shall no longer be held a slave; but that he shall be allowed all the privileges of a freeman; that is, to serve God as he pleased. This right of suffrage and the paramount right, the education, if possible, of the heart and mind of his children.

Thus far we have rapidly beheld the Negro a slave; let us see him a freeman!

He is liberated from bondage and cast on the world without money, home or experience, surrounded with apparently few friends but a host of enemies; to live among those, who not long since claimed him as their property. But "God works in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." That august body, the M. E. Church, believing that the mental capacity of the Negro was not less than that of other men, voluntarily came to his relief. She organized the Missionary, Church Extension and Freedmen's Aid Societies—all for his benefit. How was it possible or him to be educated and to be prepared to serve God as he should without the assistance of these organizations?

Being free from bondage he is made slave to illiteracy, and allowed to serve God under his own vine and fig tree; he has no suitable place wherein to do so, and nothing with which to procure such place.

How deplorable his condition?

The M. E. Church, through her missionary societies, sends him relief in money, etc. Through her Church Extension Society she purchases land and builds churches for him; and through her Freedmen's Aid Society scores have been educated and hundreds are being educated. The services she has rendered are incalculable. She stretches wide her doors and invites the colored man to unite with her, promising to be a friend to him, and in every instance this promise holds good.

Believing as we do that education, that is morally and mentally, is the only method by which the Negro will become a nation and make himself felt, we will dwell more especially upon what the M. E. Church is doing in the South for the education of its colored members. The Freedmen's Aid Society has through the untiring efforts of its members established 21 schools for its colored members in the South, 6 of which are colleges, and from whose walls colored young men and women are sent out yearly, equipped to take their stand in the world, and who compare favorably with graduates from other colleges. The remaining 15 of these schools are of higher grade and are working to educate teachers and preachers.

"In these institutions in 1882 nearly 100 teachers were sustained and over 3000 students taught. In 15 years of the existance of the Freedman's Aid Society over $300,000,00 have been invested in lands and buildings on which there is not a dollar indebtedness."

In one year the M. E. Church expended in the educational work in the South $96,141,35. No other church on the globe can boast of such large figures in this work.

Each year the interest manifested by the Freedman's Aid Society is greater, and with the money given this society is doing a work second, in success and importance, to no other work of the church. God has, through the medium of this church, removed all false theories respecting the Negro, such as his not having a soul, and of him not being capable of the higher attainments; and it has been clearly demonstrated that freedom is the right and best condition of every man.

The question, "can the Negro be thoroughly educated?" is no longer a problem, for to-day, through his education, the Negro is represented in all offices of trust and honor, proving himself master in the professions, administering the word of God intelligently and with power; soothing the pains of the sufferer from disease and ably defending his clients at the bar. Only a few of the ennobling deeds of the M. E. Church are here noted. Millions can and will testify to her benevolence. Great has been her work in the past, but the future prospects are more encouraging.

With due credit to other denominations and the work being done by them, after due consideration, I have formed the conclusion that if it is so that a church has a claim upon mankind, the M. E. Church has a claim upon the colored man. And may God grant that the day be not for distant when the colored men will be numbered by the thousand within her walls; her banner wave over all lands from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean on either side of the globe, and as far north and south as is accessible to humanity.

"For her my tears shall fall;
For her my prayers ascend;
For her my cares and toil be given;
Till cares and toil shall end."

Tabernacle Church.

MR. EDITOR—Allow me to speak of my work at the Tabernacle charge. April 1st our second quarterly conference was held, Presiding Elder F. C. Moore present. Everything passed off pleasantly. The Sabbath School is moving on to prosperity with Brother Thomas Spenoll as Superintendent, and Sister Ida Richards as assistant. What a blessing it would be if all our churches had a dozen such workers as Sister Richards. April 12th we started a protracted meeting, trusting God we would be able to awaken some poor sinner out of sleep, and the result was 7 converts and a few backsliders reclaimed. In this effort Rev. W. W. Brown of Brenham rendered us great service in helping to save souls, and in helping the sinner see his condition. The 26th found me at Columbia for the District Conference; here I spent a few days for the Master's work. Mr. Editor I can say the church is in a good condition both spiritual and temporal with the exception of those so called Christians, who profess to have religion but possess it not. These persons think it no sin at all to attend the market on the holy Sabbath, walk in the grocery stores and buy and drink their beer just as the sinner would on Monday. Because we have some unconverted people that will not buy on the Sabbath, if they would stop at this, it would not look so bad. You can see their children running on the Sabbath buying beer. I often speak to my wife and say, this is the way these people have in fulfilling the 12 chapter and 1 verse of Ecclesiastes. This is the way some professors train their children, so when they get old they will not depart from their beer. Great delight is taken in an excursion on the Sabbath; these persons will return at night to the church as if they were just from Heaven. Taking hold of the Master's work by sinning and praying, giving God great glory for having sinned all the holy Sabbath day away. But this is in all of our churches in the city. I have preached against it to my congregation and a great many have reformed from it, pray for us that the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ may grow in Galveston.

GEO. W. SMITH.

The New York Herald makes a palpable hit when it says to ministers, "To deny the inspiration of the Bible is to cut the autograph of the sovereign out of your commission as an officer." Men who make that denial are likely enough to discover that they have no commission, but are fighting on their own account.

Morristown Seminary.

This institution, located at Morristown, Tenn., is for the education of the freedmen, and is one of the twenty-five schools in the South supported by the "Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church." The real estate, consisting of land and a school building 40x60 feet, is owned by the Society. The school, which was started two years ago, has had unprecedented success from the start, enrolling 193 pupils the first year, and had it not been for want of sufficient accommodations would have enrolled a much larger number this year. It has pained the teachers to see promising young people of both sexes, after coming 50 or even 100 miles to enjoy the benefits of the school, compelled to leave, because they were unable to secure board or lodging places. Those who could secure board or rooms were often compelled to occupy the same room in which the family lived. It is not an uncommon sight to see families of 8 and 10 living in a room not more than 12 feet square. In order to meet the needs of the Seminary, it was decided to erect a boarding hall. Work was begun in the fall on a building which will, when completed, accommodate 50 pupils, 25 of each sex. The cost will not exceed $3,000. We have been compelled to suspend work on the building for want of funds to finish it. Knowing how important it is that this building should be completed before next term, we make this appeal to the friends of the work among the freedmen. The future prosperity of our work in this section of the South depends to a great extent upon the completion of this hall, as it is impossible for students from abroad to obtain board in the city. If we are unable to take them a great number will be deprived of schooling. The necessity and importance of our work in this section is at once apparent when it is known that our nearest school for the colored is Clark University at Atlanta, a distance of over 200 miles. The territory from which we draw students includes the whole of East Tennessee, Western North Carolina, and the south-western part of Virginia. We need $1,500 to complete and furnish the building; and this must be raised at once, so that work may be resumed. Our work is fully endorsed by Bishops Simpson and Warren and Dr. Rust. On his recent tour in the South Bishop Simpson spent nearly a week in Morristown. He says:

I visited Morristown on my recent tour in the South, and I found that Brother Hill was accomplishing a most excellent work in the education of colored young men and women, and is deserving of aid in his efforts to erect a suitable building for the accommodation of students.

Bishop Warren gives his hearty endorsement:

Few schools can show a better record, even if they have $100,000 worth of property and a faculty of half a dozen professors. I wish those who desire to help them that have no helper would be generous as Brother Hill and enable him to get up and finish the building so greatly needed.

Dr. Rust writes:

Brother Hill is erecting a building for the accommodation of students, which is essential to the success of the enterprise in educating colored young men to teach and preach. I do not know where a few thousand dollars can do more good than at Morristown. All moneys contributed will be faithfully consecrated to the object for which they are given.

With such indorsements we feel confident that our appeal to the friends of the colored people will not be in vain. We are sure that could our friends know the self-denial and sacrifices which these poor freedmen daily make for the sake of attending school, they could not but aid them. They have an intense thirst for knowledge, and look to the North that they look for it. May the Lord inspire the hearts of all lovers of Christ and humanity to respond to the appeal, and thereby aid us in educating "Brother in Black!" Contributions sent either to the Principal, the Rev. J. S. Hill, Morristown, Tenn.; Bishop Warren, Atlanta; or to Dr. Rust, Cincinnati, will be gratefully acknowledged by return mail.—N. Y. Advocate.

The Pittsburgh Advocate believes, and in a well-considered article shows good reason for the belief, that "the departure of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the communion and pulpits of other churches," is "mainly due to our policy, and to that part of it which limits our pastorate to so short a time. It proposes, for the earnest consideration which the question deserves, an extension of the time to five years, and adds: "For our own part we can see no losses that would overbalance the gain made by the adoption of the measure." The Western Advocate, referring to "multiplication of exceptions under the rule," says: "If the present pastoral term is too short we do not object to lengthening it to four or five years. Much might be said in favor of such a change. But it might be even better, if the Church is ready for it, to appoint pastors from year to year, as at present, but to leave the number of years a pastor might be continued in the same charge to be determined by the necessities and conveniences of the case. This plan, on the whole, would seem to be simplest." Would not the Church be "ready for" this probably "better" and "simplest" plan if its advantages were generally, fully and candidly set forth in our Church papers? Certainly, if it be assumed that some change is to be made, the question whether that change shall consist in a mere extension of the time instead of the better and simpler arrangement of no limitation, is one which should be carefully considered in its bearing upon the future as well as the present interests of the Church.—Northern.

The Methodist churches find a common ground in the wideness of God's mercy and its limited personal salvation to the repenting and believing soul, crying aloud in all their preaching and experimental illustration of the doctrine, "whosoever will let him take the water of life freely." Their religion is social and enthusiastic, full of zeal and directness. It has a definite aim to "settle and fix the wavering soul" in an inner conviction of personal salvation, as well as in a firm foundation on the excellent word. Here is the widest room for the good offices of denominational catholicity. Every Christian is a brother to every other Christian; every Methodist to every other Methodist. And he is a Methodist who believes Methodist doctrine, has a Methodist experience, and tells to all around what a dear Saviour he has found—not who believes in an Episcopal form of government, or Congregational, or Presidential. The unity of creed and experience is our bond of perfectness. It lessons distance. It harmonizes work. It disarms controversy.—Baltimore Methodist.

Labouchere tells in London Truth of an intelligent jury pronouncing the opinion that a woman found hanging to a tree came to her death by a complication of abdominal inflammation and rheumatism in the knees. That isn't half as bad as some of the verdicts that were rendered by Democratic juries over the bodies of Kuklux victims a few years ago in the South, nor does it equal the decision of a jury upon the case of a man who was hung for horse-stealing in New Mexico, when they said he met his death by a dispensation of Divine Providence.

The Boston Herald says: "The platform which the Democrats in the New York Logislature are building for the party next Fall has already these planks compleated, 'Civil Service Reform is too thin,' 'Free rum is just thick enough.'" But through thick and thin they mean to win, and possible they may; though, sure as fate, they'll learn, ere late, there comes a judgment day."

Yonng Folks' Corner.

A Complaint.

O please, sir, are you not the man
That takes up little boys,
When they are doing what they onghtn't to,
Or making too much noise?
I know you by that thing you wear,
That shines so in the sun,
And your great big yellow buttons—
I just wish you'd give me one?

But wait—that isn't what I want,
Do you know Tommy, sir;
He has blue eyes, and tumbled hair,
And a cap that's made of fur—
You see, I'm mad at Tommy—
As mad as I can be;
And won't you please to find him, sir,
And take him up for me?

And put him in that place, you know,
Where it's all dark and dim,
And keep him there a long, long time,
'Cause I'm so mad at him!
You'll know him by the little dent
He has, right in his chin,
And the funny sparkle in his eyes,
When he keeps the laughter in.

He's very freckeled, Tommy is,
But then his cheeks are pink,
And if he has got reddish hair,
It's beautiful I think;
And he is always good to me—
Most always, anyway,
And if he hadn't been so mean
And cross to me to-day,

I think—oh, there he is, right now,
There, on the corner, see!
I guess he wants me, by the way
He's nodding so at me—
Good-by! Oh, yes! I quite forgot—
Poor Tom! he looks so blue!
I guess I will forgive him, just this
This once, sir, wouldn't you?

Jack.

A year or more ago, as the foreman of one of the ironworks of this city was crossing the yard one day, he espied a little skip of a boy, seemingly not over eleven years old, seated on a big fly-wheel and chewing the end of bitter reflection.

'Who are you?'

'I'm Jack.'

'What are you doing here?'

'Resting.'

'What do you want?'

'A job.'

Those were the questions and answers. The boy was pale and ragged, but in his steel-blue eyes the foreman saw game. And, too, the idea of a waif like him setting setting out to battle the world touched a tender chord in the heart of the man who had boys of his own, and he set Jack at work in the yard.

No one thought the boy would stay a week, and no one cared to ask where he came from or who he was. But he stuck. He was hard working and faithful, and, as the weeks went by, he gained friends. One day he walked up to the foreman and said:

'I want to learn the trade.'

'You? Ha! ha! ha! Why, Jack, you are not big enough to handle a cold chisel.'

'I can whip any 'prentice boy in this shop!' was the earnest declaration.

'Just hear him! Why, any of the lot could turn you wrong side out. When you get big enough to whip the smallest one you come to me for a job.'

At noon that day Jack walked up to the biggest apprentice boy in the shop and said:

'Come out doors.'

'What do you want?'

'I'm going to lick you.'

'What for?'

'Because I want a chance to learn the trade.'

The two went out, and, in sight of twenty witnesses, Jack won a victory. At 1 o'clock he touched his cap to the foreman and said:

'I've licked your biggest 'prentice, and want to go to work!'

Ten minutes later he had become a machinist's apprentice, and if you go in there to-day you will find him with greasy hand, oily face, and a head full of business ideas. Jack carries the keys to the drawers where the steam gauges, safety valves and other trimmings are kept, and he knows the use of every tool, the workings of every piece of machinery, and there is a constant call for Jack here and Jack there. Before he is twenty he will be a finished machinist, and before he is twenty-five he will be foreman of some great shop. He is quiet, earnest, respectful and observing. What he does is well done. What he is told he never forgets.

And here in Detroit are hundreds of boys who complain that there is no chance for them, even when backed by money and influence. They wait and wait, and whine and complain, and leave it for waifs like little Jack to call up the game in their souls, and walk boldly into a great manufacturing works and say:

'I'm here—I want a job!'—Detroit Free Press.

The Yankee South.

The impression still obtains that the Southern people cherish deadly hatred to Yankees that they will neither smell, taste, touch, nor handle anything contaminated by Yankee hands. This is a most egregious error. The Southern people love the Yankee, and they show this affection in a thousand different ways. When they retire at night they unbutton Yankee buttons to Yankee-made coats, waistcoats, pantaloons, shirts and drawers. They pull off Yankee boots with Yankee bootjacks and divest their feet of Yankee socks. They march to Yankee bedsteads, turn down Yankee coverlets and Yankee blankets, prostrate themselves on Yankee mattrasses and lay their heads upon Yankee pillows. The beddings are the only things not made by Yankee hands and imported from the land of Yankees. On rising in the morning we tread Yankee carpets, stumble over Yankee chairs and sofas, build a fire with Yankee coal, taken from Yankee scuttles, in Yankee grates, catch the ashes in Yankee pans, and use Yankee pokers, Yankee shovels and tongs. We repair to Yankee washstands, pour water from Yankee pitchers into Yankee bowls, and wash with Yankee soap; then use Yankee towels and Yankee toothbrushes. Next we march to a Yankee bureau, stand before a Yankee glass, and use Yankee combs, Yankee brushes, Yankee powder, Yankee cologne, in Yankee bottles. We sit down in a Yankee chair to a Yankee table, covered with Yankee cloth, Yankee knives and forks, Yankee dishes and feed upon Yankee food. We call for Yankee toothpicks, seize Yankee hats from Yankee racks, turn the key to a Yankee lock, open a Yankee door, enter a Yankee buggy, seize the Yankee reins to a Yankee harness, and repair to our places of business, and spend the day in trading upon Yankee industry. The South is rich in resources, but our people are so fond of the Yankees that they lavish their wealth upon Yankee enterprise.—Memphis Appeal.

Solving Two Problems.

He stopped sawing wood and turned to the old man who was splitting and piling and said:

"Father, I cannot believe that I was cut out for a farmer. The whole problem is right here; I go to the city as a clerk at a dollar a day. In six months I get a raise to $9 per week. In a year I am given an interest in the firm, and in ten I am rich enough to buy and sell you ten times over."

"Yes, that's one problem," slowly replied the old man, "and there's another; there's six cords of wood left in that pile, and if it isn't all sawed, split and piled agin Saturday night you don't git no pair o' new cowhide boots out of me! Hear me now, and make that buck-saw strike fire!"—Wall Street News.

From the present outlook our public schools will have a very short season. Hardly as many months as last year, when we had only three. We have not received a cent from last year's taxes, except what we get from the parish. It is discouraging in the extreme saying the least.—St. Mary (La.) Herald.

Effects of Hay Fever.

"Ma, what is a grass widow?" asked a Harlem youth who had been reading in the paper about a person of that description.

"Why, my boy, I can't explain it exactly," replied the mother.

"I'll bet I know, anyhow," said the smart youngster.

"Well, tell me."

"A grass widow is a female woman whose husband died of hay fever," he exclaimed. Then he went out in the kitchen and rubbed the cat's head with red pepper.—Augusta News.

Backsliding.

1. It is turning from God. (I. Kings xi. 9.)
2. It is displeasing to God. (Psalms lxxviii. 57,59.)
3. It is leaving first love, (Revelations ii. 4.)
4. It is departing from, etc. (II. Corinthians xi. 3; Galatians iii.1, 3.)
5. Liable to continue and increase. (Jeremiah viii. 5.)
6. Warnings against it. (Psalms lxxxv, 8; Corinthians x. 12.)
7. Exhortations to return. (Isaiah xxxi. 1; Jeremiah, iii. 12, 14, 22; Hosea vi. 1; Hebrews iii. 12; John xviii. 26.)
8. Let us hold fast our profession. (Hebrews iv. 14.)

By latest advices from Bulgaria, (April 24) we learn that our school building at Loftcha had been assulted and damaged. Five ot the ruffians had been arrested and imprisoned. The Acting Minister of Public Instruction has refused definitely to reopen our schools. Mr. Challis was about to start for Constantinople at summons from Gen. Wallace, and the affair with our mission was likely to be the subject of formal appeal to the Powers interested in the Berlin treaty. Political excitement is on the increase. Intelligent Bulgarians of all classes see that the action of the government in relation to our missiou is connected with the whole question of religions and political liberty, and they are discussing the matter with great freedom and interest.

Army Officer's Testimony.

Captain Joseph L. Hayden, residing at No. 924 Fourth Street, South Boston, Mass., formerly captain in the army, now with the Walworth Manufacturing Company, South Boston, writes, April 28, 1883: "While living in Cambridgeport my wife was afflicted with terrible pains in her back and sides, accompanied with great weakness and loss of appetite. She tried many so-called remedies without avail, growing rapidly worse, when her attention was called to Hunt's Remedy. She purchased a bottle from Lowell's drug store, in Cambridgeport, and after taking the first dose she began to feel easier, she could sleep well, and after continuing its use a short time the severe pains in her back and side entirely disappeared, and she is a well woman. Many of our relatives and friends have used Hunt's Remedy with the most gratifying results. I have recommended it many times, and as many times heard the same story. Hunt's Remedy is all claimed for it, and a real blessing to all afflicted with kidney or liver trouble."

Made A Man of Him.

Mr. C. O. Wheeler, No. 23 Austin Street, Cambridgeport, Mass., makes the following remarkable statement. On April 27, 1883, he writes as follows: "I have been troubled with kidney disease for nearly twenty years. Have suffered at times with terrible pains in my back and limbs. I used many medicines, but found nothing reached my case until I took Hunt's Remedy. I purchased a bottle of A. P. Gilson, 630 Tremont Street, Boston, and before I had used this one bottle I found relief, and continued its use, my pains and weakness all disappeared, and I feel like a new man, with new life and vigor. Hunt's Remedy did wonders for me, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it to all affected with kidney or liver diseases, as I am positive that by its use they will find immediate relief. You may use this letter in any way you choose, so that the people may know of a sure medicine for the cure of all diseases of kidneys and liver."

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, B. D., Assistant.

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1883.

Turn to God to-day. Procrastination is the thief of time. To-morrow may be too late.

Rev. D. W. Hays, Chattanooga: "The improved appearance of the paper will, I think, make it much easier to secure subscribers for it."

Commencement exercises of Straight University will take place Tuesday evening next, at Central Congregational church. Thanks to the graduating classes for an invitation.

The sixteenth session of the Texas Conference A. M. E. Church was held at Bryan, Texas, Dec. 14, 1882. The following is a suggestive report from the Committee on Publications: "Your committee finds nothing new around our book departments. Some high prices higher than any other denomination and no better."

The report of the committee on Sunday schools at the late session of the Texas Annual Conference, A. M. E. Church, states an increase of 339 pupils, but a great falling off in their contributions for missions. A few years ago the Sunday schools gave from $150 to $200 for the cause of missions, but now they give only from $10 to $15 per year, showing that the missionary spirit is dying out.

The portrait of Keats, drawn by Joe. Severn when the poet was in his last illness, has been engraved for the June Century. An engraving of Severn (who died in Rome in 1879) has never before been reproduced in America. These pictures are published by permission of Mr. Severn's family; they are accompanied by autographs, and by a sonnet by Edith Thomas.

The Minutes of the last session of the Texas A. M. E. Conference show 2581 members 319 on probation. For missions they gave $34,50, for education $395. They report 39 churches valued at $36,700, 12 parsonages valued at $4,550. The total value of this church property is $41,250, with over $2,474 indebtedness. For the support of their pastors they gave $5,922,57, for the presiding elders $1,602,10.

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Columbus, Miss.: "Please accept my sincere congratulations upon the changed and beautiful appearance and the triumphant success of the SOUTHWESTERN. May you live long and never stop fighting caste until it is banished from this country. The brethren should labor as never before to put a copy of the SOUTHWESTERN in the home of every Methodist family in the Southwest. You have my sympathy, my prayers and my support."

Rev. Dr. Alexander has favored us with a copy of the minutes of the Louisiana Congregational Association, which met in New Iberia April 4-7, for which we return thanks. The Doctor was elected moderator of the Association for the seventh time, and, together with Rev. Isaac H. Hall, a delegate to the National Congregational council. The Association is composed of thirteen ministers, and three licentiates, and has a church membership of 1480, with a Sunday School force of 703.

We acknowledge receipt of program and tickets for Leland University anniversary, May 21 to 23. The Model School exhibition took place last Monday evening at the University chapel; the musical entertainment, Tuesday evening at Austerlitz Street Baptist Church. Wednesday, at 2:30 p. m., in the Church, services were held, addresses delivered and resolutions adopted in memory of the late Holbrook Chamberlain, the beneficent founder of Leland University. In the evening the commencement exercises were held. Our Baptist brethren have just pride in their efficient educational institution, which is doing noble work.

Bishop Jesse T. Peck.

Rev. Bishop Jesse Truesdell Peck, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home in Syracuse, N. Y., last Tuesday, May 18, aged 72 years, and was buried last Monday, 21st inst. Bishop Simpson conducted the services.

Bishop Peck was one of the most notable figures in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was born in 1811, and at 16 years was converted to God and united with the church. In 1832, when 21 years of age, he was admitted in the Oneida conference, and continued to do active service in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church for fifty years. He was a spiritual giant and a loving disciple. In the early years of his ministry he occupied many of the outposts of Zion, some of the hardest circuits of our connexion. After several years of laborious and successful work in central New York he was transferred to the Black River Conference Academy; thence he went, as principal, to the Troy Academy. In 1849 he became president of Dickinson College, where he intrenched himself in the grateful memory of so many young men, who have since become brilliant lights in our ministry. He subsequently became pastor of the Foundry Church, Washington, D. C., where there are many to this day who mention his earnest and successful pastorate with pride. In 1854 he labored as successfully and zealously as ever on the Pacific coast. Returning to the East, he spent three years in New York, after which he became chancellor at Syracuse University, where he set influences, for good, in motion, that continue to be a benediction to that institution. Bishop Peck established quite a reputation as an author. His chief works are: "The Central Idea of Christianity," a masterly exposition of the doctrine of sanctification; "The True Woman;" "History of the Great Rebellion, considered from a Christian stand-point," etc., etc. From 1844 to 1872 he was a member of all the General Conferences of our church, and the last one of which he was a member, that of 1872, called him to the highest honor which the Methodist Episcopal church can confer, to be a Bishop in the church. As a Bishop he continued to be "in labor more abundant." He crossed the Continent, traversed over distant seas, scaled lofty heights, went, and delighted to go wherever duty called him. As a member, and one of the presidents of the Ecumenical Council, which met in London two years ago, he distinguished himself as an earnest, warm hearted and clear sighted Christian disciple. Thus, Bishop Peck, one of the most active workers in our Episcopacy, continued his labors with no apparent impediments, until his memorable tour of the Southern Conferences during the winter of 1881-2. The roughness of travel, the irregularity of trains, the consequent exposure, change of water and food, and irregularity of meals, etc., all joined and mercilessly in tearing down his vitality. After his great success in Aberdeen at the Mississippi Conference, and in Franklin at the Louisiana, he reached the Little Rock Conference, at Little Rock, Ark., completely broke down; and notwithstanding his great will-power, he had to succumb to his infirmities. He was met here, providentially however, by Bishop Warren, who kindly assisted him, thus enabling him to close in due form all the work of this conference. We assisted him to the depot at Little Rock, when awaiting a delayed train for several hours, he lay upon the rough benches, with a pillow which we had borrowed under his head. He was too sick to sit up. When we saw him safely lodged in a sleeper, in charge of a local preacher of our church who was going to St. Louis in the same train, and bade him good bye, we hardly thought he would live to see next morning. Turning to us he said: "Don't say anything in your paper about my sickness; it will excite Mrs. Peck; but wait till I get home." From that day to the day the of his death, Bishop Peck never fully recovered his usual health, but continued in a lingering impoverished health, until last Friday, when death unlocked the prison-house, and his weary blood-bought spirit took its flight to the Christian home in glory, to the rest prepared for the people of God. The venerable Bishop, an able preacher, a sound theologian, a friend of man and a son of God, is gone to his reward. Many who saw and heard, and learned to love him, during his last Episcopal tour through Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas, will join the million and multiplied thousands of our communion in mourning his departure. God bless Mrs. Peck, and comfort and sustain her in this hour of her great bereavement.

The "Northern" and Color Line People.

Dr. Warren of the Northern Christian Advocate has an editorial in the issue of May 3rd, on "The Color Line Problem." While the Doctor is generally a very clear and plain writer, there are certain matters referred to in this paper in such a way that we do not understand him. We seek information and would like to know what is meant by "a manifest lack of affinity between the races."

Does the Doctor think that the color of a man's skin only is a sufficient "ground of any discrimination for or against him?"

How long does he think the church should wait before she "decides where or how far the color line shall finally be drawn." Read "The Church would not be justified in demanding the acceptance of her highest standard of doctrine on this subject as the condition on which his work in the South is to be carried forward." To our unsophisticated ears this sounds strange: Are we to understand that the Northern teaches that the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are to accommodate their teachings to the prejudices and usages of those whom they wish to convert, and thus make their conversion easy; or shall they preach the pure, unmixed, Gospel of the blessed God, making no compromise with any false doctrine or sinful practice? Which shall we do? Next to the approval of God, we crave the approbation of the church; but as there are certain doctrines of the church, the acceptation of which we shall not be justified in demanding, will Dr. Warren please tell us which they are?

Read again, "There is no danger that the Methodist Episcopal Church will go forth proclaiming itself the white man's church and inviting the white man to come to its communion on the assurance that the black man shall be kept away. Nobody proposes to plant our church anywhere on those conditions; but in particular departments of Christian work, especially in the work of education, ought we to refuse to do good because we cannot do it under all the conditions which we would prescribe?" We should say that depends. If our conditions are such as involve no moral or Christian principle we should abandon them, and quit the field; but if they are in harmony with the law of God let us adhere to them. Converted men who are pagans still are no element of strength to the church. Are we right?

The Doctor asks, "Shall we refuse to teach the ignorant white man unless he first rise up to our level of conviction and declare his willingness to be taught in company with a colored man?" We answer most decidedly, No! There are a number of mistakes in this question. It assumes what is not true. It assumes that we refuse to teach the poor ignorant whites, a sad mistake. It assumes that the way to elevate men is not to assail their erroneous principles and sinful practices, but to pass over them and to accommodate ourselves, in our instruction, to their errors, sinful passions and wicked prejudices; another and a fatal mistake for a Methodist preacher to make. We preach almost seven days in a week to a people more or less ignorant, many of whom are to a great extent under the influence of superstitious notions, sinful passions and prejudices, and dare not in a single instance where any Christian principle is involved accommodate our instruction to their passions or prejudices. It has been our thought that the only way to elevate and save men, is to present the pure principles of the Gospel, making no compromise with any false doctrine or sinful practice.

We agree with Dr. Warren that the Methodist Church must build her churches and plant her schools first and educate the people afterwards, but she must never surrender the Christian doctrine of universal brotherhood, the oneness of believers to a wicked and sinful prejudice. She builds churches and plants schools, for all races and classes and conditions of men. She opens the doors of her churches and colleges and says to white faces, or black faces, to the Caucasian, Negro, Mongolian or Indian "Come." We cannot conceive of any circumstances under which the great Methodist Episcopal Church, the church that is no where a stranger, and is at home everywhere, within whose fold are gathered representatives of all races, tongues and nationalities, would be justified in erecting a single church or establishing a single school, and then over its door put an inscription that is a synonym of the worst forms of heathenism. God has thrust an awful responsibility upon our church, she cannot evade it. Nor can she exalt Christ and save men by building caste churches or caste schools. Christ for all, and all for Christ, and in Christ all are one.

Faith.

"Faith is the act of receiving and trusting in Christ alone for salvation." If an act, it is not a gift—cannot be. God instructs, enlightens, promises, man believes. He does the promising—we the believing. A man of integrity and means promises, we rely upon his word and shape our business accordingly. The promising is the man's act. The relying is purely and entirely our own—an act of our mind. It is the same power; not another that is called into action to believe God. We rely upon the man for a pecuniary, a temporal favor; upon God for a spiritual and eternal blessing. The objects are different; but the acting in both cases is ours, and much the same. The ability to believe as to see is given. The use of one ability is faith; of the other is seeing, and both the faith and the seeing are our acts. The ability to believe is nearly all there is to moral agency; the exercise of this ability is about all man can do to secure his present and eternal salvation. If believing is purely man's own act, then he is only a machine and not a moral agent. If faith is only a gift why did Christ say to one "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe?" If it is only a gift why did he rebuke Peter for his little faith, or praise the centurion for his great faith. Could not Peter have justly replied, "I exercise all the faith you give me." Jesus addressed men at all times as possessing all the abilities necessary for them to exercise to secure their salvation. When he asked one "Wilt thou be made whole?" it was as though all depended upon the man's own volition. He talked to them as if all depended upon their own will. Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God. God speaks, man believes, and is saved; he disbelieves, and is lost.

Houston Texas is a great railroad centre, and is fast becoming the most populous centre in the Southwest. People are coming and settling here not only in wagon trains but at lightning speed on the cars. It is wonderful to see how this city is building up. Hundreds are coming here from the North and East who there were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but here they either drift into the M. E. Church South and help to build up, or come under the demoralizing influence of the drinking-saloons, gambling halls or infidel clubs, and are lost. Our church is giving cheerfully and liberally, and working zealously for the salvation and upbuilding of the colored people who are fast settling in this city, but up to this day but little save talk has she done for the salvation of the white people who are settling here. We ought to have a house of worship costing not less than ten thousand dollars immediately that would give us position and influence at once and for coming time. The cry is for immediate action. This is the season to plow, and it cannot be neglected without serious loss and damage. Men come to us and with tears in their eyes and ask us to plead with Presiding Elders, Bishops and the officers of the Church Extension Society for the erection of a church in Houston. We cannot look upon these scattered, unsheltered members of our church without being deeply moved. They need sympathy and aid, and we cannot be indifferent to them without guilt. The cry going up to God from many a heart is a Methodist Episcopal Church in Houston at once. Certain persons may not want it but it is nevertheless one of their greatest needs.

The Proposed Colored Convention.

The colored press are discussing the call of a national convention of colored men to meet in Washington City on the 24th of next September. The idea of calling such a convention is not a bad one; but would it not be the part of wisdom to so order it as to allow, or even to invite white friends of the race to participate as delegates in that convention? Colored leaders should not forget that the brave and lion-hearted race of Garrisons, Phillips, Tappans, Smiths, Browns, and a host of others who manfully stood by the slave in his darkest day, are not all dead. They are scattered all over this nation, as ready as ever, to do heroic deeds for the friendless and oppressed. These should not, and must not, be ignored. The Negro is free, and has the ballot; but in too many instances he is denied the free and untrammeled exercise of his constitutional prerogatives and civil rights. His voice is suppressed at the ballot box; his presence in the jury box, according to his numerical pro rata, is only the rare exception, and in the courts more especially when his opponent is white, he almost uniformly appears only to hear his sentence to be remanded to the chain-gang, the jail, or the penitentiary. A charge is generally equal to a conviction, and too often he becomes the victim of a prejudiced, infuriated mob, which hangs him to the nearest tree, upon some unproved, trumped up charge, without judge or jury. His rights on railroads and in public places are trampled upon with perfect impunity. These are but a few of the many outrages being suffered by the Negro, to-day, twenty years after the emancipation. Until secured in every civil and political right, and ever thereafter, no color line, erected by Negro hands, should exist between the Negro race and the white heroes and martyrs of his freedom. By all means let the convention meet, but let it be composed of representative colored men, and of such white friends of the race as have proven their devotion to the educational, moral, as well as political interests of the Negro. In such a convention let all the national interests, the great subjects of temperance, education, character, wealth, together with the political and civil rights of the race be fully discussed. Let the convention mature some plan or other and organize a national association, to be composed of friends of equal justice to all races, with branches in every State and territory, to carry out the result of its wise and patriotic deliberations, and the practical benefits emanating from the convention will be beneficially felt and seen throughout the broad land.

Caution! But to accomplish any good for the people, keep spoil brokers and place-seekers in the back ground. They are the Jonahs of any people. Throw them overboard.

Rev S. B. Darnell, principal of Cookman Institute, of our church, at Jacksonville, Florida, in a note to the editor says: "I feel in full sympathy with you and your theories about our work in the South. While I feel something should be done looking toward the welfare of the whole people, yet to raise barriers that exclude the colored people from the privileges of school and church is unwise, anti-christian, and exposes us to cruel criticism ever ready to be hurled at us. Our work in Florida is assuming far better proportions than heretofore, yet we feel it would be a very unwise thing to erect seperate conferences for the interest of the whole. Indeed if we are to have such lines of demarcation on a colored basis, we then become the easy prey of the Church South on the one hand and the African on the other; meanwhile, we surrender the great principle that has been one of our corner stones, the equality in spiritual things as the law in civil ones. I rejoice in the successful course of the SOUTHWESTERN. We had a grand year in Cookman, fifty per cent added; accommodations were full. You have a large following over in Louisiana, but here we have some royal souls, true to the church and true to our King."

The Minutes of the Texas Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, for 1882, show a membership of 7725, and 1232 on probation, while the minutes of 1881 show a membership of 8524 and 4092 on probation, showing a decrease in membership in one year of 799 and decrease of those on probation of 2840. If these figures are correct a few more years of such work and figuring and the Texas Conference passes into history. If they are not correct it is more than a misfortune for the conference thus to misrepresent itself. If they are correct they indicate but little efficiency, but if they are not correct they show great stupidity. The columns of the SOUTHWESTERN are open, will some of our brethren of the Texas conference give the needed information.

There is nothing more pestiferous than certain newspaper sold by nearly all of our news dealers. If a man should come into your house and throw off his coat that you knew to be tainted with small pox, you would quickly throw it into the fire or out of the window. But it is far more dangerous to have a newspaper in your house that is infected with the same spiritual small pox. Depend upon it, if you take a newspaper that is in the least tainted with evil, some one in the family will take the disease. The country is flooded with small pox papers. Subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN and you will have a newspaper that will help you in all the conflicts of life.

There are some excellent people in all of our churches who think they must go off in tantrums of swooning, jumping, screaming, or some circular motion, where it takes two or three persons to hold them, and all the time they think they are doing the work of the spirit. But how is this? Do these movements help or hinder? If they hinder, then it is Satan, an old enemy, who is leading on in such unseemly things and makes us think that his work is the work of the spirit. We want the spirit of discernment to discover every device of Satan and grace to turn from it.

PERSONAL.

—Bishop Bowman will spend the Summer in Indiana in canvassing for the completion of the $150, 00 for Asbury University.

—Rev. G. W. Rich has been transferred by Bishop Andrews from Greenup, Kentucky, to the St. Louis Conference, and stationed at Pierce City, Mo.

—We have never heard better singing in the South than from the choir of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, Houston, Texas, led by Prof. and Brother Todd.

—Rev. Dr. L. M. Vernon, who is in charge of our missions in Italy, greatly assisted King Humbert in making a census of the kingdom. In recognition of this the king has decreed a silver medal to Dr. Vernon, and one each to Alceste Lanna and Rev. Teoplo Gay, of our Italian Mission conference.

—The London, Eng., Methodist Recorder has this "One of the oldest Sunday-school scholars in the world is the Rev. Peter Akers, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is ninety-two years of age, and attends the Sunday-school Bible class regularly. It is said that a happier or more cheerful Christian than he is cannot be found outside of heaven.

—Amasa Stone, the millionaire of Cleveland, committed suicide by shooting simself at his residence on Euclid avenue. For months his health had been poor and for several weeks he had been afflicted with insomnia, which cause a great depression of spirits. His property is estimated all the way from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

—Capt. George L. Norton, Supervising Inspector of steam vessels, for the Southern District, has filed suit in the Civil District Court against the Daily States and Capt. Richard Sinnott for $25,000 damages for libel. The suit is based on a recent publication in the States of letters reflecting on Capt. Norton's character.

—While at Houston we had the pleasure of meeting E. B. Ramsen, M. D., a graduate of our medical college at Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Ramsen has made a fine impression upon our people in Houston, and is a member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. We take pleasure in commending the Dr. to all of the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN in Houston.

—Sabbath morning we spent with the Sunday-school connected with Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church in Houston, Tex. Next to the school connected with Clark Chapel, Nashville, Tenn., this is the best one we have seen South of the Ohio. Not one half of the local preachers in the church can pass so good an examination in the catechism as this school. Bro. Freeman, the superintendent has the earnest co-operation of Bro. Scott, the pastor, and with two such men pushing and and pulling together there can be no such thing as failure.

—A glimpse of the real feeling of the better class of people of Denver, Col., seems to be given in this paragraph from the Inter-Ocean: "Mrs. Augusta Tabor, the former wife of the ex-Senator, met a reception on her return from San Francisco that looked like a society ovation. After Mr. Tabor secured his divorce and married again, Mrs. Augusta Tabor went to California for a few months' sojourn, and it was on her return that this surprise was given to her. The guests included many prominent society people. Mr. Maxcey Tabor was present as host."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

J. S. Patterson, Bastrop: "Elder Duncan on his arrival here was greatly surprised to find me in bed with my leg broken. The brethren were all present at quarterly meeting. The church was packed to the uttermost, and two delightful sermons were preached. Members are wide awake. We raised this quarter $39.35 and paid elder $20. We are striving to get a new bell, and have raised $20 already; also $16.50 for lumber on the parsonage."

A. Branch, Clinton: "Mt. Carmel church is prospering. Sabbath-school under our new pastor, Rev. John Qualls, is crowded with old and young. The congregation is very large. The $50 debt of last year has been paid. April 22 sacrament was administered to 150 persons. Elder Forrest visited us from Clinton and we had a glorious time."

Rev. John Qualls, of Clinton sent us an appreciative article on the Woman's Home Mission work. He says Sister Hester Williams was at Mt. Carmel M. E. Church, and is riding through the country building up mission schools, seeking widows and orphans, and onward goes the work.

Frank Walker, Monroe: "Our church moves on. My little girl, three months and seventeen days old, has gone to the better world. My wife is very sick and blind, but I stand to my post by the help of God. Pray for me."

TEXAS.

The German Methodists in Texas have purchased the old building of Ruterville College, founded by Dr. Martin Ruter, and intend to build up an institution of learning for the Germans in Texas. The Freedmen's Aid Society has given $500 towards the enterprise.

J. B. Scott, Houston. "We closed a five weeks protracted effort the latter part of April. The Master was with us and blessed us with 21 conversions and 35 additions to the church, several of whom were received by certificate. A number of the ladies of the church have organized a Sewing Circle, which is doing a good work for the parsonage. They have purchased a Singer sewing machine, and a number of little necessaries for the parsonage. They gave an entertainment recently and netted $38. I must say the Circle is composed of a band of zealous workers and is an honor to the church. God bless and prosper them. Pray for us."

C. C. Robinson, Austin: "My work is growing. Elder Madison was with us and preached two good sermons. We have two live Sunday-schools."

TENNESSEE.

P. P. Brooks, Shelbyville: "I have closed a revival meeting with six converts; eight joined the church. At this place we are gaining ground. Have built and now occupy a parsonage."

ARKANSAS.

C. C. Riley, of Salsburg, claims that he was misunderstood. He does not know Mr. Willis Hall or what his past course has been.

A postal reached us which reads as follows: "Lost, strayed or stolen. Our pastor, Rev. A. Hardaman, of Argenta circuit, Little Rock Conference. If any one can give us any information of the whereabouts of our pastor, or will send him to us by express C. O. D. with privilege to examine before taking, we will return the favor if your pastor should ever wander into our part of the vineyard. Yours truly.

THE BOARD OF STEWARDS."

C. C. Riley, Saulsburg: "My work is very promising, though the country is low and flat, and the rain we have had for the last six or eight weeks has prevented our people from attending church and Sabbath-school. The water is rapidly drying up now, so that we can get about on foot. I have been around at night holding prayer meetings at different houses, and the Lord is blessing our work. On Sunday last we had a booming Sunday-school with about 75 present. We had preaching in the morning, and at night our church was crowded and we had a glorious time. We had 15 mourners at the anxious seat and one person joined the church. Our collection was $14.35. It was the first fair Sunday that we have had in nearly two months. We expect to continue our prayer meetings during the week. I am doing my best for the SOUTHWESTERN. Bros. Robt. Bell, Allen Crawford and Hilliard Woodfin are stewards of our church and they are earnest and energetic workers. Bro. S. S. Jones our earnest Sunday-school superintendent, and Bro. Nathaniel Darby our secretary, promise to make our Sunday-school the largest and best in the county. They are young men and their hearts are in the work."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

San Antonio District.

DEAR EDITOR:—The 21st and 22d of April found us at Victoria. Here I found the church in fine spirit. The quarterly meeting was a success all way through. A new fence had been put around our church, and lightning rods erected on top, which looks well, but it would look much better if the roof was higher, with two pitches more to it; lightning hardly ever strikes flat-roofed houses. There is strong talk of putting up a larger and better house than they have now just as soon as they get through with building the neat two-story, hipped-roofed weather-boarded building for a high-school, at Victoria. Bros. Carmichael and Watson are managing the enterprise most grandly. The building is an ornament to that part of the town, largely owned by colored people. Some $700 has been expended already in the enterprise, and perhaps $300, or more, will enable them to get inside; and $12.00 will complete it. The 28–29th brought us to Centerville colony, situated just midway between Victoria and and Goliad. This colony is owned by thriving colored people, who bought and paid for their land, and have good crops, and some of them have comfortable dwelling houses surrounded with choice shrubbery: They have built these good farms and houses in less than nine years, beginning with nothing, so to speak, and discouragements in more than one form, yet from the amount of improvements one might imagine they had been there 15 years. This includes a part of Bro Jas. Henderson's circuit, and he is doing a good work. The quarterly meeting was a success. The work revived and was pushed forward. May 5th and 6th were spent at Goliad. Bro. Goodwin's success is very marked; he is ably assisted by the ceaseless efforts of Prof. Westbrooks, president of Jones' Male and Female Institute. The quarterly conference excelled any previously held; more advance had been made. The Sunday-school is superintended by Bro. Westbrooks, and is the equal of any elsewhere in the district, if not superior. Sister L. A. Westbrooks is chairman of the committee on church music, and the first on the district this year to make any report. Here we have a choir being trained under her supervision, which relieves the pulpit of being music box and speaking trumpet at the same time. We regret not to be able to stay over to the close of the school, 25th May, '83. They have in treasury at Goliad to build a new edifice $700; we raised $136 by subscription 7th inst.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON IX. MAY 27. PAUL AND BARNABAS IN CYPRUS. (Acts xiii, 1-12.)

People who love Jesus want others to know him and love him, so they send the Bible and teachers to people here and away over the ocean to heathens. This is foreign missionary work, which began with Saul and Barnabas, when they went out from Antioch, to preach to the Gentiles in the countries around. After the Church had prayed and laid their hands on them, they sailed to Cyprus, an island in the Mediterranean Sea. The governor of Cyprus wanted to hear them, and a man called Elymas tried to make him hate them. He knew they worked for God, and Elymas was a man who did tricks, and made people believe him very wise. Elymas worked for Satan. Paul told him he was a wicked, deceitful man, and God would punish him. Elymas became blind and had to be led around. The governor became a Christian, so Elymas could not hinder God's work. If you stand up for Jesus and obey him, you are working for him, like Paul. If you laugh or make fun of any one for being very quiet in Church or Sunday school, or because they won't go to some place without asking mother or father, then you are working for Satan, and must be like Elymas. God can make blind hearts as well as blind eyes, and it would be dreadful to have a heart so hard it cou'd not see all Christ has done. Work all you can for God. Bring your money, but above all, give your heart, your hands, your feet, every thing to do something for Jesus. —Western

NEW BOOKS.

AGGRESSIVE CHRISTIANITY. Practical Sermons. By Mrs. Catherine Booth, with an introduction by Daniel Steele, D. D. Boston: Donald & Gill.

It is announced that these sermons, by the wife of Rev. Wm. Booth now commander-in-chief of Salvation Army, are reprinted in America at the suggestion of Dr. Steele. These sermons are highly commended, and are full of practical truths directly appealing to the hearts of all desiring to know the way of the Lord more perfectly.

"The Bridal Eve; or Rose Elmer," by Mrs. E. D. Southworth, is a new novel received from the press of T. B. Peterson & Bros. Philadelphia, and sold by booksellers. Price 75 cents. Mrs. Southworth is a voluminous and popular writer, and is regarded as a standard American writer of fiction. The new novel will be found as absorbing in interest as its predecessors.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Among the recent issues of this unique, and in respect to cheapness and beauty of form and typography, really remarkable Elzevir Library, are the following: "Aristotle," by Sir Alexander Grant; "Plato," by C. W. Collins; "Horace," by Theodore Martin. Those are in the famous and excellent "Ancient Classics for English Readers" series, heretofore obtainable only at the price of $1,00 each, but now published in this handsome form for 15 cents each. "The Indian Song of Songs," by Edwin Arnold, author of "The Light of Asia," is published at 6 cents, the cheapest edition heretofore issued being $1,00. We also have the "Life of Alex H. Stephens," by F. H. Norton. It contains an excellent portrait, and a fine illustration of "Liberty Hall," Mr. Stephens' famous home. Though a copyright work, paying the usual royalty to the author, it is published at the astonishing price of 10 cents. The last issue is Schiller's celebrated "Song of The Bell," and "Hero and Leander," all for 2 cents. These publications are not sold by dealers generally, but only direct by the publisher, John B. Alden, 18 Vesey St., New York.

Harper's Magazine for June is profusely and beautifully illustrated. Mrs. Z. B. Gustafson contributes an article, on Lambeth Palace. Colonel Higginson continues his American History series. The tendency apparent on the part of art connoisseurs and dealers toward the Indian in place of the Mongolian type is the occasion of "Indian Art in Metal and Wood," by J. L. Kipling, Curator of the Central Museum, Lahore, and Director of the Mayo School of Art. Ernest Ingersoll contributes "The Home of Hiawatha," describing Minnesota, and the milling industry at Minneapolis. William C. Wyckoff's "Sunlight Mysteries" describes experiments relative to the sun's light and heat, and the results reached are very remarkable and suggestive. The new novel, "A Castle in Spain," promises to be a wholesome and popular farce. To a varied table of contents is added the always timely and interesting matters in the editorial departments.

The Hartwell Mirror is the title of a monthly just commenced under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hartwell, O. Rev. S. O. Royal, editor, C. H. Rust manager. It is a racy quarto, filled with local news.

The Peacemaker and Court of Arbitration, published monthly by the Philadelphia Universal Peace Union, 813 Arch St. Philadelphia, Pa. Henry G. Chbb, editor; 24 pages, price $1.00 per year.

Choice Literature for May (New York: John B. Alden) exhibits a fine table of contents, covering current literary topics in the foreign field. It is cheap at 15 cents per copy, and $1 per year.

The Season, for June, is at hand with its record of latest fashions patterns for needlework, and illustrations. Price 30 cents, at the new stands.

The Donaldsonville Cheif appears in a dress of new type, and will continue to be one of the brightest of local newspapers in the Southwest.

DROPS OF WATER.

Mr. JOSEPH G. BICKNELL, No. 642 Main Street, Cambridgeport, Mass., writes. April 27, 1883: "I have been terribly afflicted for a number of years with gravel and kidney disease. My urine contained brick-dust deposits, and at times I could not pass my water except in drops and with great pain; and have had to get up as many as fifteen times during the night. I tried several physicians; they did me no good, but a friend of mine, who had used Hunt's Remedy told me to get a bottle and try it. He had been cured of a severe case similar to mine, and that others had used Hunt's Remedy in Cambridge and pronounced it a medicine of real merit. After being repeatedly urged I purchased a bottle, and before I had used all of it I passed a stone as large as a pea, followed by similar ones. I have used in all ten bottles, and it has completely cured me. My kidneys are in excellent condition, and for one of my age (68) sixty-eight years, I can truly say I feel like a young man with strength and vitality. My family use the Remedy, and would not be without it, and never fail to recommend it to our friend and neighbors in Cambridge and Boston. You are at liberty to use my name in praise of the best kidney and liver medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

"DID WONDERS FOR ME."

The above words are from Mr. LEWIS KEEN, No. 9 Highland Avenue, Malden, Mass., April 28, 1883. He says: "I have been troubled for years with kidney and liver complaint, followed by gravel, with severe pains in my back and groins. I had great trouble in passing water it being scanty, and accompanied by terrible burning, the vessel being coated with brick-dust deposit. I was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy by a friend who had been completely cured of a similar trouble. I purchased a bottle at the druggists, and commenced to improve at once. I have used but two bottles, and it has done wonders for me—no more kidney trouble, no more pain. It has given me new life, and I would not be without Hunt's Remedy at any price. It is all that it is recommended to be, and I cheerfully give this testimony for the benefit of the many sufferers from kidney disease and gravel."

SPANISH CREAM.—Beat the yolks of three eggs with half a cup of granulated sugar; heat half an ounce of isinglass in three pints of milk; when it is dissolved, and the milk rises to a boiling point, stir them slowly into the yolks; boil once more and then stir in the frothed whites. Pour into moulds and set away to cool. This is very good the second day after it is made.

GOLDEN SAUCE.—Make a smooth boiled custard with the yolks of three eggs, half a cupful of sugar and a pint of milk. Flavor it to taste.

COOKIES.—Take one heaping cup of sugar, twelve table-spoonfuls of melted butter, six table-spoonfuls of hot water and a tea-spoonful of soda. Mix quickly, with flour enough to roll; roll thin and bake in quick oven on well greased tins; keep in a stone jar.

SUGAR GINGERBREAD.—Soft gingerbread, made with sugar instead of molasses, helps to give variety. Half a pound of sugar should be rubbed with three ounces of butter until the butter is soft as butter. To these should be added two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful and a half of ginger, half a spoonful of soda dissolved in a little water, and half a cup of milk or [illegible], and flour enough to make [illegible]. CREAM SODA.—Three ounces of tartaric acid, four pounds of white sugar, five pints of water, and the whites of three eggs beaten to a froth. [illegible] CORN BREAD.—Two and a half cups of sour milk, one and a half cups of sweet milk, one cup of molasses, two tea-spoonfuls soda, a little salt, four cups of meal and two cups of flour. Steam two and one half hours and bake half hour.

QUICK CAKE is made of one cup of sour milk, one cup of sugar, a cup of butter, one egg, one cup of raisins (stoned and chopped), a tea-spoonful of soda dissolved in a little warm water, one teaspoonful of spices, and two cups and a half of flour. This should be eaten while fresh, but if it is not, [illegible] or three days, beat the white of an egg to a froth and add [illegible] to make a frosting [illegible] of the cake.

Little By Little.

Little by little the time goes by—
Short if you sing through it, long if you sigh;
Little by little—an hour, a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away.
Little by little the race is run.
Trouble and waiting and toil are done!
Little by little, the skies grow clear;
Little by little the sun comes near;
Little by little the days smile out
Gladder and brighter on pain and doubt;
Little by little the seed we sow
Into a beautiful yield will grow.
Little by little the world grows strong,
Fighting the battle of right and wrong;
Little by little the wrong gives way,
Little by little the right has sway;
Little by little all longing souls
Struggle up nearer the shining goals.
Little by little the good in men
Blossoms to beauty for human ken;
Little by little the angels see
Prophecies better of good to be;
Little by little the God of all
Lifts the world nearer His pleading call!

Selected.

The M. E. Missions in Africa.

More eloquence has been wasted over Liberia than any foreign field, but there has been an utter want of resoluteness in dealing with administrative difficulties; and heroism in facing physical dangers on that coast. In the course of thirty years two bishops have been sent on flying visits to the coast, and a great flourish of trumpets has been made over the fact. A very few missionaries have been sent out of late years, but nothing commensurate with the magnitude of the work has been attempted. The management has been bad, and the only effort made to improve the mission among the colonists has been to cut down the appropriations.

In striking contrast with this Liberian work we may notice the University Mission in Eastern Africa. In twenty-one years the Mission has buried twenty-three laborers, and yet has never for a moment relaxed its efforts. Its work has gone forward, and now decided success bids fair to reward its toils. The American Methodists have yet to learn some very solemn lessons about their missionary duty. They have yet to learn that it will cost both life and treasure to rescue our world from the grasp of Satan. They have made martyr of Melville B. Cox, but his death, so far from rousing the Church to a nobler devotion, really created a panic which has made men shrink from African fevers as from death itself. The slave trader, the gold digger and the merchant, have all gone bravely to malarial coasts where the Church cannot, or at least has not, sent missionaries. If ever a Church needed a mighty arousing to a sense of her imperative duty, the Methodist Episcopal Church of America is that body.—Dr. Thoburn in Indian Witness.

Brute Fidelity.

An old elephant was engaged in battle on the plains of India. He was a standard-bearer, and carried on his huge back the royal ensign, the rallying point of the Poona host. At the beginning of the fight he had lost his master. The mahout, or driver, had just given him the word to halt when he received a fatal wound and fell to the ground, where he lay under a heap of slain. The obedient elephant stood still while the battle closed around him and the standard he carried. He never stirred a foot, refusing either to advance or retire as the conflict became hotter and fiercer, until the Mahrattas, seeing the standard still flying steadily in its place, refused to believe that they were being beaten, and rallied again and again round the colors. And all this while, 'mid the din of battle, the patient animal stood, straining its ears to catch the sound of that voice it would never hear again.

At length the side of conquest left the field deserted. The Mahrattas swept on in pursuit of the flying foe, but the elephant like a rock stood there, with the dead and dying around and the ensign waving in its place.

For three days and nights it remained where its master had given him command to halt. No bribe nor threat could move it. They then sent to a village one hundred miles away and brought the mahout's little son. The noble hero seemed then to remember how his driver had sometimes given his authority to the little child, and immediately, with all the shattered trappings clanging as he went, paced quietly and slowly away.

Preacher and Pugilist

One of the arguments in favor of a future life is based on those equalities of the present life, which man's moral sense asserts ought to be remedied somewhere. The following sketch from the New York Commercial Advertiser presents one of these suggestive inequalities:

"Who is the well-dressed man with sealskin overcoat, hat and gloves? He carries a gold-headed cane, and is followed by a scarlet blanket. Do you know him?"

"Oh yes; that is Slugger, the pugilist. Fine man. Hard hitter. Very popular. Always surrounded by a crowd of admiring friends, as you see him now. He is very well off; was given a benefit the other night which netted him five hundred dollars."

"Indeed! he is very fortunate."

"Oh yes; a very fortunate fellow. Ranks high in his profession you see." "Who is that white-headed, weary-looking old man, close behind the pugilist and his friends? Poor man! he seems thinly clad for this wintry weather. Do you know him?"

"Oh yes; that is old faithful, a country clergyman. Very learned man, they say. Been a preacher of the gospel all his life, but poor as a rat. He had a benefit, too, the other night."

"Oh, indeed! Did it net him much?" "I don't think it did. You see, it was a sort of a surprise party. His parishioners called upon him in a body, ate up everything there was in the house and left him presents to the amount of sixty cents."—Companion.

The great mass of the colored population of the South never have received temperance training or education, never having heard the truth about the effects of alcohol. They have no temperance literature, never attend any meetings of the whites where temperance is discussed, and it is not their fault if they are wrong on this great question. We must commence with the very foundation principles—the A B C of temperance—show them the nature and effect of alcohol, and after they have had half the instruction the white people of America have received they will be far ahead of them in practice and example. Never were children more eager to read, and our small stock of illustrated tracts and copies of The Youths' Temperance Banner quickly disappeared, and the mute pleadings for more came with distressing power, and we wished we had enough to give to every child and family in the entire South-land. We visited the well-known Cookman Institute, Rev. S. R. Darnell, superintendent, where two hundred students are being trained and educated. Nearly all have signed the pledge, and the highest class is studying Dr. Richardson's "Temperance Lesson-Book." Five hundred colored children in Stanton School held their hands up high in pledging themselves to total abstinence and the right.—J. S. Stearns, in N. T. Advocate.

What with the wholesale election frauds and ring misrule in New Orleans, the series of heavy defalcations by the sheriffs of that city, the grabbing of State lands and the impoverishment of the levee fund under the McEnery land contract, and the raid of the State treasury under Act No. 93 of 1880, the people will need microscopes of great power to distinguish between the much denounced "period of Radical usurpation and spoliation" which followed reconstruction in Louisiana, and the present epoch of Democratic outrage and corruption.—Donaldsonville Chief.

My sister Sarah she belonged to Terry Graves in Fayette. She and I went to Missouri together. In a short time after I was sold again; and to the present time I have been unable to learn anything from them, or their whereabouts. I am the oldest boy, and was about three years of age at the time of our separation. I am about 35 years old now. I hope brother preachers will take an interest in my inquiry and help me to find my relatives. Address, REV. J. I. TURNER, Lock Box 21, Abilene, Taylor co, Texas.

An original sect is reported to exist in Finland, the fundamental principle of which is the sovereign authority of woman in the family. The disciples of the sect, whether married or living in concubinage, take an oath to submit themselves entirely to their wife or mistress, and to confess to her once a week. On their sides the women choose one of their number as sovereign, whose duty it is to see that the men remain faithful to their oath, and to punish them if they transgress. There are some villiges entirely devoted to this new religion. The only analogy to this sect is to be found in Siberia, where the Purifiers recognize equally the authority of women.

Dr. Jennie Trout, of Toronto, Canada, a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, has donated $10,000 to that city to establish a medical school for women. Mrs. Dr. Trout is the wife of Dr. Edward Trout, of the Monetary Times.

A Great temperance festival is to be held at the London Crystal Palace, July 10.

New York.

This is to certify that I am well acquainted with a man fifty years of age, for many years a resident of this city, who has been at times extremely ill, but could not tell from what cause, unless it was worms. He told his attending physician his suspicions, but the physician at once ridiculed the idea, and refused to attend him any longer. His son then mentioned Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and asked him if he would take it; his reply was—I must take something to get relief, or die.

They at once procured a bottle of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and he took one dose. The result was, he passed upwards of three quarts of worms, cut up in every form. He got well immediately, and is now enjoying excellent health; and, like the good Samaritan of old, is endeavoring to relieve his unfortunate neighbors. He makes it his business to hunt up and select all cases similar to his own, that may be given over by regular physicians, and induces them to try Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge. So far he has induced more than twenty persons to take the Vermifuge, and in every case with the most happy results. He is well satisfied that Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, is far superior to any other known remedy, and that if more generally known would not fail to save many valuable lives. For further particulars inquire of Mrs. Hardie, [illegible] Canoen street, New York City.

Plantation Melodies

—AND—

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Bound in cloth, gilt, 272 pages, and portrait. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, 60 cents.

Address, PHILLIPS & HUNT,

Voudou Worship.

Bishop Payne, of the A. M. E. Church, in a letter to the Christian Recorder relating some of his observations in Florida, says:

"The heathen mode of worship is largely prevalent. But there is a noble reaction against the practice of this anti-Christian spirit. For proof of my statement, I here enclose two cards which have been widely circulated within the bounds of the East Florida Conference, which I beg that you will publish in your next issue along with this communication. They were written and published by H. B. Decosta, a local deacon in the A. M. E. Church, and endorsed by Rev. R. D. Durham, the pastor of the leading Baptist church of the colored Baptists in Jacksonville, Fla:

REASONS WHY VOUDOU RING DANCES SHOULD BE DRIVEN FROM OUR CHURCHES.

Common sense condemns it. They are a disgrace to the present age. This, the way the Africans worship snakes. Twenty years of freedom have taught you better things. Christ and his apostles did not preach this practice. The children make fun of it. None are so ignorant NOW as to believe Voudou Ring Dancing is religion. Everybody knows it is not religion.

WALK IN THE LIGHT.

Your shame is now made complete
To dance religion with your feet.
You call it shout, and change its name,
'Tis Voudou Dancing all the same.
You like to dance when fixed up neat,
To show your dress, to show your feet.
And when you are so nicely dressed,
You dance the most and dance your best.

Shame! Shame!! Shame!!!

Our preachers in regions farther North who encourage or connive at this species of African Voudouism, ought to be ashamed of themselves. I am sure that they disgrace the Christian name, and if they do not soon change their course of conduct, they ought to be dismissed from the itinerant service of the church and a more Christ-like set of pastors put in their positions. This "heel and fist" mode of worship which was imported from Africa was cherished during the reign of slavery, and has been encouraged by unprincipled pastors who have more respect for animalism than for Christianism. They also have more fear of displeasing these Voudouites than displeasing that God who has commanded us to worship in spirit and in truth."

The Theistic Church business does not seem to flourish in New York city, the only place in which the attempt has been seriously made. O. B. Frothingham, who was at the head of the movement several years ago but gave up in something like despair, is a man of genius, the soul of honor, and a transcendentalist of the highest order. Retiring from the field, after an interregnum he was succeeded by Felix Adler, a Jew, who has felt the power of Christian influences without becoming more than an earnest moralist and philanthropist, but who has not created even a ripple on the surface of New York theistical society. And now we have Mr. Schermerhorn, who raises the old cry of sentimental young reformers, that a new form of faith, of which he is one of the chief apostles, if not the chiefest of all, is about to burst upon us and convert all the people that Christianity has failed to save. But he has made a sorry beginning. It partakes too much of the moral show business, with flaming posters, and doubtful letters of introduction and commendation. Mr. Schermerhorn will never be accused of turning the world upside down.—Central.

If you want to succeed in the world you must make your own opportunities as you go on. The man who waits for some seventh wave to toss him on dry land will find that the seventh wave is a long time coming. You can commit no greater folly than to sit by the roadside until some one comes along and invites you to ride with him to wealth or influence.—John B. Gough.

PROFESSOR R. C WORD, M. D., LL. Dean of the University of Georgia (editorial in Southern Medical Record), says: "In view of the favorable effect of the Coca in counteracting THE OPIUM HABIT, the Liebig Co's Coca Beef Tonic is admirably adapted for the relief of this unfortunate habit." Also invaluable in dyspepsia, piles, biliousness.

Carry religious principle into common life, and common life will lose its transitoriness. The world passeth away. The things seen are temporal. Soon business with all its cares and anxieties, the whole "unprofitable stir and fever of the world," will be to us a thing of the past. But religion does something better than sigh and moan over the perishableness of earthly things. It finds in them the seeds of immortality.—John Caird.

"Do Likewise."

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:—"Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles. Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room alone. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and using the local treatment recommended in your 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' In three months I was perfectly cured. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for them and inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and earnestly advised them to do 'likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks stating that they had commenced the treatment and were much better already."

MRS. E. F. MORGAN, New Castle, Me.

For sluggish bowels, torpid liver, indigestion, bad breath, flatulence, sick headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the certain remedy. By land or at sea, out on the prairie or in the crowded city, they are the best pill for purgative purposes, everywhere alike convenient, efficacious and safe.

The Sunday school at Alexandria, O., of about 50 regular attendants, decided to take the usual missionary collections on Easter Sabbath in eggs instead of pennies. Superintendent Chadwick agreed to double the contribution on his own account of the class that should bring the most. He had to call assistance to carry 25 dozen, the required number. About 80 dozen were contributed, amounting to over $11.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. DR. JOHN BULL'S

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL AND SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

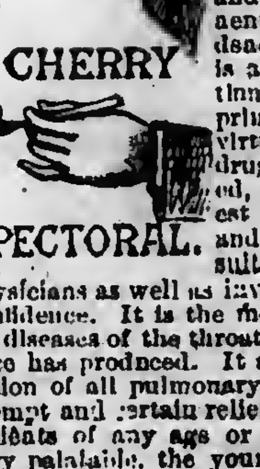
THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.



AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

Diseases of the pulmonary organs are so prevalent and fatal, that a safe and reliable remedy for them is invaluable to every community. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

For the Happiness of Home

From a Clergyman's Home Comes a Message Containing the Wisdom of Experience.

Home is the centre of the social system. From it proceed the best and purest influences felt in the world, and towards it gravitate the tenderest hopes of humanity. For if all good men labor while their working days last, and around it their last thoughts linger lovingly when those days are done.

Yet home does not usually approach in practice its own ideals. The mother is overtaxed with household duties and the rearing and training of her children, while the father fights the outside battle to win the wherewithal to meet expenses. Sooner or later care and toil leave their marks. It is true enough, as Kingsley sings in the "Three Fishers," that but too much working and weeping brush all the bloom from life's fruit.

Mental anxiety and lack of rest and pleasure induce physical disease of many kinds; whence the need of a trustworthy tonic to give health and strength in times of need. Among the good women of the land who have found such a sure anchor is Mrs. A. C. George, wife of Rev. A. C. George, D. D., pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, of Chicago, whose words we have her permission to quote:

"I use Parker's Ginger Tonic in my family, and can say that we are highly pleased with it as a tonic. From my experience of its value, I recommend it as a reliable family medicine."

Please note: first, Parker's Ginger Tonic is not a mere essence of Ginger; second, it contains nothing to create an appetite for intoxicating drinks; third, it is a splendid health restorative for all who suffer from disordered Liver and Kidneys or any disease arising from indigestion and impure blood. Accept no substitute for it. Prices, 50c. and $1 per bottle. It is cheaper to buy the larger size. Hiscox & Co., New York.

In the murder trials at Dublin, Thomas Martin, after pleading guilty, was released "on his undertaking to leave the country," that is to say, to come to the United States. "Some of the English papers" observes the N. Y. Times," have recently shown a good deal of sensitiveness as to the treatment accorded here to alleged or professed plotters against the peace of the kingdom But the United States has never invited assassins to its shores, is pledged to send them back, on proper evidence, if they come, and would be extremely obliged to England if she would keep her own at home."

In the recently published autobiography of the late Rev. Bishop E. O. Haven, D. D., we find the following: "When a few weeks old the 'census man' called to take the number of persons in the household. My mother, after mentioning my father and herself and the three other children, and perhaps the nurse, held me up and said, 'Here is another that we havent named yet. The man looked a few seconds carelessly, and exclaimed, 'Ah! he won't live a week; I guess we won't count him,' and made no entry in his book So far as I know, I am the only person then living in the country that was refused a place in the census of 1820. Really all accurate statistics ought to notice, in making their calculation, that the population of the United States for 1820, instead of being 9,638, 131, as usually stated, was really 9,638,132, or subsequent censuses should be proportionately diminished."

"Thank God Kentucky's wives can now be protected" exclaimed Phil Thompson, Esq., on the acquittal of his son Hon. Phil P. Thompson at the close of the trial of the latter for wilfully killing Walter Davis. This is the statement of one of the so called chivalrous sons of Kentucky, a State that is calling for emigrants to help develop its resources, and we should hope change somewhat its mode of civilization. It may be that the wives and honorable men of Kentucky, married or single, are so inured to this form of civilization as not to feel humiliated and insulted when it is published to the world that in Kentucky there can be no true assurance for the sanctity and safety of wifehood and womanhood except in the presence of the shot gun. It seems to us that education and the christian religion ought to establish a higher and a better form of civilization, one less bulldozing and terrorising but a hundred fold more restraining than the shot gun.

Henry Simkins and Rev. James Porter, of the Mansion, were treated in a most shameful manner at Texarkana. Members of the State Press Association, and going with the press excursionists to Mexico, they had a right to expect the same treatment that was offered to their fairer skinned brethren of the quill, but at Texarkana they were summarily "bounced" from a hotel dining room where the members had gone for breakfast.—Arkansas Herald.

The Creation of the Universe and Man.

Synopsis of a Sermon Preached by Rev. J. G. Vaughan, in Ames M. E. Church, New Orleans, May 13, 1883, from the Text, Gen. i. 1.27.

There are two facts patent to every intelligent observer: That man is an entity and that he is in a material universe. The questions naturally arise, what is the history of man? and what is the history of the universe? These questions would be very easily answered by a person not given to scientific inquiry, by affirming that God created both 6000 years ago, but those who would harmonize science and religion must be more cautious in statements, for science proves that the world is much more that 6000 years old. "In the beginning" is an indefinite term, and allows ample time for all the geological and astronomical eons which sience can prove. The term "create" as used in the text does not refer to plastic formation, for that is described in the following verses, but refers to the origination of matter. Paul says: "The worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Heb. xi, 3. The word create (bara) usually means calling into existence something that had not previously existed. We cannot measure this creative period by a chronometer, which, according to the narrative itself, did not come into existence until the fourth day. The term day in the narrative, and in many other places of scripture, is used in an indefinite sense. In Gen. i, 5, it applies to the whole preceding period. In II Peter iii, 8, we are taught that God does not regulate his actions by sidereal time. By adopting this view, science and Genesis are in perfect accord. Dana and Agassiz claim the first movement towards the present condition of things to have been activity of matter and generation of light; in the second, the world was separated from the fluid around it and assumed a condition of solidity; third, appearance of vegetable life; fourth, light from the sun; fifth, animal life; sixth, the appearance of man. This order has been proven by scientific discovery, but is none the less in wonderful harmony with the facts and order as given in Genesis. Moses was an inspired narrator and did not try to instruct the people in geology. Science is an investigator and more concerned in getting at facts than in conforming to the Mosaic account.

Revelation and science are agreed that the formation of the physical universe preceded everything else. The crust of the earth has a history which the geologist can read. As he begins to read its pages and pass downward in its depths he passes strata after strata at vast intervals, and thus soon passes our historic landmarks. Time cannot be reckoned very accurately by this process, but duration is marked rather by great intervals such as the return of a continent to the bosom of the ocean, where it had been formed ages before. It matters not how shallow our graves may be, we are doomed to rest in the dust of a departed world, for as we descend downward "ages fly by at every step," and as we go on we soon pass all signs of human life, and then all the fossils representing the animals with which we are familiar and are into a new world. In this new fossiliferous world we meet with the animals and reptiles long since extinct, whose remains we keep in our museums. Our journey is not a long one, (if we measure distance instead of time,) until animal existence is extinct and in the vegetable kingdom no familiar plant appears, only a few steps more and the world is a great waste, without life or verdure. Who will compute the time necessary for these slow sedimentary formations and changes, when he remembers that the last 3000 years have made almost no perceptible change upon the face of the earth? This time seems long, however, only when we consider it in relation to ourselves, not when we consider it in relation to Him with whom "a thousand years are as one day and one day as a thousand years" This is no proof for the eternity of matter, for science teaches an orderly succession in the formation of the world, and succession postulates a beginning and primal cause. No matter how far into the dim distance of the past science traces these successions, the original and primal cause back of this material Universe is God. The second question that challenges our consideration is of equal or greater importance than the first, Many able men have spent their lives in studying this question in order to ascertain, if possible, at what time and under what circumstances man appeared upon this earth. The popular idea is, that the people who now inhabit this earth sprang from the three sons, Shem, Ham, Japheth. From reliable historical data we know the history of these three sons and their descendants. It will answer my purpose to glance at the history of the Hamites only. All authorities agree, that the Hamites were the early inhabitants of Egypt. We find them in the north of Africa, along the Nile valley and in south-eastern Europe 2500 B. C. In Greece they were known by the name Pelasgians, in Italy by the name Etruscans.

In the astronomical records of the ancient Egyptians there is a reference to the rising of the dog star just before the sun in the first month of the year. If you will refer to astronomical record you will find that such a conjunction did occur in 1322 B. C. This conjunction occurs but one time in 1461 years, hence the sothic period ending 1322 B. C. must have begun 2782 B. C. Their observations must have extended through one sothic period before they could know the length or be able to calculate it, which period began 4243 B.C.

Menes was the first king of the first Egyptian dynasty. Good chronologers place his epoch 3892 B.C.; some have placed it 5702 B. C.; which is the most modern date that any good historian will accept.

According to our accepted chronology Noah and his sons left the ark 2348 B.C. which is 369 after the accession of Menes, after we have brought the two events as near together as we possibly can without doing violence to facts. From two sources and by reliable data we have traced the Hamites far beyond the period assigned, by our chronologers, to Noah and his sons for leaving the ark, and find them at that time a civilized people who understood music, painting and astronomy. Very soon after they left the ark, they were fighting against strong nations. Who were their opposers? If fossils are worth anything in giving us the history of this globe, they are worth equally as much in giving the history of man. Their testimony is that man has inhabited this globe for more than 6000 years. The best philologists and ethnologists agree, that in all the various races inhabiting this earth, they find no differences either in anatomy or language which lead them to believe the human race is not a unit. These changes can be accounted for by natural laws if we allow sufficient time for their development. Science likewise affirms that 6000 years is not sufficient time. This time will be less adequate to account for the changes if we consider the entire human race to have been destroyed by the flood 2348 B.C. This succession is not strictly necessary, since most theologians concede the flood to have been local. If we harmonize religion and science there must be a readjustment of leases and a straightening up of chronology. The dates at the head of the chapters in the Bible are not inspired (and therefore infallible,) but have been put there by translators and commentators and represent their ideas as to the time of certain events. The man suggesting an entire change in these dates is not committing a sacrilege. In Gen, v. 5. Adam is credited as having lived 930 years. All through the fifth and eleventh chapters of Genesis to the Patriarchs are assigned incredibly long lives. Many of them are from 800 to 900 years. We have a very minute history of the Egyptians since the days of Solomon, and even before, and there is no record of any person who lived to be more than 110 years old. We infer from Gen. vi, 3, that the average age of men in the days of Noah was 120 years. God promised Abraham that he should live to a good old age, and he died at the age of 175 years, c f Gen. xv, 15; xxv, 7, 8. Isaac was called an old man when he died at the age of 180 years. Why should Abraham and Isaac have been considered old while the other patriarchs lived to be four and five times as old? I believe we read the genealogies in Genesis wrong. The Hebrews did not as a general rule use the word lived with a definite number to indicate the age of a parent at the birth of a child (c f Gen. xvi, 16; xxi, 5; xvii, 24.) The term lived with a definite number usually includes the whole period of life, (cf Gen. xxv, 7; xi, 11; ix, 28; Job. xlii, 16) I believe the names of the patriarchs in these genealogies are used first in a personal afterwards in a family sense, and that Adam was 130 years old when he died, leaving Seth as his successor. After this event the family retained Adam's name 800 years, and so on with the other patriarchs. By reading the genealogies in this way we will get something over 1200 years between Adam and Christ. By this interpretation we are not confronted by the almost incredible, statement that some of the patriarchs lived nearly 1000 years, and we also allow sufficient time for the changes and developments which science teaches. By this interpretation I am compelled to translate yalad "appointed" instead of "begat." For this change there is not the best lexicographical authority, but it is in harmony with the sense of the chapter and the necessities of the case.

Bishop Peck's Funeral.

The funeral of Bishop Peck took place Monday afternoon May 21. Short services were held at his residence in University Avenue at 1,30 o,clock. Rev. C. C. Wilbor conducted these services and read selections of the Scriptures and Bishop Harris offered a beautiful and touching prayer.

The funeral procession moved down the avenue to the University Avenue church; at the head of the avenue the University flag floated at half mast and at the other end the church bell tolled. The faculties and the students of the University formed part of the procession. Mrs. Peck, being feeble in health, was unable to go to the church. The following persons were pall-bearers. Rev. E. C. Curtis and Professors C. W. Bennett, J. J. Brown, W. P. Coddington, representing the University. Rev. B. Shove and M. S. Hard, Central New York Conference, Rev. I. S. Bingham and J. E. Bills, Northern New York Conference, F. H. Root, Esq., of Buffalo, and A. N. Palmer, Esq., of Syracuse. A large number of clergymen from several conferences were present in the church Every city in this State was represented. The following delegation was appointed by the Rochester Preachers' meeting: Revs. John Dennis, A. S. Baker, L. T. Stevens, J. T. Gracey, Wm. Tuttle, J. E. Williams, E. Ocumpaugh, Esq.

The church was tastefully decorated with emblems of mourning and floral designs. The students wore the university rosette draped with black. Bishop Harris led the procession to the chancel, reading the ritual for the dead. The pastor, Rev. C. C. Wilbor, opened the exercises with a brief and appropriate address, making special mention of the Bishop's sickness and last utterances, all of which were indicative of his strong faith and buoyant hope. Dr B. I. Ives offered prayer. Chancellor Sims, Bishop Simpson and Bishop Hurst delivered addresses which we print below. The church was densely crowded with sorrowing people, many of whom came from distant places to pay a last tribute of respect and to look upon a face beloved for years. The stillness of the church in the presence of so many hundred people was most impressive.

At the conclusion of the last address the congregation joined heartily in singing:

"O, how sweet it will be in that beautiful land."

The grave of the Bishop was made in Oakwood Cemetery in an elevated spot overlooking the University grounds.—Northern

Mr. Francis Murphy writes that he will visit New Orleans, on his return to the United States. He has met with wonderful success at every point in England. He says:

"The work in England has gone on apace until the Queen has said 'well done'. Millions of the people have signed the pledge, reducing the revenue £2,500,000, the Postmaster found it in the savings of the people in pure gold."

We heartily welcome Mr. Murphy to New Orleans, and we fervently pray that he may be equally successful in this city as in other places. For if there is a city needing enthusiastic, courageous, persistent temperance efforts, New Orleans is certainly the place.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Peter Shepard, Mrs. Clara Lewin and Emile Alexander, write from Jeannerette: "We have just closed the protracted meeting at St. Peter M. E. Church; there were 20 conversions and 5 backsliders reclaimed; ten anxious souls are yet seeking; 25 were received in full membership. Our Sunday-school, under Bro. Shepard, is prospering. We expect to continue the meeting at St. Paul, and the Sunday-school there under Bro. Alexander is growing rapidly. We are adding to the library books bibles, testaments and gospel songs, and expect to make it as good as any on the district. Our leader is Rev. E. Fields."

R. Anderson, St. Martinsville: "I found the church greatly cumbered with debts, some of which we have paid off, by means of basket meetings and bazaars. Our first basketmeeting held April 15 was largely attended by the members of our sister church at New Iberia. Bro Cortez Thompson, the pastor at New Iberia, was with us and evinced a spirit to aid me as much as possible. Many other brethren were with me and also acted charitably. I shall begin protracted meetings, God being willing, May 13, during which time I sincerely hope many souls may be fully persuaded to become Christians. We have with us, sister Rosa A. Turner, of New Orleans University. Sister Turner's sole desire is to aid in raising up the fallen of our race. May good luck attend her."

Rev. H. Wallace, of the circuit, writing from Alexandria says: "Our little St. Paul church was blown down on Friday night, April 27th. We are not discouraged however, for God does all for the best. We are going right ahead to rebuild. Donations from sympathizing friends will be gratefully received."

Rev. S. E. H. Morant, Alexandria: "We are making extensive preparations for a grand observance of Children's Day, June 10th."

TEXAS.

A. Calbreath, Huntsville: "Elder Pullam held the second qarterly, administered sacrament to 96, and preached at night. Collection $11.65. The reports show a good spirit. The trustees have raised about $25 for building purposes."

E. E. Cooper, Oakland: "When I arrived I prepared to build another room to the parsonage; returned for my family, and we are here in excellent health. This is a good country; both races are on good terms, and many of the colored people own large farms. Bro. Henry Hamilton, a member of our church, when emancipated had ten in family and only one double blanket for bed; now he has fifty acres of cotton land, corn and plenty of timbered land to support it, all paid for on April 2. Bro. Stephen has cotton squares. James Isaac and B. Vickerson, enterprising young men, are building a gin house. At the close of M. J. Snowden's term in the public school, the scholars had interesting essays, among them Miss Sallie Isaac, whose subject was "The Preacher Drawing his Text." Prof. G. B. Townsend has opened the normal school for the training of teachers, and has forty enrolled. J. C. Conner and family are making the best of their time. A class of Americans are studying physiology and hygiene. A literary society has been organized and is progressing [illegible]; L. B. Mayo and G. B. [illegible] are leaders in the debates. [illegible] G. W. Richardson visited the [illegible] and lectured to large audiences, saying many good things. [illegible] conference was a [illegible] success. We are preparing [illegible] meeting July 6, and expect [illegible] of our preaching brethren [illegible] so come and [illegible] We are here on the 10 and 11 of March; the sermon was a glorious blessing to all. Quite a number partook of the Lord's Supper. Mrs. Richardson made a splendid lecture on temperance. The impression is telling. Elder's collection was $10. We were visited at the same time by Rev W. H. Davis, of Columbus, who preached three nights; he is much loved by this people. On the 11th of March four were received into full connection. On the 18th day of the same month four more accessions were made to our Church from the Methodist Protestant Church. Since that time 3 more accessions were made. A protracted meeting was started a few days ago and by that meeting, 7 sinners have been influenced to stop sinning against God and to serve him. Besides these, a number of backsliders have been brought back to the fold. The official board has declared that this circuit shall have a camp meeting this year, and the same is to begin on the 12 th day of July 1883, the Lord being our helper. Unity of action is being seen among all the Christians. Old things are being put away and the Lord is being fully embraced. Pray God that our membership may be doubled this year. Let every Christian who reads this pray that it may be doubled.

ARKANSAS.

The new M.E. Church at Fayetteville is near completion. Rev. R. R. Duncan, the pastor, preached in the new building the last Sunday in April. The collection that day was $32.00. The building is called St. James Chapel, and will be very nice when completed.

Work on the M. E. Church, corner State and 11th streets, is progressing rapidly. A large force of workmen was employed last week. Their labors were gratuitous. The pastor is grateful to these men for their services and to the ladies for providing dinner for the willing workmen. The value of this spontaneous offering is the more appreciated from the fact that some engaged were not even connected with the church, but appreciated the cause and the pastor.—Arkansas Herald, Little Rock.

MISSISSIPPI.

L. L. Shumpert, Columbus: "A few lines from this, the Queen City of East Mississippi, may not be uninteresting to many readers. It is with the most profound gratitude to God that I report the progress of the Methodist Episcopal Church here. On my return from our last annual conference, the members and friends kindly received me as their Pastor for the second year—we soon commenced a protracted meeting, and at the first quarterly conference the presiding elder found us in the midst of a glorious revival. On the first Sunday in April last was a time long to be remembered on account of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. At 3 o'clock the church was cromded to its utmost capacity. The elder preached to the edification of the congregation, and 209 communicants communed at the Lord's table. The meeting resulted in the conversion of sixty-three precious souls to God—and seventy-five accessions to the church. We have baptized forty-four and quite a number await baptizing next Sunday. Pray for our continued success."

TENNESSEE.

H. W. Simmons, Gallatin: "The presiding elder held my second quarter on April 28-29. On account of rain our attendance was small. On Sunday the Sunday school was visited, and words of encouragement spoken. At morning and night the elder preached. Collections were liberal. We had only 14 members where the conference was held, others were Baptists who gave as God had given them. I am now attending a Theological and Sunday school institute at the Central Tennessee College, which is worthy the visit of [illegible] preacher. We hope [illegible] day will soon dawn when [illegible] and superstition will take [illegible] flight from among [illegible] yet many of Ethiopia's children are traveling that journey.

All honor to Central Tennessee College! By patient toil and persistent devotion, the president and faculty are overcoming obstacles and are winning the admiration and sympathy of good people everywhere. Oh, for the purse of a Gould and the heart of a Paul to spend, and to be spent, in this glorious work!

Central Tennessee College.

BY V. C. RANDOLPH.

This institution has just closed a year of great prosperity. The examinations, which occurred May 13–16, showed careful and conscientious work on the part of the instructors, and encouraging progress on the part of the students. The average of scholarship would compare favorably with similar classes in the Northern States. Of course they are not all geninses, but where can a school be found composed exclusively of geninses?

It was my pleasure to attend several of the examinations. The class in Binney's Theological Compend had evidently read the book to good effect. To each a topic was assigned, and he would write the substance on the black board. One had the attributes of God; promptly and neatly he wrote them, giving the Scriptural proofs; others did as well. The difficulties of logic were grappled with and overcome by most of the class; readily the technicalities of that abstruse subject were put on the board and explained.

The class in United States History answered questions quickly and correctly. A small boy, Thomas by name, did not make a single mistake in geography. While the young men and women were reading Xenophon, pronouncing the Greek with a rich African tone and finently rendering into English, one could almost see the brave warriors of Cyrus overpowered by the swarthy hordes of Artazerxes and driven from the field of Cuanaxa. In Nepos and Cicero the students acquitted themselves well, and at the same time reflected credit on the teachers. In older colleges the baccalaureate degree has been conferred upon students of less accurate knowledge of the Greek and Latin classics than was exhibited by some of these sons and daughters of parents lately in bondage.

In botany the young women surpassed the men. The ease and correctness with which the long, hard, but beautifully comprehensive terms of that interesting science were used, was surprising.

Joseph H. Dismukes, of LaGrang, Ga., was graduated in law.

On the morning of the 17th inst. a well dressed and well behaved audience filled Thompson Chapel to witness the closing exercises of commencement. Miss Braden, daughter of the president, furnished delightful music for the occasion. The well trained voices of her pupils was a high compliment to her efficiency as a teacher.

Miss Mary J. Powe, of Meridian, Miss., modestly read a good practical essay on "The Teacher." Miss Amanda J. Perry, of Columbia, S. C., had a thoughtful essay on "The Will." These received appropriate certificates—the first in the normal course, the second in the academic.

Two completed the theological course in English, and received certificates accordingly. Richard Harper, of Nashville, Tenn., took for the subject of his address "Butler's Analogy," a hard and dry theme one would suppose; but he actually waxed eloquent, and closed with great applause! Evans Tyree, of Nashville, Tenn., discussed the "Divinity of Christ." With fine effect he closed with a few well chosen and appropriate words, expressing appreciation of privileges enjoyed at the College, and of gratitude to the president and faculty These are both pastors in the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Matthew E. Lofton, of Atlanta, Ga., was graduated to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. His oration on "Mind and the Supernatural," was well prepared and well delivered.

The degree of Master of Arts, ad eundem, was conferred on the following persons: Julius J. Holland, Isaiah B. Scott and Laura S. Westbrook.

Marshall's Reply to Tucker.

MR. EDITOR:—I have just finished reading the reply to the Rev. J. L. Tucker's speech against the Negro, by our very dear C. K. Marshall, D. D., of Vicksburg, Miss.; and I beg room in your good paper to say that when I consider the distinguished source of this pamphlet, I am led to the conclusion that it will accomplish great good. The South is speaking to the South; the father speaking to his children. Let them stop and listen and hear the glorious admonition. It is sending rays of light into the dark wilderness of the Southern mind respecting the brother and friend in dark skin. Let the white gentlemen and ladies of the South let these rays of truth and justice to the Negro have place in their thoughts, equal to their value, and they will see that Dr. Tucker and all of his opinion (for he was not alone) have been weighed in the balances of truth and found greatly wanting. It will be seen that it is not the intention of our good Bro. Marshall to prove that the colored people are not guilty of some wrong, but that they are no more so, considering matters, than their brother in white. Every one of my race will do well to get the pamphlet and read it. The introduction is worth more than that.

We will be ready to dedicate our church at Alexandria by the time of the quarterly conference July the 15th. Brother Seward and his people are pushing ahead for the dedication. It will be one of the finest and best churches in Alexandria. We can't speak too highly of Brother Seward and his good people. They have been battling heroically against great opposition. Rev. John Seay who has rendered invaluable aid to the church, speaks of trying to be present on the occasion. I trust the Lord will spare his life and give him good health to be there and take part in the ceremony, as he has taken great interest in aiding us in the erection of the edifice. We expect to have our church at Murfreesboro ready for conference, as it has been changed from Dover to Murfreesboro. Brother Phillips and his members have set apart two Sundays in every month to raise money for the new church. I think we will be able to raise $55 or $60 per month. We can use very easily $100 per month from now until conference. I would like to find a half dozen friends that would give us that help and assistance that they deem within their ability. Conference need have no fears about coming here, we will be ready to accommodate all that come. Brethren please have all your assessments raised at once. I am satisfied with a judicious method every cent can be raised on all the charges. Brethren you have no time to lose, as one of the Bishops informed me that he thought our conference would be at least three weeks earlier.

H. W. KEY.

A Perplexed Young Minister.

BY I. H. VINCENT, D. D.

The friend of whom I write today was a young minister. He was a scholar, a graduate of the college and of the Theological Seminary, a "traveled man," and a gentleman. He was a good writer, an able preacher, and a scientific specialist. Being a young man and unknown he was appointed to a small country charge. The best pulpits of the Conference were filled by men much his inferior.

He began well; he continued well; he ended well. He was a "three-years' man." The people wanted him the full term. He wanted to stay. He stayed.

One thing worried him a little; it was the "success" of men who preached strong sermons, but who did little else. The finances ran behind under their administration. The larger benevolent collections suffered. The "smaller interests" were not even presented to their congregations. He noticed that one third of the collections demanded by the Discipline were often not taken up at all by these men. They gave no attention to the Sunday-school; that institution would have died if it had depended on them. They never catechised the children, or preached to them, or talked to them. These "successful men," whose pulpit performances were pronounced "strong" and "scholarly," seemed to let every thing else go.

These very men often laughed at the "pottering fellows" who were "looking after things generally" in the pastorate, taking up all the collections, teaching the children from house to house, holding special meetings for their instruction, preaching sermons to them or putting things in their sermons for the "lambs" of the flock. The "great preachers" sneered at the little, busy, enterprising, diligent brethren who supposed in their simplicity that the vows of God meant something, that duty was duty, that the Discipline of the Church to which they had allegiance was actually binding on them as ministers of the Church.

My young friend wondered what he ought to do. He was ambitious. He was scholarly. He was a fine writer and a fine sermonizer. He had literary taste and coveted large literary opportunity. He knew that if he were to give all his time to it, he too could write and commit or otherwise deliver sermons that would make their mark; write essays for magazines, prepare lectures for lyceum rostrums, and produce some good thing in special lines of literature. He heard men who did such things greatly praised. They were the favorites of the rich laymen. He saw them occupy the the "best pulpits." He read items in the papers, secular and religious, extolling and glorifying them.

Naturally he was perplexed. For whatever the natural ambition of his heart might suggest as desirable there came the claims of the whole Church upon his conscience—the care of the sick, the feeding of the lambs, the work of the Sunday-school, the benevolent collections, the circulation of the Church periodicals, the repairing of the Church building, the removal of the uncomfortable and damaging "debt," the distribution of tracts, the watching of new comers, the organization of the Church Lyceum, the encouragement and direction of young people who had no home but the Church, and no idea how they might turn every-day life into educational opportunities—all these things oppressed my friend.

Grace triumphed over ambition, and system came to the support of grace. He said, "God helping me, I will do the whole work of a minister. I will preach, prepare carefully, read as widely as I can, visit where I ought, help where I can, and aim at symmetry in work."

And right well did he work out his wise resolve. He learned from his brethren of pulpit fame that the preacher is "king," that sermons hold the "power," that the pulpit is the pastor's "throne." So he worked diligently to be an able preacher. And all at once he discovered that the other work of a pastor is indispensable to his work as a preacher. He, therefore, made all pastoral duties contribute to pulpit power. He kept the pulpit always in his thought. From the study he went to the shop, the street, the bedside, the Sunday-school, the Lyceum, the sociable, carrying with him the thoughts that were given or suggested by the books he read. He took with him every-where into active, every-day life the sermon plan he had projected, and he tested and enriched it by contact with the people for whose benefit he was preparing it. The thought of the study he brought into real life, and carried that thought, thus modified and developed and adapted, into the pulpit. Every thing helped him in sermonizing and preaching. He found every-where, points and illustrations, and hints as to the popular need. Then the pulpit rang with them. He worked on sermons in his study from three to five hours a day; but he worked on these same sermons many more hours every day as he chatted with children, comforted the bereaved, prayed with the sick and dying, counseled young men, discussed temperance and political reform with his neighbors, watched the Sunday-school, listened to essays and debates and class-drills in his Lyceum, trained his Official Board to business promptness and wisdom, circulated Church papers and tracts, increased his Sunday-school library, and in sundry ways built up every department of his Church.

As a preacher he grew from Sabbath to Sabbth, and manifestly from year to year. His sermons had more than rhetoric; they were burdened with righteousness. They were brilliant, for they flashed and "struck" like lightning. They had "points." They found their way home. The pews echoed with them. People forgot the preacher in the sermon. What they saw in the sermon was the truth on fire, and it burned into their hearts and purified their lives. The children understood them because the old people did. The old people understood them because they were full of the facts and doctrines and energies of every-day life, as seen from the divine standpoint of the Gospel.

Long after the "big preachers" were paralyzed or superannuated because of too much tobacco, late suppers, and excessive study without the relief and inspiration of pastoral work, contact with childhood and practical service, my young friend preached on and wrought on, and rejoiced over growing Churches and maturing saints.—*N. [illegible] EDITOR:—I have been contemplating asking space in your valuable paper for the publication of the various amounts subscribed by churches and individuals to the Meridian Academy, for some time, but have been (shall I say patiently?) waiting since last August for the subscribers to pay up their subscriptions. This I find many do not intend doing, and as the school year is drawing to a close, and the time for the severance of my connection with the Institution is at hand, I cannot longer delay, but in justice to those who have done their duty by one of their own schools, would now ask that you grant us space for the article.

In September, 1877, I was sent here from New Orleans by Dr. Hartzell to take charge of what was represented, to both, to be the Meridian High School. Upon my arrival I found 23 little ones assembled in the large old church, and this was our beginning. Through opposition and persecution unheard of, we have struggled and are now completing our sixth year. We feel that God, the dispenser of all good, has blest our efforts in that we have succeeded in building up a good school, purchasing a good building site and erecting a substantial building of 4 rooms upon it, all of which is free from debt, save the small sum of $18.50. Feeling that many would help us if they but knew our true condition, we conceived the idea of spending our last vacation in visiting some of the cities and towns of our State and presenting our needs to the people, solicit their aid in helping us make our building comfortable. This we did, and of our success the public can judge from the following lists:

We have nicely ceiled two of the rooms, put in new black-boards extending the length of the rooms, seated one room, built a double gallery, put up new steps, painted and purchased a stove, all at a cost of $285.75, leaving a balance of $18.50. Will not some of the many who have subscribed and not paid, pay up their subscriptions and cancel this remaining debt? We have had a very prosperous year, great interest being manifested by both parents and children. We have had enrolled this year 128 different students. In resigning the Principalship of the Institution I desire to thank the patrons and friends for their kindness fidelity shown during my six years stay with them. They and the many children I have instructed here shall always have a warm place in my heart. An efficient lady principal is now needed for the Academy. One well versed in vocal and instrumental music and who is able and willing to labor in the Sabbath School.

Folly of the Pistol

That the pistol is needless for household defence is well shown by the conduct of Bridget Francis at Philadelphia the other night, when she was awakened by the presence of a man creeping toward her bed. Her evidence in court was as follows:

"Did I holler? Oh no. I quietly took hold o' the blanket, never sayin' a word, and my husband still snorin,' and I waited, scarcely breathin' till the man got near enough to hear me, when I whipped the blanket over his head and held him there as nice as you please. 'Ah, ha, my bye,' says I, I have you now in a net.' Wid that he set up sich a squirmin' and strugglin', and I thought he would escape me. He's a good six feet, as you can see, and broad accordin', and he was like a whale in a herring net. But I held him in the blanket with his head to the floor, til' my husband, wakened by the noise and scramin' of my childer, jumped out of bed to help me. I gave my husband the blanket then and snatchin' up my youngest baby, eight months old, I ran to the windy and cried for help. The man and my husband had it together. The man managed to get his head out o' the blanket and bolted for the dure, and my husband after him. The thafe slipped on the second or third step and tumbled all the way to the bottom. I saw an officer on the street. I called out to him and he came in and arrested the thafe."

The intruder got two years in the penitentiary, instead of Mrs. Francis getting shot.

It is said that in the jail at Covington Indiana, twenty-five men, arrested for drunkenness, recently made things lively by howling at the passers-by. One fellow shouted: "Look here! this is what you taxpayers get for a little whisky revenue; you have to board twenty-five of us, locked up for drunkenness.

GOING HOME

"I am going home," a schoolboy said,
As he left his tasks at school.
"To the cottage white on yonder street,
Where home's bright circle is still complete,
With love for its golden rule."

"I am going home," a captian said,
As his ship sped o'er the sea,
"To the lone farm-house on the old hill-side;
To the village belle, my promised bride,
Now watching and waiting for me."

"I am going home," a merchant said,
Whose carriage rolled up the street,
"To my 'marble front on yonder square;
To my lovely wife, so proud and fair,
And my daughters fair and sweet."

"I am going home," a woodman said,
As he left his fallen tree,
"To the humble cot on yonder hill,
Where life flows on like a gentle rill,
With those who are dear to me."

"I am going home," a soldier said,
As he left the battle plain,
"To a peaceful farm in a northern State,
Where loving ones my coming await.
To welcome me back again."

"I am going home," a Christain said,
As his life was well nigh o'er,
To my Father's house by the crystal sea,
For the crown and the robe there waiting for me,
And shall wear them forever more."

Black Valley Railroad

1. From accurate estimates carefully made in the United States, it appears that this Road is constantly carrying over 300,000 persons, mostly young men, down to the condition of Common Drunkards.

2. If the families of drunkards average five persons, it carries untold misery and wretchedness directly to more than 1,500,000 persons, a large proportion of whom are women and children.

3. It keeps more than 300,000 in the Alms House.

4. It keeps 75,000 criminals in prison.

5. It is carrying toward destruction multitudes of the brave and noble young men in our country.

6. It has carried down to disgrace, poverty and destruction many of the talented men of the country, from the Bar, the Bench, the pulpit, and the Hall of Congress.

7. It carries more than 30,000 into eternity annually.

8. It caries more than $100,000,000 to Destruction. A distinguished observer of facts says, "All the crimes on earth do not destroy so many of the human race, nor alienate so much property as drunkenness,"

9. It is prosecuting its terrible business against the laws of God and man, and in defiance of all authority.

10 Its business is rapidly increasing.

Reader, will you assist in diffusing information about the above road, so that multitudes of young men and others who are invited to excursions upon it may be informed beforehand about the country through which it passes, and in which it terminates?

A Dog's Exploit.

Last Thursday afternoon a woman, looking from her back window, in the city of Newburg saw in the house opposite a little child hanging from a window-sill, but kept from falling by a dog, who had caught the child's dress in his teeth. The woman had left her baby, 18 months old, on the floor of the front room playing with her toys and a little terrier dog that is its constant companion. The mother was away just three minutes, but when she came back and opened the door her infant's head, arms, and shoulders were hanging beyond the stone sill of an open window, and near it, with its feet on a chair stood the little dog holding on to the child's dress for dear life. Her child, unconscious of any danger, was crowing at some object in the yard, while the dog, holding on the dress, looked a mute appeal for haste and help. In an instant she was by her baby's side and the danger was passed. When the dog has been relieved of its burden he pranced around the mother and child with a delight that was almost frantic.—Warwick Advertiser.

Girls, Learn To Cook.

Yes, yes, learn how to cook, girls, and learn how to cook well. What right has a girl to marry and go into a house of her own unless she knows how to superintend every branch of housekeeping, and she cannot properly superintend unless she has some practical knowledge herself. It is sometimes asked, sneeringly, "What kind of a man is he who would marry a cook?" The fact is that men do not think enough of this; indeed, most men marry without thinking whether the woman of his choice is capable of cooking him a meal, and it is a pity he is so short-sighted, as his health, his cheerfulness, and, indeed, his success in life, depend in a very great degree on the kind of food he eats; in fact, the whole household is influenced by the diet. Feed them on fried cakes, fried meat, hot bread and other indigestible viands, day after day, and they will need medicine to make them well.

Let all girls have a share in housekeeping at home before they marry; let each superintend some department by turns. It need not occupy half the time to see that the house has been properly swept, dusted, and put in order, to prepare puddings and make dishes, that many young ladies spend in reading novels which enervate both mind and body and unfit them for every-day life. Women do not, as a general rule, get pale faces doing house-work. Their sedentary habits, in overheated rooms, combined with ill-chosen food, are to blame for bad health. Our mothers used to pride themselves on their housekeeping and fine needlework. Let the present generation add to its list of real accomplishments the art of properly preparing food for the human body.

A.—For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.—2 Cor. x. 18.

Q.—What did the angels says of John the Baptist?

A.—Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like.—Gal. v. 19-21.

Q.—Among what graces does he place temperance?

A.—But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law.—Gal. v. 22, 23.

Q.—Why not associate with drunkards?

A.—Because evil communications corrupt good manners.—1 Cor. xv. 33.

Q.—What should be our rule concerning intoxicating drinks?

A.—Abstain from all appearance of evil.—I Thess. v. 22.

"Four things," says Hopiner, "are necessary to constitute a Christian. (1) Faith makes a Christian. (2) Life proves a Christian. (3) Trials confirm a Christian. (4) Death crowns a Christian."

The beautiful islands of the southeastern coast of Asia are still mainly under the influence of the most dergaded heathenism, Borneo, with its two millions, has a few stations under the Rhenish and English Propagation Societies. Java with its nine millions, has a larger number of churches and laborers, amounting to less than thirty, under the Dutch societies New Guinea, the largest island on the globe, except Australia, has only been accessible to missionaries for seven years, but in that time the London Society has planted about thirty stations along its immense coast and among its numerous races, and a portion of the Bible has been translated into one of the languages. Something has been done in Sumatra.

LANGUOR AND LASSITUDE.

SO COMMON IN THE SPRING, INDICATE A TORPID CONDITION OF THE LIVER AND A SLUGGISH CIRCULATION OF THE LIFE-GIVING FLUIDS. A TEASPOONFUL OF TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT IN A GLASS OF WATER HALF AN HOUR BEFORE BREAKFAST WILL GENTLY RELIEVE AND REGULATE THE LIVER, QUICKEN AND PURIFY THE CIRCULATION, AND IMPART NEW LIFE AND VIGOR TO EVERY FUNCTION OF THE BODY. ALL DRUGGISTS HAVE IT.

At the second annual meeting of the New York Charity Organization Sosiety, the purpose of which is to help the needy, expose fraud, and discourage lazy paupers, Dr. Potter reported finding a genuine letter of his father, ten years dead, in the hands of a beggar who had lived on it in idleness all that time. The Doctor tried to buy the letter for five dollars, then for ten, fifteen but money couldn't buy it. The shrewd beggar knew "which side of his bread was buttered."

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physcians
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always,
And they will tell you unhesitatingly,
"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most emincnt physicians:
What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs, such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to women—
And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically, "Buchu."
Ask the same physicans:
What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, etc., and they will tell you:
"Mandrake, or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill-health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid, or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved his Child.

17 N. Eutaw St., Baltimore, Md. Feb. 12, 1880.

Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried BROWN'S IRON BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, she began to mend; and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required;" and when informed that the elder sister was taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

ADORAM PHELPS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.

Raising goobers and potatoes is honorable and Christian, bnt the man in the pulpit who sets himself against the circulation of his church periodicals has a speck of badness about him that needs to be healed.

Moving on. Sabbath, May 13th, was missionary day in Cincinnati, and it was a great success. The aggregate collections from our churches for the cause of missions will be much larger in this city this year than ever before.

The Texas Advocate (Church South) having called attention to the fact that Dr. Henderson was sent to a fine city appointment and the colored minister placed on the supernumerary list, the Central asks: "Can it not understand that ministerial equality does not mean sending ministers to equally desirable appointments?"

The program of Washington and Lee University commencement exercises, June 24th to 27th, includes a sermon by Bishop A. W. Wilson, and addresses by Hon. C. R. Breckinridge and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. The Wages of Sin

There is in these days a sentimental way of looking at sin which softens down its character as transgression, and seems to overlook its relation to the divine law. It seems to regard sin as a misfortune working ont its natnral and legitimate results of pain and sorrow, bnt it forgets that it is a moral wrong, an offense against law and therefore subject to judicial penalty. Those who regard sin only as a misfortune talk of God as a loving Father who, while he is displeased with the waywardness of his children, yet in his tenderness and love throws aronnd them his arms of mercy, so he cannot cast off his children any more than a mere hnman parent can. God they tell us is a God of love and tenderness and cannot belie his own nature and deal harshly with the unfortunate offending child. That God is a Father full of love and tenderness ("God is love") is a blessed truth that all his intelligent creatures rejoice in. Bnt He is a Lawgiver, a Ruler, a Sovereign, as well as a Father.

As a Father he is surronnded by a nnmerous family over which He exercises paternal anthority. Bnt as a sovereign He becomes a lawgiver, a judge to judge all of those to whom He stands in that relation. As a sovereign He does not lose His heart of love, tenderness and sympathy; bnt He cannot overlook offenses. As a sovoreign He can have bnt one standard and He must adhere to that without wavering or His government will speedily break down. The standard is said to be holy, just and good. This He pnblishes to the world as His law, and this He must maintain or lose His character for wisdom and justice. Sin then becomes something more than a misfortune, something more than displeasing God personally. It is a violation of law, a law holy, just, and good, solemnly enacted and plainly announced, it is therefore the highest offense possible against the Infinite One.

But there can be no law without a penalty. Sin always carries along with it its own penalty. We sometimes speak of the natural results of sin. As when a man thrusts his hand into the fire he is burned, or if he eats strychnine he is poisoned bnt we suppose these are penalties inflicted by judicial anthority. In the moral world sin works out its own natural judicial results. He who saves to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. Sin will work ont its own natural results, some of them are donbtless experienced in this life, bnt there is the final penalty that is to be pronounced by the righteous judge when men are called to give their account for the deeds done in the body. At that time their rewards, their penalties shall be in accordance with what they have done or not done in this life. "Sin kills beyond the tomb." "The wages of sin is death." It is what the sinner works for. It is his pay. We connsel every sinner to forsake his sins, to turn from his evil ways, that his sins may be blotted out and his name inscribed in heaven.

Which is it; Africans, Americans, or Negroes?

In a recent issue of the SOUTHWESTERN we said: "If yon spell Caucasian, Mongolian, Malayan and American Indian with capitals, according to the rule in composition which requires that proper nouns and adjectives formed from proper nouns should begin with capital letters, why is it yon persist in spelling Negro, the proper name of a race, with a small n? Now, why is it? If yon have no reason for it, just stop it, and quit insulting a race, and conform to the established rules of recognized English composition."

The Christian Recorder, our Philadelphia confrere, takes exception to a portion of this short paragraph of ours, and with an air of triumph and satisfaction cries out to us: "Hold on, Brother SOUTHWESTERN. Don't bag your game so soon. We agree with you that the rule in composition which requires that all proper nouns should begin with capital letters, should be observed; but we disagree with yon in recognizing "Negro" as the proper name of the Africo-Americans of this country. Not recognized by the aboriginal Africans themselves, why should we, their far off descendants, recognize it? No: we are either Africans or Americans. That we are the latter, everybody knows."

Why Brother Recorder, we can hardly understand what you mean. Neither can we imagine upon what tenable, legal, or even technical plea yon call us to a halt. We know that all natives of this country are Americans by birth, whether black, white, yellow, brown or copper colored; bnt this fact does not annihilate any ethnological or race clasification or division. The white man is no less of the Cancasian race because he is a native American, neither is the black man less a Negro because of the same fact. The one may be, by descent, a German, Latin or Anglo-Saxon American, the other an Africo-American; and by birth and citizenship, both may be Americans; while according to almost universally accepted ethnologist, the one may be of the Caucasian, the other of the Negro race. And this is true whether we accept Prof. Blumenbock's quinary arrangement, or Cuvier's threefold division of the races. In either or both, the black man is classified as an Ethiopian or Negro, and these may be used as synonymous terms. The one is derived from the Greek, the other from the Latin. The word "Ethiop" in the Greek means "Sunburnt" and Luther's German has for the word "Ethiopia," Negroland;" while the the term Negro is from the Latin "Niger" and the French "Noir" which means black. Hence it is the proper name for the black race, with curly or woolly hair. And the race is descended from the great Hamitic family from whence sprang all the dark races. And whatever of greatness or of glory, from Carthage, from Ethiopia or from Egypt has descended to bless the modern world, may be claimed by the modern Negro as heir-looms from his ethnological ancestry. But the Recorder says: "The name Negro is "not recognized by the aboriginal Africans themselves, why should we their far-off descendants recognize it?" Bnt what better witness on such a subject could we produce than Rev. Edward W. Blyden, L. L. D. of Liberia. He says: "Long before the slave trade began, travelers found the blacks on the coast of Africa preferring to be called Negroes, (See Purcha's Pilgrimage) "and in all the pre slave trade literature the word was spelled with a capital N. It was the slavery of the blacks which afterwards degraded the term; and what we propose to do is, now that slavery is abolished, to restore it to its original place and legitimate use, and therefore to restore the capital N." Upon these identical grounds, the national convention of colored men which met in Nashville, a few years ago, gave expression to sentiments that resulted in the general adoption of the capital N in spelling the proper name of the Negro race. Willlim Wells Brown, the great historian of his race accepts the appellation, Negro, as a matter of course, so does the later historian Williams; in whose words we say: "It is not wise, to say the least, for intelligent Negroes in America to seek to drop the word "Negro. It is a good, strong and healthy word, and ought to live. It should be covered with glory: let Negroes do it." To answer our own question we think we are amply justified in saying that the black man in American is, by descent an Africo-American, by birth and citizenship an American, and by race division a Negro, with a capital N. But Brother Recorder, since according to your conclusion, "everybody knows" that the colored people of Americe are not Africans. Why continue an Afri can Church in America? Surely not for the benefit of the Africans, is it? There must be something in a name after all.

The New Orleans University.

The anniversary exercises of this institution closed Thursday, May 25. The lecture by Dr. Dean, the president, is highly spoken of by those who had the pleasure of hearing it. The institution has never enjoyed a more prosperous year. Over two hundred and thirty students have been enrolled. They never went away more enthusiastic for the institution, nor ever so unanimous in intention to return. The prospects for a large attendance was never so good. The relation of this school to our work in Louisiana cannot be fully portrayed. The one great lack of the University is new, enlarged, and better buildings. No conference in our Southern work has responded more generously than the Louisiana conference did last year. In their poverty and love (for it was an offering of love) they contributed over $2.000 towards the erection of new and suitable buildings for the New Orleans University and Gilbert Haven School of Theology, and we trust they will do as well if not better next year. The site is splendid, and with new and elegant buildings the attendance would soon be more than doubled. Who will claim the honor to aid us in our struggle by contributing from a dime to ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars towards the erection of these new buildings. Move quickly, ye stewards of the Lord, and come down and help those who are doing the best they can to help themselves. Of silver and gold our people have little or none, their inheritance is their children, and here they are rich beyond comparison. The cry is for help that they may be able to give them a Christian education. The administration of Dr. Dean during the past year has given the greatest satisfaction to both the patrons and the trustees. He has not the faculty possessed by many of building up a reputation on the work of others, or upon a false foundation. His own work is his greatest praise. "Beautiful for situation" and offering every facility for a complete education, the New Orleans University deserves the commendation and patronage of every Methodist in the Louisiana conference.

How much happier is the soul that trustingly clings to the cross of Christ, than that which hangs its hopes upon a godless philosophy! Hume in his Treatise on Human Nature says:

"I am affrighted and confounded with that forlorn solitude in which I am placed by my philosophy. when I look abroad, I foresee on every side dispute, contradiction, and distraction, I find nothing but doubt and ignorance. Where am I or what? From what cause do I derive my existence, and to what condition shall I return? I am confounded with these questions; and begin to fancy myself in the most deplorable condition imaginable, environed with the deepest darkness."

Byron says: "The Christian has greatly the advantage of the unbeliever—having everything to gain and nothing to lose." Neither does ancient philosophy afford any clearer light. Plato, speaking of future rewards and punishment says: "The truth is, to determine or establish anything certain about these matters, in the midst of so many doubts and disputatious, is the work of a God only." But Christian philoso phy entertains no such doubts and uncertainties. To the apostle Paul, it makes manifest, "Our Saviour Jesus Christ who hath abolished death and hell brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." Therefore it is that he joyfully says: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. For I am in a straight betwixt two, having desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better." Again, "for we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." While Job, voicing the hope of the ancient believer, exclaims: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another." In Christ is thus found our all in all, the light, the life, and the hope of the present world, and that which is to come. Well might a perishing world join in the singing with the poet: "Simply to thy cross I cling."

In the June number of the Century Geo. W. Cable has a well written paper on "The Great South Gate," in which he says. "In 1850 there was but one school, Sunday school or public library in Louisiana to each 73,966 persons, or 100 volumes to each 2310 persons. In Rhode Island there were eleven and half times as many books to each person. In Massachusetts there were 100 volumes to every 188 persons. In the pioneer State of Michigan without any large city there was a volume to every four persons. True in Louisiana there were 100 volumes to every 1218 free persons, but this only throws us back upon the fact that 245,000 persons were totally without books and were forbidden by law to read." Among these 245,000 who were totally without books and were forbidden by law to read in 1850, the Methodist Episcopal Church has now 125 Sunday schools, 586 officers and teachers, 8099 scholars and 5559 volumes in their libraries. We know that this number is small as compared with schools in other sections of our country but it is a wonderful improvement upon 1850.

We clip the from a Laredo, Texas, exchange the following advertisement:

"Bull-fight on Sunday, Jan. 21, 1883, by Some Amateurs, for the Benefit of the New Catholic Temple of New Laredo.

"For the Board of Directors, Quintin Villegas, Luciano Trivino. Payments: In shade, 50 cents; in the sun, 25 cents. Note.—In the advent of bad weather the entertainment will be suspended and reserved for the first suitable day."

In view of such proceedings, which are countenanced and endorsed by the Church, is it to be wondered that in all Roman Catholic communities no Christian Sabbath is wholly observed? The perpetuation of the Christian Sabbath, in contradistinction to the continental Europe, and the free beer guzzling American Sabbath, devolves upon the Protestants of the country. Let every man stand up to his convictions, and the word of God in defense of the sanctity of the Sabbath. Put your foot down upon all unholy infidel impudence, and Romish endorsement, and contend for the day of sacred rest and worship.

Cannot some arrangements be made to have the weekly races at the fair grounds come off on some other day than Sunday? We see no harm in doing necessary work on the Sabbath day, but to deliberately plan either work, fairs, excursions for pleasure, or horse races—for Sunday smacks a little too much of heathenism to be tolerated by a civilized people. There is something inconsistent in a standard of morality which refuses to tolerate teachers in the public schools unless of sound moral character, and then allows both children and teacher to attend a horse race on the Sabbath day, where drinking, cursing and swearing is indulged in ad libitum.—Terebonne Times.

This is a sensible expression against a great evil, which should be echoed backward and forward through this State, until our people are educated up to the point that Missisippi, Arkansas, even Texas, and nearly all the other States of the Union have reached, that of enacting, and forcing the observance of a Sunday law. Every economic, physical, mental, moral and spiritual interest demands such a law.

Editorial Correspondence.

The work of giving the Gospel to the people of Spanish, English, German and African descent in Texas is being carried on with more or less success by the various church organizations now here. We know of only one church that feels "entirely competent" to do this work, and wishes to be left alone to do it. With all the agencies now at work there are regions scarecely touched by any religious influences, and multitudes of people who are as much under the influences of Fetchism and Hoodonism as any in the dark continent of Africa. We believe that here in Texas there is a field for missionary work more promising and more practical than that of Melville Cox, who went forty years ago to West Africa and laid his bones on that shore, sending back word to America, "Let a thousand fall, but Africa not given up." But second or third-rate men, who were a failure in some Northern or Eastern Conference, will not do here. Timid, time-serving, half-and-half-men, are not in order. Men of mere sentimental or rose-colored views had better stay east or north of the Ohio. Our work in Texas, and all through the South, requires men called from above. Men called by man may do elsewhere but not here. Here we stand in great need of those who, like the Master, will be here, not to be ministered unto but to minister and give their time, strength and all for the salvation of the people.

Bro. Geo. Davis, on Houston circuit, is a man of excellent spirit and is doing a good work. Under his ministry a large number have been converted, colored and white, and have joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bro. Davis is not a profound man, but all recognize him as a man of God, who, with singleness of aims and purity of heart, prosecutes the work of the Lord. While he is pastor he is also connected with Houston Seminary; and Bro. Campbell, president of the Seminary, says he has few students who are making better progress in their studies.

Tuesday night we attended class at Trinity. Bro. Scott opened the meeting with what seemed to us very appropriate remarks. We need more such men. There were over one hundred and forty present, led by thirteen leaders. All seemed moved quietly but sensibly by the presence of the Holy Spirit. Over fifty copies of the SOUTHWESTERN go to Trinity and at last conference, every one was settled for. We make this statement for the benefit of others.

Wednesday night we preached at St. James. Other churches are stronger, but we doubt if any are more willing, they are "dyed in the wool" Methodists who have come up through great tribulation. Some of them were born in Africa; stolen in childhood, brought to America, and bought by and counted as "my chattels," by certain so-called Americrn Christians, who have much to say about their former labors for the Christian education of the colored people. If the rose-colored statements of these persons are to be to relied upon their work was one of the purest Christian philanthropy. The men and women who, now bowed with age, still bear upon their bodies marks of the driver's lash, and in the various shades of their complexion, the undeniable evidence of the miscegenation of those times are not quite so rose-colored in their statement. Miscegenation was taught the colored people both by precept and example long before the war; it is an old doctrine.

Thursday we rode to Hockley, a small and pleasant village about forty miles north of Houston, where we have a small church and a few good members. We found a pleasant home, with Bro. Louis Thomas, whose good wife gave us this bit of information as to herself and family. She was born in North Carolina; her father belonged to a man by the name of Taylor; the name of her mother's owner was Nichols; after his death she was owned by daughter who married a man by the name of Marsh. When Mrs. Nichols died, Sister Lewis was sold at auction and bought by one John Matthews, a negro-trader, and brought to Texas. She had six sisters and two brothers, and has never seen one of them since. This was a specimen of the Christian education conferred upon the colored people before the late war. We preached in the evening and recived six subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN.

To us the signs of the times are ominous of great changes in the near future. Events in the next ten years will show the men wisest who apprehend the significance of the present and prepare for the future. Men are running to and fro and knowledge is being increased. Let no Christian pastor ignore this fact. No man can live upon his past record; the present comes to us with pressing demands, and we must meet them. There never was a louder call for workers—for men who will go into the waste places and out of the way neighborhoods, and set up Sunday-schools, and organize and build churches. The fields are ripe and ready for the harvest—they invite the reaper's sickle. C.

To any person sending us one dollar, we will send the SOUTHWESTERN from now untill Jan. 1884, seven months.

PERSONAL.

—Rev. J. G. Johnson, Oxford, late of our Mississippi conference, has united with the A.M E. Church.

—The Empress Eugenie in her palmy days ate an onion at 6 o'clock every morning to preserve her complexion.

—Gen. Cyrus Bussey, who recently sold his residence in this city, will make New York his future home.

—Dr. Fitzgerald, of the Nashville Advocate, has been solicited to, and will write a biography of the late Rev. Dr. Thos. O. Summers.

—The mother of Rev. Dr. N. L. Flood, editor of the Chautauquan, aged 76, and a member of the church for 61 years, died May 15, after a days illness.

—The poet Whittier, disturbed by the publication of the Carlyle letters, has destroyed the most of his correspondence covering a period of fifty years, that it may not be published after his death.

—Recently our colored brethren in Pittsburg, Pa., organized a church and bought a stable and converted it into a church. At the meeting of the Board of Bishops in that city Bishop Warren preached for them in their new church.

—A perfect impression in plaster of the features of the late Bishop Peck was taken by Mr. H. S. Gutzoll, instructor in modeling the College of Fine Arts. A bust will in time be cast from the impression. Rev. George W. Peck, the Bishop's nephew, is to edit his correspondence and unpublished manuscripts and write his life.—Northern.

—A little over fifty years ago Bishop Simpson preached his first sermon as pastor of the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church in Pittsburg, Pa. At the recent meeting of the Board of Bishops in that city, he preached in the same old church which was crowded to its utmost, but in the audience there were only three persons who heard him preach his first sermon in that place.

—Mrs. M. V. Keever, who toiled patiently and efficiently in building Florida Academy, has we have found an excellent husband, and we know she will be followed to her new Chattanooga home by the prayers and grateful remembrances of numerous friends and pupils. The SOUTHWESTERN extends its congratulations to Mr. John S. Lovall and wife, and wishes them a long and happy union.

—Rev. George W. Walker, A. M., of the South Carolina Conference, has been elected a member of the Faculty of Paine Institute, Augusta, Ga., and will enter upon his duties at the opening, October next. Brother Walker belongs to the nineteenth century, and has the head and heart for this great work.—Nashville Advocate, Church South.

—Rev. R. A. Holland, D. D., rectorelect of Trinity Church on Jackson street, New Orleans, at the age of sixteen was known as the Methodist Bay Preacher. He was in the conference service at the age of nineteen. Soon after the war he was ordained as deacon in the Episcopal Church. He is said to be a man of learning and one of the most finished pulpit orators in the country.

—Rev. E. O. McIntire, of the Austin Conference now stationed at Galveston, Texas, has recently been appointed Chaplain of the American Seamans Friend Society. Brother McIntire has organized a Port Society, secured a site and raised funds sufficient to erect a Seaman's Bethel, to be dedicated the first of August next. But it is distinctly understood that his work as chaplain of the Bethel is in no way to interfere with his work as a Methodist pastor.

—Gen. Ben Butler's essay at modesty is thus exposed by the New York Times: "Gen. Ben Butler was bragging on the stump away back in 1878 that he had given $500 for the monument to Gov. John A. Andrew, and yet last Friday he asserted in the Tewksbury investigation that he had never put it in the newspapers, but now thought he had a perfect right to say that he had subscribed that amount for the monument."

—Interesting extracts have been published from a letter which Grant wrote to his mother when he was a student at West Point. "Your kind words of admonition," he said, "are ever present with me. How well do they strengthen me in every good word and work. Should I become a soldier for my country, I look forward with hope to have you spared to share with me in any advancement I may gain, and I trust my future conduct will prove me worthy of the patriotic instruction you and my father have given me."

—We are sorry to hear that Prof. Howard A. Clifford who has for the two past years been Professor of Latin and Greek in the New Orleans University is not expected to return next year. Brother Clifford has a good reputation as a teacher, having the rare qualities of knowing his business and the sense to attend to it. He is a quiet, unassuming, scholarly Christian man. He leaves the University with the best wishes of the faculty and every student who has been connected with the school. We also regret to learn that his sister, Miss Ida A. Clifford, A. M., who has been employed as an assistant in Latin and English and teacher of music, is also to leave. Miss Clifford has shown herself an accurate and a successful teacher. We only trust that these vacancies will be filled by teachers equally as efficient.

—The Pacific Coast Association of Native Sons of Vermont gave Senator Edmunds a reception in San Francisco on the 11th inst., and the presiding officer called attention to the fact that now the two chief executive officers of the Union are natives of the Green Mountain State. Mr. Edmunds in responding said he had always been proud that he was a Vermonter, but never quite so proud as then. He referred to his trip to the Pacific coast, and spoke of the surprise, astonishment, and delight he had experienced. California seemed like an enchanted land. "Here in San Francisco," he said, "you have every element of architecture, of progress, of civilization, and the social institutions of the older cities, and yet San Francisco is young very young, much younger than myself."

—In a personal note to our Assistant, Dr. Hartzell, writing from Saratoga Springs, New York, says of Mrs. Hartzell: "She is still an invalid, cannot even read or write a letter. But God will raise her up. Continue to pray for us." The many friends of Dr. Hartzell, who have known him long and favorably, and the thousands of readers of the SOUTHWESTERN, who, through the medium of that paper, have been wedded to him in the purest affection, will learn of Mrs. Hartzell's protracted illness with the deepest concern and sympathy. Many will doubtless remember that the present prostration of Mrs. Hartzell is but the result of her herculean efforts in behalf the Freedwomen of the South. She was prostrated, but not until she had succeeded in developing and setting in motion the young and vigorous "Women's Home Mission Society," which will continue to bless the nation and the world, while the church lives. God bless Dr. and Mrs. Hartzell, and restore her to vigorous health again, is the fervent prayer of the SOUTHWESTERN and all our readers.

Let every subscriber consider himself a committee of one to obtain at least one new subscriber for the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.]

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Frank Walker, Monroe: "Our quarterly conference was held by Elder Duncan. We have received during the quarter $159; paid to elder $15; pastor 90.55; improvements and mission $53.45. The ladies circle is doing a grand work. We have a missionary prayer meeting every Friday evening. Something is being done for temperance also; 163 signed the pledge in the assembly. Our thanks are due the people for their efforts in giving a basket meeting for the benefit of the pastor; they raised $71.45."

F. Harvey, Shreveport: "The Lord has blessed us. Our protracted meeting resulted in 27 converts, 12 received in full membership, and 10 backsliders reclaimed. The church was crowded; Sunday night Bro. Perry Hall and Baptist brother, Rev. Burt York, were with us. We have a fine Sunday-school with 90 scholars."

H. Daniel, Pleasant Hill: "Our Sabbath-school has been organized as a missionary society. We have 62 scholars. Miss Charlotte Fuber is the teacher."

A. Jones, Cheneyville: "The church is improving. Up to May 6th I had taken in 21. The members are in good spirits."

Rev. C. H. Claiborne is having a prosperous year at Live Oak. He reports $58.10 raised since the first quarter and a new chandelier bought and paid for.

At Terrebonne, Bro. Carr, with sense and grace enough to attend to his own work, with no desire to build himself up on the downfall of another, is having a good year. At a recent fair held one night, the church raised $21.

MISSISSIPPI.

J. P. Jordan, Enterprise: "Our beloved P. E., J. Campbell, was with us April 25th and preached at 11 o'clock, and held an old-fashioned love feast. At quarterly conference all the brethren were present but a few class leaders. Apportionment, $334. Elder Campbell preached at night and administered the Lord's Supper to 81 communicants. Collections $9.20. Bro. P. Blue was with us April 22, preached two able sermons."

TEXAS

H. Dixon: "The quarterly meeting of the Brazoria circuit, Houston district, was held May 5th and 6th. F. C. Moore, the P. E., at his post. In the quarterly conference officers were taught their duties, and all started out with new light and zeal. On the Sabbath God's spirit was poured out upon the people. 36 joined the church; 12 were baptised; 4 have been converted. Sunday-school collections $4.25; for P. E. $9.15. There is good prospect of building up if we had church buildings. After the many years our church has been laboring here we have not a church building on the circuit—no place to gather our children to day-schools and Sunday-schools nor for the people to assemble for religious worship. Preachers must suffer until we get our own church buildings, and gather the result of our labors."

KENTUCKY.

At Georgetown, on the evening of the 12th instant, thirty of the members of Wesley Chapel surprised the pastor, Rev. A. McDade, with a very handsome donation.

ALABAMA.

At Eutaw, Rev. W. M. Grower, pastor, held a protracted meeting, which resulted in 37 accessions. He has received 60 since conference.

GEORGIA.

Rev. J. H. Mathews, of Palmetto, has received a donation of valuable theological works from Rev. H. Y. Kellum, pastor of the M. E. Church at Hayneville, O.

VIRGINIA.

Rev. J. Riddick, formerly of Norfolk, stationed the past six years in Maryland, was appointed by Bishop Warren to the Augusta Street M. E. Church, Staunton, Va., at the last session of the W. A. Conference. Mr. Riddick took formal charge April 15th, preaching morning and night to a large congregation. He also lectured Monday night to a large audience. The proceeds were for the benefit of the Sunday-schools and church. There is about $900 debt resting on this charge. Mr. Riddick comes to Staunton with a fine reputation as a financier, having been readjusting church debts in West Virginia and in Maryland for the past ten years. He will no doubt see that the debts at his new station are paid.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

A. remarkable revival has closed at Centenary Church, Charleston, W. H. Lawrence, pastor. It was in progress six weeks and resulted in the accession of more than 200.

The Pope And the Irish

No little excitment has been created in Ireland by a circular address by the Pope under date of the 11th inst., to the Irish Catholic bishops. The pope says:

"Whatever Mr. Parnell's object may be his followers have often adopted a course openly against the rules of the Pope's letter to Cardinal McCabe and the instructions sent to the bishops, which were accepted at the recent meeting in Dublin. While it is lawful for the Irish to seek redress for their grievances, and to strive for their rights, they should at the same time seek God's justice and remember the wickedness of illegal means in furthering even a just cause. It is the duty of the clergy to curb the excited feelings of the people, and to urge justice and moderation. The clergy are not permitted to depart from these rules, and join and promote movements inconsistent with them. Collections to relieve distress are permitted, but subscriptions to inflame popular passions are condemned. The clergy must hold aloof when it is plain that by such movements hatred and dissension are aroused, or distinguished persons insulted, and when crimes and murders go uncensured, and when patriotism is measured by the amount subscribed, for the people are thereby intimidated. Therefore the Parnell fund is disapproved, and no clergyman should recommend subscriptions thereto or promote it."

On the 16th, a meeting of National League was held in Dublin. Mr Mayne, Parnellite member of Parliament for Tipperary, said the Irish people should take theology and not politics from Rome. Mr. Parnell, he declared, was the head of their political Church. Mr Kenny, member of Parliment for Ennis, described the pope's circular as a shameful insult to the priests and people of Ireland. The Freeman's Journal, commenting on the pope's circular to the Irish bishops, says his holiness has been misled, if not entirely deceived, by emissaries of the British Government, which that if the Parnell party remains unbroken it will hold the balance of power in the next Parliament. The general opinion in Ireland seems to be in condemnation of the pope's circular. The pope, hearing of the meetings in Dublin, in which his recent action was condemned, sent for cardinals Jacobini and Simeoni, and insisted that his letter to the Irish bishops be strictly obeyed.

"On Science-Teaching in the Public Schools" is the valuable committee report on that subject which was read at the Boston meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1880. In "Our Marriage and Divorce Law," Mr. Gordon A. Stewart makes a forcible exposure of the social evils which have arisen from the chaos of independent State legislation on the subject in hand. A sketch and portrait are given of the elder Professor Silliman, of Yale College with suitable notices of his fruitful scientific work. A Veteran Soldier.

Mr. G. F. BOWLES, of No 24 Common Street, Lynn, Mass., says:—

"While in the army, at the battle of Spottsylvania, I fell while getting over a rail-fence and was badly injured and left for dead, out after a time I was picked up by comrades; and upon examination it was found that my back was badly hurt and my kidneys seriously injured, and I have suffered the most excruciating pain since, and could obtain no relief although treated by several physicians, and I had given up all hope of getting help when I was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy. I purchased several bottles at one of our drug stores in Lynn, and began to use it as directed, and can now attend to business and am free from the pains I formerly had; and I wish to say to my friends and comrades that Hunt's Remedy will do all that is claimed for it, and worthy of all praise. You can use my testimony when you have occasion to, as I most heartly recommend it to all that have kidney or liver troubles."

April 26, 1883.

"You May use My Name."

I desire to inform you what your valuable medicine has done for me. I was induced to try it by a member of our family, "who had been benefited by its use." I have suffered terribly from kidney difficulties. At times I have been very bad, having severe pains in my back, with general loss of strength and vitality.

My urine was very bad, with a heavy sediment of brick-dust, which was fast leading to gravel. I commenced using Hunt's Remedy, with a marked improvement from the start; the pains left, the urine became more natural, and I can truly say one bottle effected a permanent cure.

I have recomended it to many persons both here and in Boston, all of whom speak of it with the highest praise.

You are at liberty to use this letter or my name in any manner you may think best, that other sufferers may learn the value of the greatest of all remedies. Most truly yours, JOHN F. COX, 62 Pleasant St.

MALDEN, MASS, April 23, 1883.

The Navajo Indians in Arizona have 900,000 sheep and 200,000 goats, the result of an investment of $30,000 two or three years ago. This tribe required an appropriation of $5,500 a year and is now considered self-sustaining.

QUICK MOLASSES CANDY.—One [illegible] of New Orleans molasses, one-half cup of light brown sugar, two tablespoons of vinegar, a piece of butter the size of an egg. Boil steadily about ten minutes, then try in cold water; if it hardens it is done. Just before taking it from the fire add one-fourth of a teaspoon of baking soda; do not dissolve it, but put it in dry. Pour on buttered plates to cool, and pull as soon as it can be handled. Very nice popcorn balls are made by having the corn roasted and leaving a little of the candy in the bottom of the kettle; pour in all the popped corn it will dampen, stirring carefully until it takes up the candy.—Our Home Paper.

HAM RELISH.—Fry the yellow fat of ham, which is usually discarded as gross, with any thin slices of cold veal, mutton, or even salt beef, a nice brown. Lay aside and keep warm. Bruise equal quantities of any cold vegetables, cabbage, potatoes or cauliflower, and also fry in the fat which still remains in the pan from the foregoing. Warm a dish and place the vegetables at the bottom lay[illegible] the slices of meat neatly on top. Must be served hot. Garnish with lemon peel and fried parsley.

BLANC MANGE.—It is better, if possible to soak the gelatine for [illegible] cream all night, because it will then dissolve in warm liquid, whereas if it is only lightly soaked [illegible] milk must be boiling. Warm [illegible] gills of milk or cream and dissolve in it half an ounce of gelatine previously soaked in half a [illegible] of water. Sweeten to taste and [illegible] with extract of vanilla. [illegible] nearly cold stir into the [illegible] mange the whites of two or [illegible] eggs beaten to a strong froth. [illegible] blanc mange will be found [illegible] and nourishing in cases of [illegible] weakness.

[illegible]LICIOUS soup without meat [illegible] by cooking for about fifteen minutes eight large sized to[illegible] or a like quantity, say one [illegible] of canned tomatoes in one [illegible] of water, then add one teaspoonful of pure, fine baking soda, [illegible] the foaming has entirely [illegible], add one quart of cold milk, [illegible] of sweet, excellent butter [illegible] as half an egg with salt [illegible] pepper; butter some crackers [illegible] them butter side down to [illegible] of the dish into which [illegible] soup is to be poured; as soon [illegible] soup comes to a boil add a [illegible] a dozen fine rolled crackers, [illegible] in, and immediately pour [illegible]

[illegible] PREVENT A BLACK EYE.—[illegible] a severe blow has been [illegible] near the eye, the common [illegible] and effusion which [illegible] the black appearance around [illegible] part may be prevented [illegible] removed by the following [illegible]: Dip a folded cloth in [illegible] and apply it to the part [illegible] after the bruise has [illegible]; use the water as hot as [illegible] be borne and renew it every [illegible] three minutes. Continue [illegible] twenty minutes. It may [illegible] the swelling as well as [illegible] the discoloration but the [illegible] always secured, although [illegible] former.

[illegible] ted by severe men[illegible] strain, nothing restores [illegible] system so quickly as [illegible]. Though less palatable [illegible] than cold milk or than [illegible], one who has [illegible] the refreshing influence [illegible] immediately, [illegible] its use for any thing [illegible] to the taste.

[illegible] FOR FRITTERS.—Put [illegible] in an earthen basin, [illegible] in the center and add [illegible] yolks of eggs according [illegible] required, one spoon[illegible] and a little [illegible] with one hand, [illegible] careful to always [illegible] in the same direc[illegible] in cold water by degrees until the batter is slightly thicker than ordinary double cream At the moment of using add one white of egg beaten to stiff froth. This batter is equally serviceable for sweet fritters of every kind or entremets where such is necessary, in which case less salt must be used and one or two spoonsful of cognac added. Another very excellent method of making batter for savory dishes is to moisten the flour with half a wineglass of white wine or best fresh vinegar, salt to taste, and cold milk instead of water.

CENTENNIAL GEMS.—Take one quart sifted flour, loosely put in, one measure each of acid and one moderately heaping teaspoonful soda) of Horsford's Bread Preparation, a little salt, then sift and add sufficient sweet milk and water or milk alone, to make a thick batter, and drop with a spoon into the the Gem baking pan. The mixing should be as thick as can be conveniently stirred. Do not mold it. Use no shortening. Before mixing, set the Gem pan on the stove and lit it get hot before filling.

The South American Republics are still as remarkable for continual quarrels, wars, revolutions, brigandage, and general insecurity and misery, as was Italy in both times of the Guelphs and Ghibelliness, and in both countries the trouble has resulted from the want of education. The whole education of the people in both countries was for centuries in the hands of Roman Catholic priests, who allowed no instruction for the masses, and whose greed, selfishness, and dissoluteness set an example before the people, which as a matter of course, they imitated. To expect stable government, or security for life and property among a people so educated would be like expecting grapes of thorns, or honest government from a New York Board of Aldermen, mainly composed of Roman Catholic proprietors of gin-mills.—N. Y. Witness.

Is the negro to remain in the South? The wildest reactionist will admit that he is here to stay. Is the negro to remain a voter? There is no one to deny that he will retain the privileges of citizenship. It follows inevitably that the education of the race is a necessity There is no other escape from the demoralization and disaster that attend upon ignorant suffrage. It is to the interest of every white man, woman and child in Geogia that the negroes should be educated.—Atlanta Constitution, Dem.

We trust our Episcopal brethren will do something for the colored people. It will get them out of the dead routine of former years. It will cause them to unbend somewhat. When this Church feels that it has a mission to the poor, both white and colored, and attempts to fulfill its mission, the Master will come to them in power and blessing, and the Church will advance. But they should not discuss "methods" too long; and by all means let proper views of the true nature of the Church prevail.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Nasby, Editor of the Toledo, Ohio, Blade, says: "In days past I have seen drunkenness and the effects thereof. I have seen the dead bodies of women murdered by drunken husbands: I have seen the best men in America go down to disgraceful graves; and I have seen fortunes wrecked, prospects blighted, and I have perused a great many pages of statistics. There are crimes on the calendar not resulting from rum, but were rum eliminated, the catalogue would be so reduced as to make it hardly worth the compiling. Directly or indirectly, rum is chargeable with a good ninety per cent. of the woes that afflict the whole country."

The President appointed Walter Evans, of Louisville, Ky., Commissioner of Internal Revenue in place of Green B. Raum, resigned; and Captain Ferguson, of Greenville Miss., a member of the Mississippi River Commission, to succeed Captain James B. Eads.

A PLEA FOR PRAYER.

BY W. H. HAYNE.

When loved ones leave our sight,
Like stars concealed by light;
Faith simply says "Believe;"
"Ask, and ye shall receive."

Strike not against the rock,
Flesh may not stand the shock;
But bow your hearts that grieve—
"Ask, and ye shall receive."

When the soul's life grows sear,
Ah! then we shrink from prayer—
But God still says "Beleive,"
"Ask, and ye shall receive."

To vanquish doubt aright,
Bathe it in heavenly light;
Let sin no fancies weave—
"Ask, and ye shall receive."

All searching souls pluck out
The flaunting weeds of doubt;
Their watchwords are "Beleive;"
"Ask, and ye shall receive."

Live to be useful; live to give light; for those who are enabled through grace to shine as lights here, shall, in the world to come, shine as suns and stars forever and ever.

Bishop Parker (Church South) said at the New Orleans District Conference. "I am looking for the church that thinks its assessment for missions low enough."

There are mysterious depths in the economy of Providence which the short line of our reason can not sound; but God can bring light out of darknesss.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate, published at New Orleans, appears in eight-page form instead of folio, which makes it more convenient for use, and the arrangement of matter. It is a great improvement, and we hope its subscription list will greatly increase, as it deserves a wider circulation, for the good it is doing in our Southern work.—Christian Standard, Philadelphia.

The woman of Samaria was no ordinary sinner, yet Jesus said, even to her, that if she had asked Him, He would have given her "living water." By this saying He displayed His willingness to save any sinner who was sufficiently penitent to ask for His mercy. Learn, therefore, O doubting penitent, that it is not the magnitude of thy sins, but thine unbelief, that keeps thee from finding rest in Christ.

There is too much of a tendency to relax after the extra services and protracted labors of the winter; but spring and summer are the very seasons when young converts should be specially careful to keep in exercise the grace they have received, and when older Christians, by faithful attendance on all the means of grace, should increase in holiness themselves, and by their example and testimony aid in developing the graces of the younger members.—N. Y. Advocate.

All the Bishops preached Sunday as announced in our last issue, excepting that the afternoon sermon at Library Hall was preached by Bishop Warren, instead of by Bishop Simpson, the latter preaching at Smithfield Street Church in the morning. Bishop Harris preached at Christ M. E. Church, contrary to expectation. In all cases the churches were filled and at Smithfield Street there were nearly 1,000 persons unable to gain admittance. Fifty years ago Bishop Simpson began his ministry in the Church erected on the site of the present Smithfield Street Church, and at the close of his sermon Sunday he indulged his audience with a few interesting reminiscences. Of the other sermons we cannot, for want of space, particularize. It was certainly a red-letter day for Methodism.—Pittsburgh Advocate.

The St. Louis Clinical Review says: "We desire to call attention to the reliability of the preparations manufactured by the Liebig Company, and to the high character of the indorsement accorded to its Coca Beef Tonic by leading physicians and medical journals of all schools." Invaluable in debility, piles, dyspepsia, catarrh and biliousness.

Forty Year's Experience of an Old Nurse.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never failing success by millions of mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhœ, griping in the bowels, and wind colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price twenty-five cents a bottle.

Said Bishop Keener, at the Baltimore Conference, Church South: "The time has not come when Methodist preachers are merely baptised schoolmasters, literary men and professors."

The two Methodisms have been pulling together in the Gospel yoke. The Pastors have aided each other in pulpit work; and the members have mingled prayers and praise over the conversions of souls.—Fort Worth Advocate.

DR. C. McLANE'S

Celebrated Liver Pills

In offering to the public Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills, as a remedy for Liver and Billious Complaints, we presume no apology will be needed. The great prevalence of Liver Complaint and Billious Diseases of all kinds throughout the United States, and particularly in the West and South, where, in the majority of cases, the patient is not within the reach of a regular physician, requires that some remedy should be provided that would not in the least impair the constitution, and yet be safe and effectual. That such is the character of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, there can be no doubt. The great success which has invariably attended their use, will, we think, be sufficient to convince the most incredulous. It has been our sincere wish that these Pills should be fairly tested, and stand or fall by the effects produced. That they have been so tested and that the result has been in every respect favorable, we call tens of thousands to witness who have experienced their beneficial effects.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS

are not held forth or recommended, (like most of the popular medicines of the day), as universal cure-alls, but simply as a specific for Liver Complaints, and those symptoms connected with a deranged state of that organ.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.
A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

[illegible] Academy.

[illegible] EDITOR:—I have been con[illegible] asking space in your valuable paper for the publication of the various amounts subscribed by churches and individuals to the Meridian Academy, for some time, but have been (shall I say patiently?) waiting since last August for the subscribers to pay up their subscriptions. This I find many do not intend doing, and as the school year is drawing to a close, and the time for the severance of my connection with the Institution is at hand, I cannot longer delay, but in justice to those who have done their duty by one of their own schools, would now ask that you grant us space for the article.

In September, 1877, I was sent here from New Orleans by Dr. Hartzell to take charge of what was represented, to both, to be the Meridian High School. Upon my arrival I found 23 little ones assembled in the large old church, and this was our beginning. Through opposition and persecution unheard of, we have struggled and are now completing our sixth year. We feel that God, the dispenser of all good, has blest our efforts in that we have succeeded in building up a good school, purchasing a good building site and erecting a substantial building of 4 rooms upon it, all of which is free from debt, save the small sum of $18.50. Feeling that many would help us if they but knew our true condition, we conceived the idea of spending our last vacation in visiting some of the cities and towns of our State and presenting our needs to the people, solicit their aid in helping us make our building comfortable. This we did, and of our success the public can judge from the following lists:

Brookhaven M. E. Church, 4.10; Brookhaven Baptist Church, 1.75; Brookhaven A. M. E. Church, 3.10; Jackson M. E. Church 12.25; Vicksburg M. E. S. S., 3.00; Vicksburg Bethel Church, 5.55; Vicksburg M. E. Church, 3.00; Union Lodge, Edwards Depot, 1.35; Forest M. E. S. S., 1.65; Total amount from the above, $36.05.

JACKSON.

Hon. Robt. Lowry, 5.00; Hon. E. Richardson, 10.00; Hon. Henry C. Meyers, 2.00; J. A. Wolf, 1.50; D. A. Williams, 2.50; Prof. J. T. Wood, 3.00; Jas. A. Moore, 1.00; N. T. Carmicheal, 1.00; J. Wonders, 1.00; A. W. Williams, 1.00. Total $28.00.

We have nicely ceiled two of the rooms, put in new black-boards extending the length of the rooms, seated one room, built a double gallery, put up new steps, painted and purchased a stove, all at a cost of $285.75, leaving a balance of $18.50. Will not some of the many who have subscribed and not paid, pay up their subscriptions and cancel this remaining debt? We have had a very prosperous year, great interest being manifested by both parents and children. We have had enrolled this year 128 different students. In resigning the Principalship of the Institution I desire to thank the patrons and friends for their kindness fidelity shown during my six years stay with them. They and the many children I have instructed here shall always have a warm place in my heart. An efficient lady principal is now needed for the Academy. One well versed in vocal and instrumental music and who is able and willing to labor in the Sabbath School.

Folly of the Pistol

That the pistol is needless for household defence is well shown by the conduct of Bridget Francis at Philadelphia the other night, when she was awakened by the presence of a man creeping toward her bed. Her evidence in court was as follows:

"Did I holler? Oh no. I quietly took hold o' the blanket, never sayin' a word, and my husband still snorin,' and I waited, scarcely breathin' till the man got near enough to hear me, when I whipped the blanket over his head and held him there as nice as you please. 'Ah, ha, my bye,' says I, I have you now in a net.' Wid that he set up sich a squirmin' and strugglin', and I thought he would escape me. He's a good six feet, as you can see, and broad accordin', and he was like a whale in a herring net. But I held him in the blanket with his head to the floor, til' my husband, wakened by the noise and scramin' of my childer, jumped out of bed to help me. I gave my husband the blanket then and snatchin' up my youngest baby, eight months old, I ran to the windy and cried for help. The man and my husband had it together. The man managed to get his head out o' the blanket and bolted for the dure, and my husband after him. The thafe slipped on the second or third step and tumbled all the way to the bottom. I saw an officer on the street. I called out to him and he came in and arrested the thafe."

The intruder got two years in the penitentiary, instead of Mrs. Francis getting shot.

It is said that in the jail at Covington Indiana, twenty-five men, arrested for drunkenness, recently made things lively by howling at the passers-by. One fellow shouted: "Look here! this is what you taxpayers get for a little whisky revenue; you have to board twenty-five of us, locked up for drunkenness.

Yonng Folks' Corner.

GOING HOME

"I am going home," a schoolboy said,
As he left his tasks at school.
"To the cottage white on yonder street,
Where home's bright circle is still complete,
With love for its golden rule."

"I am going home," a captian said,
As his ship sped o'er the sea,
"To the lone farm-house on the old hill-side;
To the village belle, my promised bride,
Now watching and waiting for me."

"I am going home," a merchant said,
Whose carriage rolled up the street,
"To my 'marble front on yonder square;
To my lovely wife, so proud and fair,
And my daughters fair and sweet."

"I am going home," a woodman said,
As he left his fallen tree,
"To the humble cot on yonder hill,
Where life flows on like a gentle rill,
With those who are dear to me."

"I am going home," a soldier said,
As he left the battle plain,
"To a peaceful farm in a northern State,
Where loving ones my coming await.
To welcome me back again."

"I am going home," a Christain said,
As his life was well nigh o'er,
To my Father's house by the crystal sea,
For the crown and the robe there waiting for me,
And shall wear them forever more."

Black Valley Railroad

1. From accurate estimates carefully made in the United States, it appears that this Road is constantly carrying over 300,000 persons, mostly young men, down to the condition of Common Drunkards.

2. If the families of drunkards average five persons, it carries untold misery and wretchedness directly to more than 1,500,000 persons, a large proportion of whom are women and children.

3. It keeps more than 300,000 in the Alms House.

4. It keeps 75,000 criminals in prison.

5. It is carrying toward destruction multitudes of the brave and noble young men in our country.

6. It has carried down to disgrace, poverty and destruction many of the talented men of the country, from the Bar, the Bench, the pulpit, and the Hall of Congress.

7. It carries more than 30,000 into eternity annually.

8. It caries more than $100,000,000 to Destruction. A distinguished observer of facts says, "All the crimes on earth do not destroy so many of the human race, nor alienate so much property as drunkenness."

9. It is prosecuting its terrible business against the laws of God and man, and in defiance of all authority.

10 Its business is rapidly increasing.

Reader, will you assist in diffusing information about the above road, so that multitudes of young men and others who are invited to excursions upon it may be informed beforehand about the country through which it passes, and in which it terminates?

A Dog's Exploit.

Last Thursday afternoon a woman, looking from her back window, in the city of Newburg saw in the house opposite a little child hanging from a window-sill, but kept from falling by a dog, who had caught the child's dress in his teeth. The woman had left her baby, 18 months old, on the floor of the front room playing with her toys and a little terrier dog that is its constant companion. The mother was away just three minutes, but when she came back and opened the door her infant's head, arms, and shoulders were hanging beyond the stone sill of an open window, and near it, with its feet on a chair stood the little dog holding on to the child's dress for dear life. Her child, unconscious of any danger, was crowing at some object in the yard, while the dog, holding on the dress, looked a mute appeal for haste and help. In an instant she was by her baby's side and the danger was passed. When the dog has been relieved of its burden he pranced around the mother and child with a delight that was almost frantic.—Warwick Advertiser.

Girls, Learn To Cook.

Yes, yes, learn how to cook, girls, and learn how to cook well. What right has a girl to marry and go into a house of her own unless she knows how to superintend every branch of housekeeping, and she cannot properly superintend unless she has some practical knowledge herself. It is sometimes asked, sneeringly, "What kind of a man is he who would marry a cook?" The fact is that men do not think enough of this; indeed, most men marry without thinking whether the woman of his choice is capable of cooking him a meal, and it is a pity he is so short-sighted, as his health, his cheerfulness, and, indeed, his success in life, depend in a very great degree on the kind of food he eats; in fact, the whole household is influenced by the diet. Feed them on fried cakes, fried meat, hot bread and other indigestible viands, day after day, and they will need medicine to make them well.

Let all girls have a share in housekeeping at home before they marry; let each superintend some department by turns. It need not occupy half the time to see that the house has been properly swept, dusted, and put in order, to prepare puddings and make dishes, that many young ladies spend in reading novels which enervate both mind and body and unfit them for every-day life. Women do not, as a general rule, get pale faces doing house-work. Their sedentary habits, in overheated rooms, combined with ill-chosen food, are to blame for bad health. Our mothers used to pride themselves on their housekeeping and fine needlework. Let the present generation add to its list of real accomplishments the art of properly preparing food for the human body.

Questions On Temperance, With Bible Answers.

Q.—May a drunkard expect to be approved in the practice of drinking?

A.—For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.—2 Cor. x. 18.

Q.—What did the angels says of John the Baptist?

Q.—In what list of sins does he place it.

A.—Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like.—Gal. v. 19-21.

Q.—Among what graces does he place temperance?

A.—But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law.—Gal. v. 22, 23.

A.—Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkarks, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.—I Cor. vi. 10.

Q.—Is it right so to associate with drunkards as to lead them to think we approve their conduct?

A.—But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner: with such an one no not to eat.—I Cor. v. 11.

Q.—Why not associate with drunkards?

A.—Because evil communications corrupt good manners.—1 Cor. xv. 33.

Q.—What should be our rule concerning intoxicating drinks?

A.—Abstain from all appearance of evil.—I Thess. v. 22.

"Four things," says Hopiner, "are necessary to constitute a Christian. (1) Faith makes a Christian. (2) Life proves a Christian. (3) Trials confirm a Christian. (4) Death crowns a Christian."

The beautiful islands of the southeastern coast of Asia are still mainly under the influence of the most dergaded heathenism, Borneo, with its two millions, has a few stations under the Rhenish and English Propagation Societies. Java with its nine millions, has a larger number of churches and laborers, amounting to less than thirty, under the Dutch societies New Guinea, the largest island on the globe, except Australia, has only been accessible to missionaries for seven years, but in that time the London Society has planted about thirty stations along its immense coast and among its numerous races, and a portion of the Bible has been translated into one of the languages. LANGUOR AND LASSITUDE.

SO COMMON IN THE SPRING, INDICATE A TORPID CONDITION OF THE LIVER AND A SLUGGISH CIRCULATION OF THE LIFE-GIVING FLUIDS. A TEASPOONFUL OF TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT IN A GLASS OF WATER HALF AN HOUR BEFORE BREAKFAST WILL GENTLY RELIEVE AND REGULATE THE LIVER, QUICKEN AND PURIFY THE CIRCULATION, AND IMPART NEW LIFE AND VIGOR TO EVERY FUNCTION OF THE BODY. ALL DRUGGISTS HAVE IT.

At the second annual meeting of the New York Charity Organization Society, the purpose of which is to help the needy, expose fraud, and discourage lazy paupers, Dr. Potter reported finding a genuine letter of his father, ten years dead, in the hands of a beggar who had lived on it in idleness all that time. The Doctor tried to buy the letter for five dollars, then for ten, fifteen but money couldn't buy it. The shrewd beggar knew "which side of his bread was buttered."

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physcians
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, child-like refreshing sleep always,
And they will tell you unhesitatingly, "Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:
What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs, such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to women—
And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically, "Buchu."
Ask the same physicans:
What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, etc., and they will tell you:
"Mandrake, or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill-health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is harmless for the most frail women, weakest invalid, or smallest child to use.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved his Child.

17 N. Eutaw St., Baltimore, Md. Feb. 12, 1880.

Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried BROWN'S IRON BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required;" and when informed that the elder sister was taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

ADORAM PHELPS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.

THURSDAY, MAY 31, 1883.

Raising goobers and potatoes is honorable and Christian, but the man in the pulpit who sets himself against the circulation of his church periodicals has a speck of badness about him that needs to be healed.

Moving on. Sabbath, May 13th, was missionary day in Cincinnati, and it was a great success. The aggregate collections from our churches for the cause of missions will be much larger in this city this year than ever before.

The Texas Advocate (Church South) having called attention to the fact that Dr. Henderson was sent to a fine city appointment and the colored minister placed on the supernumerary list, the Central asks: "Can it not understand that ministerial equality does not mean sending ministers to equally desirable appointments?"

The program of Washington and Lee University commencement exercises, June 24th to 27th, includes a sermon by Bishop A. W. Wilson, and addresses by Hon. C. R. Breckenridge and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. On the 28th the Lee Memorial Association, Gen. Joseph E. Johnson, president, Gen. John B. Gordon, chief marshal, will unveil a statue of Gen. Lee and decorate the graves of Lee and Jackson.

The Wages of Sin

There is in these days a sentimental way of looking at sin which softens down its character as transgression, and seems to overlook its relation to the divine law. It seems to regard sin as a misfortune working out its natural and legitimate results of pain and sorrow, but it forgets that it is a moral wrong, an offense against law and therefore subject to judicial penalty. Those who regard sin only as a misfortune talk of God as a loving Father who, while he is displeased with the waywardness of his children, yet in his tenderness and love throws around them his arms of mercy, so he cannot cast off his children any more than a mere human parent can. God they tell us is a God of love and tenderness and cannot belie his own nature and deal harshly with the unfortunate offending child. That God is a Father full of love and tenderness ("God is love") is a blessed truth that all his intelligent creatures rejoice in. But He is a Lawgiver, a Ruler, a Sovereign, as well as a Father.

As a Father he is surrounded by a numerous family over which He exercises paternal authority. But as a sovereign He becomes a lawgiver, a judge to judge all of those to whom He stands in that relation. As a sovereign He does not lose His heart of love, tenderness and sympathy; but He cannot overlook offenses. As a sovereign He can have but one standard and He must adhere to that without wavering or His government will speedily break down. The standard is said to be holy, just and good. This He publishes to the world as His law, and this He must maintain or lose His character for wisdom and justice. Sin then becomes something more than a misfortune, something more than displeasing God personally. It is a violation of law, a law holy, just, and good, solemnly enacted and plainly announced, it is therefore the highest offense possible against the Infinite One.

But there can be no law without a penalty. Sin always carries along with it its own penalty. We sometimes speak of the natural results of sin. As when a man thrusts his hand into the fire he is burned, or if he eats strychnine he is poisoned but we suppose these are penalties inflicted by judicial authority. In the moral world sin works out its own natural judicial results. He who saves to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. Sin will work out its own natural results, some of them are doubtless experienced in this life, but there is the final penalty that is to be pronounced by the righteous judge when men are called to give their account for the deeds done in the body. At that time their rewards, their penalties shall be in accordance with what they have done or not done in this life. "Sin kills beyond the tomb." "The wages of sin is death." It is what the sinner works for. It is his pay. We counsel every sinner to forsake his sins, to turn from his evil ways, that his sins may be blotted out and his name inscribed in heaven.

Which is it; Africans, Americans, or Negroes?

In a recent issue of the SOUTHWESTERN we said: "If you spell Caucasian, Mongolian, Malayan and American Indian with capitals, according to the rule in composition which requires that proper nouns and adjectives formed from proper nouns should begin with capital letters, why is it you persist in spelling Negro, the proper name of a race, with a small n? Now, why is it? If you have no reason for it, just stop it, and quit insulting a race, and conform to the established rules of recognized English composition."

The Christian Recorder, our Philadelphia confrere, takes exception to a portion of this short paragraph of ours, and with an air of triumph and satisfaction cries out to us: "Hold on, Brother SOUTHWESTERN. Don't bag your game so soon. We agree with you that the rule in composition which requires that all proper nouns should begin with capital letters, should be observed; but we disagree with you in recognizing "Negro" as the proper name of the Africo-Americans of this country. Not recognized by the aboriginal Africans themselves, why should we, their far off descendants, recognize it? No: we are either Africans or Americans. That we are the latter, everybody knows."

Why Brother Recorder, we can hardly understand what you mean. Neither can we imagine upon what tenable, legal, or even technical plea you call us to a halt. We know that all natives of this country are Americans by birth, whether black, white, yellow, brown or copper colored; but this fact does not annihilate any ethnological or race clasification or division. The white man is no less of the Caucasian race because he is a native American, neither is the black man less a Negro because of the same fact. The one may be, by descent, a German, Latin or Anglo-Saxon American, the other an Africo-American; and by birth and citizenship, both may be Americans; while according to almost universally accepted ethnologist, the one may be of the Caucasian, the other of the Negro race. And this is true whether we accept Prof. Blumenbock's quinary arrangement, or Cuvier's threefold division of the races. In either or both, the black man is classified as an Ethiopian or Negro, and these may be used as synonymous terms. The one is derived from the Greek, the other from the Latin. The word "Ethiop" in the Greek means "Sunburnt" and Luther's German has for the word "Ethiopia," Negroland;" while the the term Negro is from the Latin "Niger" and the French "Noir" which means black. Hence it is the proper name for the black race, with curly or woolly hair. And the race is descended from the great Hamitic family from whence sprang all the dark races. And whatever of greatness or of glory, from Carthage, from Ethiopia or from Egypt has descended to bless the modern world, may be claimed by the modern Negro as heir-looms from his ethnological ancestry. But the Recorder says: "The name Negro is "not recognized by the aboriginal Africans themselves, why should we their far-off descendants recognize it?" But what better witness on such a subject could we produce than Rev. Edward W. Blyden, L. L. D. of Liberia. He says: "Long before the slave trade began, travelers found the blacks on the coast of Africa preferring to be called Negroes, (See Purcha's Pilgrimage) "and in all the pre slave trade literature the word was spelled with a capital N. It was the slavery of the blacks which afterwards degraded the term; and what we propose to do is, now that slavery is abolished, to restore it to its original place and legitimate use, and therefore to restore the capital N." Upon these identical grounds, the national convention of colored men which met in Nashville, a few years ago, gave expression to sentiments that resulted in the general adoption of the capital N in spelling the proper name of the Negro race. William Wells Brown, the great historian of his race accepts the appellation, Negro, as a matter of course, so does the later historian Williams; in whose words we say: "It is not wise, to say the least, for intelligent Negroes in America to seek to drop the word "Negro. It is a good, strong and healthy word, and ought to live. It should be covered with glory: let Negroes do it." To answer our own question we think we are amply justified in saying that the black man in American is, by descent an Africo-American, by birth and citizenship an American, and by race division a Negro, with a capital N. But Brother Recorder, since according to your conclusion, "everybody knows" that the colored people of America are not Africans. Why continue an African Church in America? Surely not for the benefit of the Africans, is it? There must be something in a name after all.

The New Orleans University.

The anniversary exercises of this institution closed Thursday, May 25. The lecture by Dr. Dean, the president, is highly spoken of by those who had the pleasure of hearing it. The institution has never enjoyed a more prosperous year. Over two hundred and thirty students have been enrolled. They never went away more enthusiastic for the institution, nor ever so unanimous in intention to return. The prospects for a large attendance was never so good. The relation of this school to our work in Louisiana cannot be fully portrayed. The one great lack of the University is new, enlarged, and better buildings. No conference in our Southern work has responded more generously than the Louisiana conference did last year. In their poverty and love (for it was an offering of love) they contributed over $2.000 towards the erection of new and suitable buildings for the New Orleans University and Gilbert Haven School of Theology, and we trust they will do as well if not better next year. The site is splendid, and with new and elegant buildings the attendance would soon be more than doubled. Who will claim the honor to aid us in our struggle by contributing from a dime to ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars towards the erection of these new buildings. Move quickly, ye stewards of the Lord, and come down and help those who are doing the best they can to help themselves. Of silver and gold our people have little or none, their inheritance is their children, and here they are rich beyond comparison. The cry is for help that they may be able to give them a Christian education. The administration of Dr. Dean during the past year has given the greatest satisfaction to both the patrons and the trustees. He has not the faculty possessed by many of building up a reputation on the work of others, or upon a false foundation. His own work is his greatest praise. "Beautiful for situation" and offering every facility for a complete education, the New Orleans University deserves the commendation and patronage of every Methodist in the Louisiana conference.

How much happier is the soul that trustingly clings to the cross of Christ, than that which hangs its hopes upon a godless philosophy! Hume in his Treatise on Human Nature says:

"I am affrighted and confounded with that forlorn solitude in which I am placed by my philosophy. when I look abroad, I foresee on every side dispute, contradiction, and distraction, I find nothing but doubt and ignorance. Where am I or what? From what cause do I derive my existence, and to what condition shall I return? I am confounded with these questions; and begin to fancy myself in the most deplorable condition imaginable, environed with the deepest darkness."

Byron says: "The Christian has greatly the advantage of the unbeliever—having everything to gain and nothing to lose." Neither does ancient philosophy afford any clearer light. Plato, speaking of future rewards and punishment says: "The truth is, to determine or establish anything certain about these matters, in the midst of so many doubts and disputatious, is the work of a God only." But Christian philosophy entertains no such doubts and uncertainties. To the apostle Paul, it makes manifest, "Our Saviour Jesus Christ who hath abolished death and hell brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." Therefore it is that he joyfully says: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. For I am in a straight betwixt two, having desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better." Again, "for we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." While Job, voicing the hope of the ancient believer, exclaims: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another." In Christ is thus found our all in all, the light, the life, and the hope of the present world, and that which is to come. Well might a perishing world join in the singing with the poet: "Simply to thy cross I cling."

In the June number of the Century Geo. W. Cable has a well written paper on "The Great South Gate," in which he says. "In 1850 there was but one school, Sunday school or public library in Louisiana to each 73,966 persons, or 100 volumes to each 2310 persons. In Rhode Island there were eleven and half times as many books to each person. In Massachusetts there were 100 volumes to every 188 persons. In the pioneer State of Michigan without any large city there was a volume to every four persons. True in Louisiana there were 100 volumes to every 1218 free persons, but this only throws us back upon the fact that 245,000 persons were totally without books and were forbidden by law to read." Among these 245,000 who were totally without books and were forbidden by law to read in 1850, the Methodist Episcopal Church has now 125 Sunday schools, 586 officers and teachers, 8099 scholars and 5559 volumes in their libraries. We know that this number is small as compared with schools in other sections of our country but it is a wonderful improvement upon 1850.

We clip the from a Laredo, Texas, exchange the following advertisement:

"Bull-fight on Sunday, Jan. 21, 1883, by Some Amateurs, for the Benefit of the New Catholic Temple of New Laredo.

"For the Board of Directors, Quintin Villegas, Luciano Trivino. Payments: In shade, 50 cents; in the sun, 25 cents. Note.—In the advent of bad weather the entertainment will be suspended and reserved for the first suitable day."

In view of such proceedings, which are countenanced and endorsed by the Church, is it to be wondered that in all Roman Catholic communities no Christian Sabbath is wholly observed? The perpetuation of the Christian Sabbath, in contradistinction to the continental Europe, and the free beer guzzling American Sabbath, devolves upon the Protestants of the country. Let every man stand up to his convictions, and the word of God in defense of the sanctity of the Sabbath. Put your foot down upon all unholy infidel impudence, and Romish endorsement, and contend for the day of sacred rest and worship.

Cannot some arrangements be made to have the weekly races at the fair grounds come off on some other day than Sunday? We see no harm in doing necessary work on the Sabbath day, but to deliberately plan either work, fairs, excursions for pleasure, or horse races—for Sunday smacks a little too much of heathenism to be tolerated by a civilized people. There is something inconsistent in a standard of morality which refuses to tolerate teachers in the public schools unless of sound moral character, and then allows both children and teacher to attend a horse race on the Sabbath day, where drinking, cursing and swearing is indulged in ad libitum.—Terebonne Times.

This is a sensible expression against a great evil, which should be echoed backward and forward through this State, until our people are educated up to the point that Missisippi, Arkansas, even Texas, and nearly all the other States of the Union have reached, that of enacting, and forcing the observance of a Sunday law. Every economic, physical, mental, moral and spiritual interest demands such a law.

Editorial Correspondence.

The work of giving the Gospel to the people of Spanish, English, German and African descent in Texas is being carried on with more or less success by the various church organizations now here. We know of only one church that feels "entirely competent" to do this work, and wishes to be left alone to do it. With all the agencies now at work there are regions scarcely touched by any religious influences, and multitudes of people who are as much under the influences of Fetchism and Hoodouism as any in the dark continent of Africa. We believe that here in Texas there is a field for missionary work more promising and more practical than that of Melville Cox, who went forty years ago to West Africa and laid his bones on that shore, sending back word to America, "Let a thousand fall, but Africa not given up." But second or third-rate men, who were a failure in some Northern or Eastern Conference, will not do here. Timid, time-serving, half-and-half-men, are not in order. Men of mere sentimental or rose-colored views had better stay east or north of the Ohio. Our work in Texas, and all through the South, requires men called from above. Men called by man may do elsewhere but not here. Here we stand in great need of those who, like the Master, will be here, not to be ministered unto but to minister and give their time, strength and all for the salvation of the people.

Bro. Geo. Davis, on Houston circuit, is a man of excellent spirit and is doing a good work. Under his ministry a large number have been converted, colored and white, and have joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bro. Davis is not a profound man, but all recognize him as a man of God, who, with singleness of aims and purity of heart, prosecutes the work of the Lord. While he is pastor he is also connected with Houston Seminary; and Bro. Campbell, president of the Seminary, says he has few students who are making better progress in their studies.

Tuesday night we attended class at Trinity. Bro. Scott opened the meeting with what seemed to us very appropriate remarks. We need more such men. There were over one hundred and forty present, led by thirteen leaders. All seemed moved quietly but sensibly by the presence of the Holy Spirit. Over fifty copies of the SOUTHWESTERN go to Trinity and at last conference, every one was settled for. We make this statement for the benefit of others.

Wednesday night we preached at St. James. Other churches are stronger, but we doubt if any are more willing, they are "dyed in the wool" Methodists who have come up through great tribulation. Some of them were born in Africa; stolen in childhood, brought to America, and bought by and counted as "my chattels," by certain so-called American Christians, who have much to say about their former labors for the Christian education of the colored people. If the rose-colored statements of these persons are to be to relied upon their work was one of the purest Christian philanthropy. The men and women who, now bowed with age, still bear upon their bodies marks of the driver's lash, and in the various shades of their complexion, the undeniable evidence of the miscegenation of those times are not quite so rose-colored in their statement. Miscegenation was taught the colored people both by precept and example long before the war; it is an old doctrine.

Thursday we rode to Hockley, a small and pleasant village about forty miles north of Houston, where we have a small church and a few good members. We found a pleasant home, with Bro. Louis Thomas, whose good wife gave us this bit of information as to herself and family. She was born in North Carolina; her father belonged to a man by the name of Taylor; the name of her mother's owner was Nichols; after his death she was owned by

We see it stated that the Masonic Grand Lodge, of Missouri, in October last, passed a resolution declaring that the business of saloon-keeping "is a Masonic offense, and those engaged in the business are liable to be dealt with for unmasonic conduct." That is a wise deliverance. No man can do that which lowers his fellows in the scale of being, or degrades himself, and yet remain a true Mason. For a lowing unmasonic conduct upon the part of members to go unrebuked, Masonry has compromised itself, and in some sections of the country lost all public respect. Masonry, as such, is a grand order, but it carries too many rough ashlers to be able to accomplish the purpose for which it exists.—Central Methodist.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFU[illegible]d SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

Bishop Merrill's doctrinal works are being translated into German, and will be issued in that language by the Methodist Book Concern.

I have been very sick over two years. They all give me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I had tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

Three months ago Pierce Lanier, Sr., was murdered in Livingstone parish La. His two sons Guion and Pierce, suspected the brothers, James and William Curley, as the assassins, and in a short time slew the former. Sunday evening William Curley and his brother-in-law, Robert Morrison, lay in ambush for the Laniers, and in the fight which resulted the two brothers and William Curley were killed.

Invalid mothers, weak children, nervous and fretful infants are benefited by using Brown's Iron Bitters. Harmless but efficacious.

Navasota District Camp Meeting.

This Camp Meeting will be held on the District Camp Ground, three miles east of Navasota on the Montgomery Branch of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fee Railroad. It will commence on Thursday July 12, and continue as long as the executive and business committee shall decide so to do. The business and executive committees, the same members answering for both, are as follows: Alexander Hackett, Jesse Denson, J. W. Hinton, J. A. Tillory, Wm. May, James Cullen, G. V. R. Bookman, J. H. Hawkins, P. P. Felder, H. Williams, S. Thurman, Abner Thomas, Thos. Blake, A. Franklin, Jas. Washington and Louis Downey. I have appointed Rev. Edward Lee chairman of this committee and requet the members of it to co-operate with him in making the necessary improvements on the gounds and buildings. The members of committee or any other persons wishing information in regard to the Camp Meeting can address him at Navasota. As the few cannot bear the burden of the many let each one coming make provision for himself and family for there will be no free tables. Each pastor is a member of the Camp Meeting Association and ought not only to attend himself but to induce the members and friends on his charge to come. It is designed that each charge provide for the entertainment of its own pastor. The train on the railway on which the Camp Ground is located will stop at the grounds and no inconvenience will be experienced in getting to the place which is in sight of the railway. A committee will wait on the trains on the Central Railway to direct people to the grounds. The grounds are ample and the water will be abundant and good. It is intended to induce each charge to build permanent camps on the streets of its own. Now is the time to begin to agitate the camp meeting question and to rouse the people so that we may have a general turn out and a glorious meeting. Pray for its succes.

SAMARITAN NEVER FAILS. NERVINE

"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply, because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It's known world wide as

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. (14)

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, cathartic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar-coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. Now and then would it not be advisable for the big Advocates of our church to get in an item or two about our work in the South, alongside the minute reports of mission work in India and Japan?

The French Republic, by its warlike demonstrations on the Congo, in Madagascar, and in Tonquin, is not commending itself to the admiration of the civilized world. All are in accord with that unholy ambition of conquest which brought to the first Napoleon a Waterloo, and the third Napoleon a Sedan. The only security of a republican form of government is adherence to just and wise policy.

The conference journal of the A. [illegible] Church reports a member[illegible] the State of New York in 1867 of 2,337, in 1882 they report 2,300 showing a decrease in fifteen years of thirty-seven members. The value of this church property in 1867 was $181,200, in 1882 $190,900, making an increase in fifteen years of $9,700, but upon this there is an indebtedness of $48,812. Not a very favorable showing for an aggressive church.

Senator John A. Logan has published a reply to his critics in the Zuni reservation matter. He denies having entered any land belonging to the Indians, or that he had any interest in any such entry. His defense is marred, however, by language which shows that his sympathies are with the rough frontiersmen and their aggressive tendencies rather than with those who urge a faithful observance of government treaties and Christian treatment of the Indians.

We have found some people who because they could not serve God and society on a large scale would not serve at all. It would be a great thing to endow a college, and yet but few can do that. Be content brother and do what you can. If you cannot do something large and grand, do not sit down and do nothing. Never neglect the smaller opportunities for usefulness. If you cannot do the great thing do the small and thank God for the opportunity.

For some cause the great city of New York seems to take instinctively to Bourbon Democracy and rum. The present population of the city is said to be 1,300,000. The tables published in the New York Times in 1882 showed 489 churches or places of religious worship, making one church to every 2,658 of the population. The same paper showed 9,083 licensed saloons, thus giving one saloon to every 143 population. Saloons, whiskey and Bourbonism are much alike. No matter which you take first you will surely find the second and third near by waiting to receive you.

The courteous offer of the New Orleans Auxiliary Sanitary Association to co-operate with the Board of Health, in needed sanitary measures for the public good, has been met by the refusal of the Board, which declares the Sanitary Association to be an illegal organization, interfering with duties committed to its charge. The Board of Health is confessedly without the means or men to exercise that rigid surveillance which the security of public health demands, yet forsooth it will adhere to technicalities in contemplation of volunteer assistance. It is difficult to comprehend the practical service which the Board of Health is rendering to the State to justify its existence, or commend it to public approval. It is a corporation destructive to commerce, conducted on illiberal principles, and which does not possess either the confidence or esteem of those whom it professes to serve. Its treatment of the Sanitary Association, the existence of which is a partial exhibition of this general distrust, was an act of sheer stupidity, injurious to the best interests of this city.

Judge Jeremiah S. Black, of Pennsylvania, an orthodox Democrat, and an able constitutional lawyer has addressed to the Pennsylvania Senate railroad committee, a vigorous letter on the relations between railroads and the State. He makes a forcible, and somewhat original presentation of the subject when he declares that the men who run railroads are public agents without "the slightest proprietary right or title to the railroads themselves." Railroads are simply highways of the State constructed for the public benefit by chartered corporations as a matter of convenience and expediency; and these corporations are allowed to secure their compensation by toll or taxes from those enjoying the use of the highway. Judge Black makes numerous citations of legal principles and decisions in support of this position. He says "all proper regulations should be made to prevent those agents from betraying their trust." He puts the matter strongly: "A railroad corporation is a part of the civil government as much as a city corporation," and its officers equally "agents and trustees of the public," and the public's interest is precisely similar in both. "Why then," he asks, "should partiality or extortion be condemned as criminal in one if it be tolerated as fair business when practiced by the other?" Judge Black's interpretation of the position of railroads makes it clear that in law as in justice, the outrageous ejectment or denial to colored people of first class privileges on railroads is condemned and should be punished.

We commend the following letter to the careful consideration of our preachers:

DEAR EDITOR—On account of Elder Campbell giving the brethren this quarter a good lecture on the interest of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and looking them right in the face, I send you the following (seven) names and $3.60. Fraternally,

C. W. IVY.

Home Work For Christian Women.

BY E. O. THAYER, PRESIDENT OF CLARK UNIVERSITY.

America has recently honored the mortal remains of John Howard Payne, returned to their native soil after a long rest in a strange land far from the "Home, Sweet Home" of which he so tenderly sang. Why is this otherwise unbeknown singer so much loved for his little song, unless because he struck a sweeter chord than any one else in praise of that which Americans, more than others, recognize as the foundation, the nursery of every public and private virtue? What American successful in any sphere of life requiring the best qualities of manhood, has not ascribed his success to the influences of his childhood's home; and especially of the queen who ruled there with her scepter of love? Great men in every age and land have acknowledged this power by graceful, manly tributes to home and mother.

Certain it is that no people become permanently prosperous except through the influence of pure, intelligent women in homes most sacredly kept free from every thing unclean and degrading. From the old homesteads of the original thirteen States have come out the men and the ideas and the principles, that have so thoroughly withstood the force of foreign invasion, not of arms, but of hostile influences; that have kept the nation safe in its perils, and that to-day are molding its destiny.

The war of the Rebilion left us with a large section of our country to be reconstructed. We thought to do it by laws, when really it must come by a slow process at the very foundations of society, the home. The better class at the South had good homes, Christian homes, but they must be changed. New relations existed between master and mistress and servants, leading to perplexities and changes of which Northern people know nothing. But there were millions of whites and blacks with no places that ought to be dignified with the name of home. Slavery did not encourage home-life; it was impossible for it to do so. Advertisements to-day for lost parents and children show how uncertain family ties were. Landless white men, "squatters," with no abiding place, could not sing Payne's hymn. The close of the war, then, found several millions of grown-up children thrown out into the world to find a place for themselves. It was a cheerless prospect, but right manfully many went at it, and in spite of opposition of every kind, the tax-books show that some have collected at least the materials for a home. Is it not the natural conclusion that if we wish to elevate the colored people we must begin with the home?

To strengthen this position let us look at a home typical of nearly all in the country, and of at least nine-tenths of those in the towns. The house itself is generally built of logs "chinked" with mud. A chimney made of rough stones, or sticks of wood laid cob-house fashion, and plastered with clay, furnishes a partial outlet for the smoke of the great fireplace where the cooking is done, and about which the family gather for warmth. The better class of huts have two rooms, and occasionally as many as three. Here a family of a dozen will eat, sleep, and perform the other duties of daily existence. The mother will generally be found with frowsy head, bare feet, dirty calico gown, and with a snuff-stick protruding from her mouth. Harsh words and hickory sticks are the usual means of discipline. The neatness, comfort, and parental love that can make the humblest home so attractive, seem wanting.

Any one who has traveled through the country districts or visited the suburbs of our towns will bear witness that this is not an overdrawn picture. The exceptions encourage us to look for a brighter day. Our readers can imagine the class of students drawn from such surroundings. The sad fact is that only a small proportion of this kind are reached by our schools. Most of them come from homes that are better than the average.

The result is that the young men become mere day laborers, and small wages and scarcity of employment at certain seasons drive many of them to the small towns as loafers. The girls are constantly liable to an immoral life. There are no safeguards for them, unless they have acquired in some way a strong self-respect.

It is considered, among a certain class of white men, no incivility to insult a colored girl. Our lady students often suffer by the low talk at the depots and on the streets. Do you wonder that mothers write to us to take their daughters into our schools to save them? If one-half the terrible truth of the colored woman's sufferings were made public, the whole Southern press would arise in its wrath and pronounce it false. The sum of the matter is, the colored woman is considered by her own race as an inferior drudge, and by the whites as having none of the rights of a lady. What can be done to elevate society until such a condition of affairs is changed? Our position, then, that our work must be more directed at the home-life, is supported by the facts. We appeal, then, to Christian women whose hearts bleed at the recital at the sufferings of far-away sisters in India and China, not to abate your sympathy for them in the least, but to enlarge your hearts in imitation of Christ, and take in your sisters at home, equally needy and degraded.

I know the same argument will be used as was brought against the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, that other societies are in the field. Yes, that is true, but there is a work to be done here that none but women can do, a special work belonging to none of the organized agencies. One society builds churches and another pays the preachers in charge, and still another helps in the work of the Sunday-school. The Freedmen's Aid Society has established schools here and there for the training of preachers, teachers, and doctors. But its means have been too limited to make a specialty of the training necessary to make good homes and good housekeepers. The writer holds the opinion that much spent on college courses might have been profitably spent in this direction; but such a view is unpopular.

The event has proved how slow the progress in elevating the people, when preachers, who never knew the blessedness of an early training, try to lead to higher living people on the same level with themselves with few of the ennobling incentives and strong safeguards of Christian homes; when teachers try to impress moral lessons on children, only to be partially, if not wholly, effaced by a few hours of home influence. We must teach the young women the value of purity, the sanctity of married life, their dignity as man's equal, all the lessons that are necessary for good homes, neatness, economy, loving parental government. When this is done the new generation, born and reared under such favorable circumstances, will be ready for the higher intellectual training that we have been so laboriously striving to instill in minds not ready for it. Where we have graduated a hundred we have left thousands groping in the darkness, only wanting to learn how to live. Educators are slowly coming to see that we have made great mistakes in the last fifteen years. We have been trying to force New England culture on a soil not ready for it. We have found thousands as capable as white children to learn our lessons, for it is not a question of capacity we raise; but we have made many of our graduates unfit for the sphere in which they must move, and the masses have been left untouched. What is the remedy? We must make our system of education more practical.

We have already in these columns spoken of the Industrial Departments for boys. They are in successful operation at Hampton, Clark, and elsewhere. The same thing must be done for the girls. An institution has been started at Clark University that should be copied in all our schools. We call it the "Model Home." A seven-room cottage, built by the young men, is completely furnished, and there companies or families of girls live and "keep house" in all the details of that rare accomplishment. They cook, sew, sweep, and adorn. Beside this they need a fund to help them remain in school. The young men have an Education Society, and funds frequently come for theological students; but the young ladies are almost forgotten, in spite of the fact that their wages are much the lower. In brief, it is impossible for girls without wealthy parents to remain in school without considerable aid. The Catholics are gathering these poor girls into their free schools, and they make the best scholars and noblest women. Again, we ought to have in every large town missionaries to go from house to house with kind words and instruction. To do this work to the best advantage they must have little homes, both as resting-places for themselves and models for the people. They cannot secure comfortable boarding places among Southern whites. Now, what society feels it to be its duty to attend to such work as this, unless it be the Woman's Home Missionary Society? Christian women of the North, we beg you to listen to the cry that goes up to you from the thousands of hovels in our native land, where the love and peace and joy of the Gospel never have come: where thousands of little children are growing up to lives of misery, ignorance, oppression, and vice, worse than the days of slavery. In the name of patriotism, humanity, and Christianity, let some rays of light from your beautiful Northern homes fall upon these dusky groups gathered nightly in these Southern log huts, their faces lighted by the smoky blaze of the pine-knot, and their hearts, by the dim glimmer of hope of something better in the indefinite "beyond the Jordan."—N. Y. Advocate.

West Tennessee District.

DEAR EDITOR:—I closed my first round on my district March 4, at Purdy, with usual success. I found all my preachers at their posts earnestly trying to bring up their circuits. I met all of my points on time. Preachers were cheerfully received by the people to serve them another year. Our district conference at Memphis, the first of February, proved to be a grand success, and the district Institute, in connection with the conference, has been life to the Sunday-school cause. There has been but one circuit that let the Sunday-school go into winter quarters, and that was on account of high water and condition of the churches. We have paid for the church at Mason, and had it deeded according to our church forms. Bro. J. B. Marbrey, pastor, is doing well on this circuit and is much beloved by all. Bro. H. Prim, on the Brownsville circuit, is doing well. Our annual conference at this place in last November has proved a blessing to our cause, and the sermons and lectures of Bishop Warren and Drs. Fowler, Stowe, Cushman and Braden, have been life to our church and will never be forgotten by the people. My brethren are hard at work preparing churches and building churches. We have raised for missions on this round $48, and taken in 2 new points. Several of my circuits have suffered on account of the excitement of the small pox, yet the brethren have taken every advantage and gained ground for the Redeemer's kingdom. I am yours, in Christ,

JESSE P. PRICE.

The first South African Conference has just been held in the splendid Metropolitan Church at Cape Town. It was opened on "Settlers' Day",—the anniversary of the arrival of the first party of settlers in 1820. Reports were presented by representatives from the various districts. In the Queenstown District, it was reported that there had been an increase during the year of 1,000 in the number of persons meeting in classes. Rev. Theo. Chubb, reporter the inauguration of a sheme for an institution at Buntingville, Poudoland, for the training of native teachers, and the teaching of trades. The "pastoral address" issued by the conference is to be printed in the Dutch and Kafir languages, as well as in English.

To crown the graves of those "who died to make men free," with choicest beauty and with fragrant bloom, is not all, nor the best that we can do. There is no monument that so honors a dead hero as the completion of his work. The people of a lately disenthralled race hold out their dusky hands to us for the bread of life and knowledge. Freedom is but a doubtful blessing without it. Every labor of love for the Freedmen of the South is also a memorial service to those who gave life for their liberty. Bring flowers one day in the year, bring loving labor all the time.—Western.

Show your neighbors the SOUTHWESTERN, and ask them to subscribe for it.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

R. C. Barrow, Algiers: "Elder Dale held the quarterly conference and preached an impressive sermon. We have commenced work on building. At St. Mathew Church there are 52 in Sunday-school; at Asbury Church there are 39. The first Sabbath in May was a blessed day at St. Mathew Church. In union meeting six sermons were preached by pastors of sister churches. Revs. S. Priestley, T. J. Johnson, T. G. Montgomery and E. P. Royal helped us. Collection was $22.50."

H. C. Armston, Morgan City: "The people at large are kind indeed, and especially the members of M. E. Church. The friends and members of the church gave your humble servant an agreeble surprise Tuesday evening, the 11th instant, by spreading on our table, I may say, a small grocery store. Among the number was Mrs. Burks, Jane Graham, Eliza Hardin, Mrs. Ann Ater, Mrs. M. Thomas, Miss A. Banton, Miss E. Allen, Miss A. Phillips, Mrs. E. Vagner, Mrs. Joshua Thomas, L. Shaw, Mrs. Delia Jenks, et al. They made appropriate remarks, and bade us a pleasant good night. In addition thereto, our church has purchased a splendid chandelier. The congregation is increasing. Our Sabbath school is prosperous, and my congregation, though small, is all I possibly could ask for."

Mrs. M. M. Carter, Monroe: "On the 29th of April, the church held the greatest basket meeting that has ever been seen in Monroe. Baptist brethren visited us in a true fraternal spirit. The congregation was well pleased."

D. Shelby, Allen: "We have a good day teacher who takes delight in bringing children to God. I have great hope for the young people. The Sunday-school is going right on."

W. L. Amos, Booneville: "The people are becoming stronger under the Lord. Sunday-school is growing rapidly. Bro. Murrell gave a lecture with good effect to the young people. We have a choir in church which affords delightful music. The people are liberal in contributions. In a union meeting $30.05 was taken up. Bro. Murrell, our beloved pastor, conducted a protracted meeting, and one soul was turned to the Lord."

Henry Johnson, Pineville: "Since the first quarterly conference the stewards of Pineville M. E. Church have collected $56.70 by contributions and subscriptions. The following persons subscribed and paid in their subscription: Ed. Powell, $1.50; T. Taylor, $2; Ben. Hall, $2; Wm. Taylor, $2; Jesse Burley, $1; R. Gaines, $2; Mr. M. Hall, $1; Miss B. Griffin, $1; Mr. E. Williams, 50c; H. Johnson, $3."

G. C. Washington, Glencoe: "The church is in a prosperous condition. In a few weeks more we expect to have service in the new church. The corner-stone was laid on the 13th inst. Bro. E. Lyons, of La Teche, was present with a large portion of his congregation, and assisted Bro. Brooks in laying the corner-stone of the Mount Zion M. E. Church at Glencoe. Over 300 were present to witness the scene, which was something new to the people. We had the pleasure of collecting $96 for the benefit of the new church. Bro. W. Brooks is doing a grand piece of work and is much loved by the people. We shall remember him when he is gone from among us. The Sunday-school is prospering. Bro. Graham Bell was with us last Sunday and preached a sermon that shall be remembered for many days; he also had the pleasure of organizing a Tabernacle Society, with 105 members. Pray for our success."

C. H. Claiborne, Dulac: "We were very much discouraged about our basket meeting. Our people had not paid off for their monthly [illegible] until the very hour our meeting commenced. However, they rallied themselves and rallied to the help of the Lord. We collected $41.75. A fine chandelier has been bought and is now furnishing light for the church. The young men of this place have nearly completed the shed preparatory for the entertainment to begin the first Saturday night in June, for the benefit of the church. A gentleman promised me as soon as we are ready to cancel the debt of the church, that he would give $25 towards it. Pray for us that we may have success in all parts of our labor. We are 20 miles out of the way, but we have every thing to make us comfortable except one thing, namely: water. It is very hard to get water. Will some one send us a cistern? Our Sabbath-school is fine. We meet at 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. in Sunday-school. The church is reviving.

TENNESSEE.

E. Provine: "On the Chattanooga district, East Tennessee conference, dear brethren, push the benevolent collections of the church. Remember Children's Day, the second Sunday in June. Let it be observed. Let us meet October 10, with good reports if we are spared till that time. The time is near for protracted and camp meetings. Let us get ready, and get as many to subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN as we can to instruct the people."

C. H. Bullington, McMinnville: "My work is in very good condition. We have three Sunday-schools, with 120 scholars. Elder Key held quarterly conference. Bro. W. C. Miller was with us. We received into full membership this quarter 20; 1 died, 1 withdrew. Paid pastor $40.85, elder $11, missions $5, church extension 50c, Sunday-school union 25c, tracts 25c, education 15c, for bishops $1, Freedmen's Aid $1. We need competent teachers in our Sunday-schools to improve them."

J. R. Alexander, Pleasant Grove: "Rev. L. M. Moores, our pastor, at 11 o'clock, May 9, after adjournment of the Sunday-school institute, gave us a powerful sermon. He showed plainly by illustration of the old eagle stirring up her nest and fluttering over little ones, that God always excited man for his own good. We were sorry when he stopped, for he moved the people."

J. L. Massey, Martin: "Elder Price, held our second quarterly meeting. Many of the brethren had written reports. Rev. W. Dwegans, of Alamo, was with us; also Rev. J. J. Barr, of Sharon. We paid elder $13,20, pastor $30,-85; raised for missions $1,75, Freedmen's Aid 60c, church extension $1. Sunday-school Union 45c. We intend to raise something on every cause. Bros. Frank Totten, and Wilson, and Misses Dora Stevens and Fannie Yates are doing good work in the Sunday-school. Six have professed faith in Christ, nine have been admitted to the church. A visit was paid to Union City, which we hope was a help to that part of the work."

MISSISSIPPI.

A. K. Davis, Canton: "Our second quarter was held 5th and 6th inst. The leaders made a good showing. Sunday was a day long to be remembered. The presence of the Lord was manifested. The elder preached a noble sermon at night, after which sacrament was administered to 13 communicants; collection $32. Thursday night preceding we had an old-fashion Methodist love-feast, which carried us back in our imagination when "They continued steadfast in the apostolic doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayer."

B. Stewart, Edwards: "The first quarterly conference was held by elder Williams. The pastor's report showed the church to be on the increase, spiritually and financially. Paid pastor during the quarter, $27.50; presiding elder, $7.65; total, $35.15. The pastor's salary was estimated at $250. P. E., $30. On Sabbath the elder gave us a good sermon at 11 o'clock, a. m., at 3 p. m. he administered the sacrament to 93 persons. At night the love-feast was held when many spoke of their love to Christ and his cause. The sermons and teachings of Elder Williams had its effect upon the hearts of the people. May he return soon. Pray for our success."

M. Adams, ex-Prairie circuit: "The second quarterly meeting was a grand occasion. Elder Campbell was with us, preached and administered sacrament to 125. He drew a picture of a straight and crooked tree with a fence around the straight tree, and told the Sunday-school if they would keep inside of that fence they would grow straight. The straight trees were the boys and girls who attended the Sunday-school and minded what their teacher said; the crooked trees were children who failed to attend, and grew up without any care for the Sunday-school, and when men and women became hard-hearted, without love for the church of God; they fell into bad habits, and then into prisons, and made their parents weep. Collection, for elder, $15; pastor, $7.25."

TEXAS.

G. Norman, Austin: "Elder Madison held our quarterly conference, preached two sermons, and administered the Lord's Supper to about 50 persons. His collection was $14.10. The Manor circuit is growing, despite much opposition."

J. Browley, Lockhart: "We have a hard time to get on at Kyle, but I raised enough from the whites to buy a lot. Miss Ellen Moore gave me $25, and Mrs. T. Morton $10."

R. Weaver, Jacksonville: "My second quarterly conference was held by myself. Three joined us from the C. M. E. Church. Received this year ten, two on probation. Elder's collection $3.45. The work has somewhat increased. The elder delivered a grand lecture on Monday night."

J. L. Smith, Millican: "We had a two weeks' revival; 35 conversions, and 56 additions, by letter 4, by certificate 5. We are making improvement in every way; raising money for a bell and organ. The parsonage is complete and I am comfortably situated, and teaching school."

Lee Reed, Waelder: "Our quarterly conference was held May 12-15. W. H. Davis, of Columbus, in the chair. At night Rev. James Harrold preached for us. On Sunday at 11 a. m. a large and attentive congregation listened, to a sermon from Rev. Davis, of unspeakable value to Methodism in this country. There have been 27 conversions this quarter. My camp-meeting will begin July 14th."

E. Coggswell, Alleyton: "The second quarter was held by the elder. Lord's supper was administered to 90. On May 2 the Sunday-school had a fine pic-nic. Speakers were Rev. G. W. Townsend, of Columbus, J. H. Holden, of Alleyton, and Rev. W. H. Davis, of Columbus. At night there was a grand concert. We have enlarged our church at Alleyton."

An Italian paper tells the story of a man at Leghorn (Livorna), who was cured of consumption by his dogs, after every physician had abandoned hopes of his recovery. Fearing he would die in the night, he would take a very favorite dog to bed with him. Presently the man began to grow stronger, and the dog, which was wont to curl up against his master's breast, took sick of consumption and shortly afterwards died. Another dog was procured for a bedfellow and he too soon died of consumption. Meanwhile the man was almost cured. A third canine martyr however was necessary, and by the time he had succumbed to the pulmonary complaint, his master was as strong in the "bellows" as Samson himself, in which condition he still is reported to remain.

A missionary writes from Ceylon: "It is a noticeable fact that where Christian women are married to heathen husbands, generally the influence in the household is Christian; whereas, when a Christian man takes a heathen wife he usually loses his Christian character, and the influences of the household is on the side of heathenism. —Queenslander.

Bishop Hurst's Address.

(Delivered at Syracuse, N. Y., on the occasion of the death of Bishop Peck.)

The man who has left us has left many who have felt the pressure of his hand and the warmth and sympathy of his great nature. When we think of what he has been doing through all these years, how he has attached himself to public sentiment, how he has influenced the life of the Church, how he engaged every power that he possessed, I think we can all see that the Church that he has left has a larger heart and a stronger hand and a more hopeful view because of the life that he led and the work that he did. Not only has he been an educator but he has also been a writer. I suppose that few men since the founding of the Church have ever looked more keenly into the signs of the times and the generation than he did. He certainly had a subtle something, an intuition, or an educated perception, by which he could look out upon the tide of the times and see the tendency of events. No sooner did he see the need than he sought to put himself in open relation to it. He saw the time was coming when woman should be brought out from the narrow surroundings of her home and made to take a larger share in the work of the Church, and into a broader life. No wonder he wrote the "True Woman." He had an illustration of the idea at home in the companionship of his devoted wife. I remember that while lingering some hours at Beyreut, in Syria, waiting for a steamer, I sauntered into the library of a missionary. In his little book-case containing a couple of dozen volumes, was this same book that our beloved teacher wrote. That preacher there said: "I love that book; it has helped me in my labors." So he saw the need of aid in the great work of the conversion of souls, and he wrote that little book entitled "What must I do to be saved?" Is there a preacher anywhere that knows of a better volume to put into the hand of the penitent or the impenitent? Then, too, he saw the need of a correct conception of our national history. he followed closely from the landing of the Pilgrims in 1820 at Plymouth Rock. So he demonstrated the mystery of God's hand in history. It is a wonder that he wrote the "Great Republic?"—perhaps of all the more popular Christian histories of our country the most widely circulated. And when he saw the greatly increasing need of a higher spiritual life, is it a wonder that he should think that perhaps he could write something to promote holiness of life in the Church? And so he wrote the "Central Idea of Christianity" —a book of the closet and the heart. I don't know that we have in our communion a man who more clearly discerned the needs of the spiritual life or the means of meeting them than the man whose presence we only have as a memory.

Perhaps a personal allusion may be pardoned. My mind goes back from this hour many years over the chasm of a generation, thirty-three years. Away down in the south of Maryland, on the eastern slope of the Chesapeake, when attending a camp-meeting I was told that the president of Dickinson College was to preach on a certain day. Such a sermon was seldom heard in that peninsula. Some one had said "college" to me a few times before this and I had thought of seeking a college education, but this seemed well-nigh impossible. I remember that a kind preacher brought me to the preacher of the afternoon. I told him something about going to college. Said he: "Don't trouble yourself. Go home and wait until the opening of the term and then you take the stage across by York and come there and I will meet you and we will live happily together." And for two years I was a student there under him. When Dr. Collins succeeded him I remained two years; but no tender heart beat more keenly in sympathy with the student than his. The friend of schools from the Atlantic to the Pacific! So I think of him as a man who took a boy by the hand. And ever since the memories of the man have been precious.

He was also of a hopeful spirit. If one wished to find a spirit of the monastic type, one would have to go to another man than Bishop Peck. He belonged to the nineteenth century and lived in the last quarter of it. In every advance of the age he was found standing even with the front line. Every year at the meeting of the Missionary Committee in New York, when others were fearful that the Church would not meet the enlarged demands for money, he always advised the appropriation of the larger sum and then to trust in God for help.

The speaker referred to Bishop Peck's recent visits to the poor colored conferences of the South, and spoke of the affection with which he was remembered by those people. Those people, said the speaker, will weep tears of sorrow when the news of the Bishop's death shall reach them. It would be difficult to find a spirit more helpful than his. Wherever he met a person that needed help, that needed sympathy, he would say the cheering word that helped him on.

Our brother had stood the test of the severe public criticism to which men in his position were subject, for three score years and ten. We turn over every page of his life and there is not a stain anywhere.

Referring to the part which Dr. Peck took in the discussion of the General Conference of 1844, the speaker said: A hero he was in that memorable conference—which did more to decide the destiny of our Church than any other conference ever held—when the issue was whether a bishop should be permitted to hold slaves and hold conferences also. Now if you turn to the report of that conference you will come to a speech made at a most opportune moment by him in whose memory we are gathered here, in which he said words to this effect: "That the Methodist Episcopal Church must break all the bonds that held us to the slave holder." It was one of the most decisive utterances that were spoken in that hour. He was a hero to the last. He lived in uprightness and came down to his grave without an enemy from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

BISHOP SIMPSON'S ADDRESS.

My memory of our departed brother reaches back nearly forty years. We first met at the General Conference to which allusion has been made in 1844, he representing the northern district of New York, and I from Indiana. We commenced an acquaintance which was continued at various intervals until his election to the episcopacy, since which time our connection has been somewhat more intimate. This association, I think, gave me a clear insight into his character. His nature was gentle and affectionate. He was strong in presence, manly in appearance, a man of more than ordinary physical power. His spirit was as gentle and kind as that of a lady, and even in his busy ministry it was sweetly and lovingly manifested in his affection for his mother, to whose influence he attributed his character and success. He always impressed me as having an exceedingly affectionate nature.

He was converted in early life and called into the ministry. As a Christian his experience was exceedingly deep, clear, rich; and there can be no marvel that the close of his life was both peaceful and triumphant. He led in general a Christian life and was a very close communicant with God. As a minister he was remarkable for his power in the pulpit. And this was early noticeable. Remarkable for his fluency of speech, for his forcible utterances, for his faith in God, he had peculiar power over his congregations where his voice rang out strong and yet melodious. His word, accompanied by the power of the spirit, deeply impressed the consciences and hearts of those who heard him. He was not only a popular speaker, but his utterances were marked by clear and positive conviction. There was no doubtful doctrine; he had learned the doctrines of the cross and propounded them with so much eloquence that the hearts of his audiences were greatly moved. And this emblem here this afternoon (pointing to the floral cross) reminds me of the great central doctrine of his life, faith in which is symbolized by this anchor (pointing to a floral anchor). He lived to declare the unsearchable riches of the blessed Redeemer.

As a pastor he was also very faithful. He did not feel that his duty was accomplished when he had simply preached. He visited the people from house to house and he was, as you have heard, the instructor of the young; and his visits were a benediction.

As a Methodist, while he had a liberal and catholic spirit, he was very decided in his convictions. Let us recollect that then the times were troublesome; there was controversy in the councils of the Church, and both in private and public he was the champion of its doctrine and economy. From that time onward it so happened that he and I thought nearly together. We were very closely united, and to-day I would rather sit among these mourners than to stand here to speak; for he does not need words of eulogy from me.

I heard him when he was pastor in Washington and was also with him on the Pacific coast—traveled with him; and wherever he went from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the North to the South, his record was the same, as a strong, popular and experimental preacher, who left his mark on hearts wherever he went. It has pleased God to take him from us at an earlier period than we might have wished. He had lived more than three score years and ten, and yet his being taken away has made me feel lonely. Since the last General Conference he is the third bishop who has fallen. I stood beside the grave of our senior Bishop Scott when he was laid to rest. Bishop Haven died on the Pacific coast, no one of his colleagues being able to be present at his funeral; and we are here this afternoon calling up loving remembrances of our dear Bishop Peck. He and I were not far from one age; he was a few months older than I; and so it makes me feel lonely to think of all the older bishops being gone. I little thought that I should be spared to speak any words of kindness over the remains of any of my colleagues.

This occasion affords two or three lessons: and the first is to these young people. What is is that causes this vast assemblage at so unfavorable a time? What means this gathering of citizens but an acknowledgement of his worth? Looking to his youth I see him as a poor farmer's boy struggling for an education; see him determined to know; see him going out in the ministry when there was little to induce a young man to go; when we had few churches such as we have now. He took almost his life in his hands and went out fearlessly, not knowing where he went, to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Now these older men and women have come here to contribute a tear. This is the lesson that God gives young men—to trust Him and stand for Jesus. Our way may sometimes seem to be mysterious and dark, but in the evening time it shall be light.

Then the Church that he has served—how it has grown! He has been identified with its movements. He was looking for greater triumphs, and I have no doubt if he could speak to us to-day from the heavens his words would be words of cheer and encouragement.

Then, again, in the works around us. This church I had the privilege of speaking in when it was younger than it is now, and these very walls and these very associations speak to me of him. He worked for this church; he gave to this church; he desired to give it perpetuity. To these friends here he confided all its interests and they are left to work for its prosperity.

Furthermore, his heart's life was involved in this University. We all remember his interest in its incipiency and in its progress before he was placed into the position he occupied until his death. You know how he worked, toiled, labored, gave; and now that he has gone, he commits it to you. He will make no more speeches for you; but his past record speaks, and that record appeals to you to carry out that great work to which his life was devoted.

Last of all comes the lesson teaching us to be ready. He is gone; we are going. How soon we know not. We are walking here just on the verge of the grave. Many great men in the Church and in the State have fallen so suddenly of late that the voice of God seems to speak to us: "Be ye also ready." His surviving widow told me to-day that just before he drew his last breath she went to give him several spoonsful of nourishment, and then bending over and kissing him said, "Is Jesus present?" He looked up and smiled: "Yes, Jesus is present." These were the last words she ever heard him utter. Jesus is present! Jesus is present! He can make a dying bed feel soft as downy pillows are. Jesus was present with him until the last moment, and I believe he is present with Jesus this afternoon.

Sunday-School Institute.

MR. EDITOR:—Allow me to state a few facts in behalf of our Sunday-School Institute held in Pleasant Grove M. E. Church, commencing May 4, at 7:30 p. m. Promptly at that hour all were on hand ready to hear and learn. The meeting was opened by reading and prayer by the pastor; after which J. H. Boddie, Sunday-school superintendent, led the choir.

The Institute was organized by electing the following secretaries: F. H. Alexander, of the institute, and J. R. Alexander, reporter to the SOUTHWESTERN.

After taking a collection to bear the expenses of the Institute, the programme was commenced.

J. H. Boddie, S. S. superintendent—"What kind of Persons should S. S. Officers be?" The speaker mastered his subject well.

Miss Mary Pullen—"The Eighth Commandment: What it Teaches." She displayed a good knowledge of the subject.

J. R. Alexander—"What should be the Qualifications of an S. S. Teacher?" The speaker showed that a teacher should be of the best material to lead others.

Miss Hattie M. Moore, a girl five years of age—"The Child's Prayer."

Mr. Joseph Sharp—"Is it Right for a Man to Abuse his Wife?" The speaker proved that it was inhuman.

Mr. Jacob Cobb—"Should Little Children Love One Another?" This was the teaching of the Bible.

Rev. J. P. Granberry—"Who was Melchizedek?"

Dr. L. D. Key—"The Fourth Commandment: What Does it Teach?" This was instructive.

Miss Marianna Flowers—"Is it Right for Girls to Dip Snuff?" The speaker proved it to be a very bad habit.

Mr. Raymond Sharp—"Should Any Use Tobacco?"

Mrs. Eliz'beth Robinson—"Should Parents Believe Everything their Children Say?"

Mr. Burton Hay—"What the Second Commandment Teaches."

Miss Rosa Flower—"What Does the Fifth Commandment Teach?" The speaker displayed judgment on this subject.

Miss Bettie Cobb—"Should the Good Things be Used in the Sabbath-School?" The little speaker declared them beneficent.

Miss Mary Saddler—"How Many Gods Are There?"

Miss Mary Morehead—"What was the First Sin?"

Mr. Abraham Robinson—"What is Adoption?"

Miss Helen Saddler—"The Ninth Commandment: What it Teaches?"

Mr. D. Borum—"Should All Persons Attend Sabbath-School?"

Mrs. Dilla Robinson—"How Many Souls Does the Bible speak of?"

Miss Ella Donelson—"How Should S. S. Officers Dress?"

Miss Elizab'th Granberry—"What Does the Lord's Prayer Teach?"

Mr. Daniel Donelson—"Should Old People attend Sunday-school?"

Miss Mollie Granberry—"How Many James's Does the Bible speak of?"

Mr. Richard Pullen—"Church Manners."

Mr. H. C. Morehead—"The Sixth Commandment, and What it Teaches?"

Mr. Allen Pullen—"The First Commandment, and What it Teaches?"

Miss R. S. Donelson—"Sunday-school Manners."

Miss Viola Granberry—"The First Balm."

Mrs. M. J. Morehead—"How Many Ananias' are There?"

Miss Laura Crenshaw—"The Seventh Commandment."

Mr. S. J. Morehead—"Should a Man Love More than One Loving Wife at one time?"

Mrs. A. D. Key—"How Should Parents Raise their Children?"

Mrs. F. H. Alexander—"How Should a Sunday-school Teacher Keep the Attention of the Children?"

On Sunday, May 6, at 11 a. m., the Institute closed. It was a great success. The attendance was good and a great many added to the Sunday-school.

Letter From Forest City.

DEAR EDITOR—As I read the SOUTHWESTERN I seldom see anything from the brethren of Arkansas. I presume they are working hard and saying little about it. I received several letters from my friends in Tennessee and Mississippi asking me about our work here in Arksas. Our work in this part of the State is strictly a mission field. When we arrived here last winter we found three or four brethren laboring to build a church under the direction of I. G. Pollard, our beloved presiding elder. The work was immediately put into my charge, and by Dec. 25th we were able to sing praises to the Lord in our new church. Rent being very high I told my brethren we must build a parsonage, and we did. Our membership is quite small but God is with us. Just think how God has prospered us. The first of last December we hadn't a place to worship our God. Now we have a neat little church 30x40 and a cosy little parsonage of three rooms, six or eight members and a Sabbath school numbering 65, a preparatory school to the Philander Smith College, Little Rock, numbering 63. Mrs. Johnson has organized a reading circle for the young people with grand success. As I am principal of our preparatory school I would like to say something about our school work, but I am afraid my letter will be too long. I will say something in my next letter about it.

There is a grand future for our Church and school in this part of Arkansas. We are above high water mark. Emigration is flowing in from the older States, and everything seems to be in our favor. Brother B. McCain has been sick but is now able to resume his work. He says his Sabbath school is booming. Our enterprising presiding elder, I. G. Pollard, tells us that all the circuits are looking up. Brethren pray for us that God may lead us on to victory.

Letter From Fayetteville.

DEAR EDITOR.—Fayettville is alive, and not a few have been converted; 16 souls have been brought from darkness to light through the preaching of the gospel of Christ. I found this people without any place to worship in, or to hold the Sunday school. On the first days in April we began to work to raise money for the purpose of building our church, after plan No. 1, B. In a short while $150 were raised in cash, the building was commenced. We were not able to let it on a contract, but took it by the day, so in one month from the day we began to build, we worshiped in the new church. On April 29th we walked right into it. Sunday morning was a day of much wondering, caused by the Sunday school and the members in attendance. It was thought that our chance was very doubtful for a good Sunday school at this place. Our being out of doors was the cause of these misgivings. The Sunday school had gone away like a swarm of bees from their hive and settled in the Congregational Church. Now what to do they did not know, so in every street and corner servants were sent to invite them to come, and on Sunday they were first to enter the new church. The number of scholars on the Roll was over a hundred then, and is still increasing. These are the bees which left their hives. We sang "Hold the fort," and at eleven o'clock followed preaching and amens. A liberal collection followed amounting to $32.65. Pray for us at Fayetteville. We will have the new church dedicated at the meeting of the second quarterly conference. We hope to have a good time.

New Orleans University.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the New Orleans University has been instructed by the Board to publicly recognize, through the columns of four church paper, the hearty support which the University has received from the Louisiana annual conference of the M. E. Church, and to return their thanks for the same.

The University was never so much upon the hearts of our people as at present. The fact that over two thousand dollars were given during the year 1882 by the Louisiana annual conference, towards the erection of a new building, and nearly six thousand dollars pledged for the year 1883, speaks for itself. For this liberal support the President and officers of the University return their thanks.

If the University keeps pace with our rapidly growing conference, it is necessary to enlarge our buildings immediately. They are now inadequate to accommodate our students. Brethren of the conference and paronizing territory: this work is yours. Will you not go to work immediately and raise sufficient means to push forward this building enterprise? Brethren in the ministry: do not suppose for a moment that by pushing this cause you will be less likely to get your other benevolent collections. If you can get your people interested enough in this good work to carry it forward, they will have to push the other benevolent collections.

J. G. VAUGHAN.
Chairman of Committee.

Register Bruce, ex-United States Senator from Mississippi, protests against being called a "colored" man, and adds: "I am a Negro, and am proud of my race, and I like the name, for it is descriptive and expressive, and it carries with it the claim to a fatherland; while the word 'colored' is an apologetic expression, and its use by one who belongs to a race that is older than history, is to my mind an indication that he is ashamed of his lineage, and unworthy of the respect and esteem of either the race from which he sprang the or other races with whom he must compete in the battles of life."

Hope is the sun, which, as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.

Young Folks' Corner.

God Sees Us.

"God sees us," little Robbie mused,
Repeating thoughtfully
The verse which on his lesson page
That morning chanced to be:
"God sees us every day and hour;
He knows whate'er we do,
Not only when our deeds are good,
But when we're naughty, too.
"Oh, yes, I know, and when I'm good,
I'm glad he sees me, too;
But, oh, I'm sorry God must know
Each naughty thing I do;
I'm sure I want to please him, but
I'ts very hard to be
At every time the kind of boy
The good God likes to see."
Here Robbie paused; a moment sad,
Then suddenly he cried
Right joyfully, "There is a way
I never yet have tried:
When I am going to do wrong,
"God sees me,' I will say;
I'm sure it's just the plan to try,
And I'll begin to-day."
Oh, think "God sees me," children all,
And strive right hard to be Always the kind of little folks
The good God loves to see!
Such habit formed in early years,
With patience will grow strong,
And often, in the future days,
Keep you from doing wrong.

What Ailed Oliver?

"Get up, little boy! You are lying in bed too long; breakfast will soon be ready. Get up, get up, or I shall throw this pillow at you!"

That is what sister Charlotte said to Oliver Reed one frosty morning in November. He was a good little fellow; but he had one fault: he was too fond of lying in bed in the morning.

"Don't throw the pillow at me!" cried Oliver; "I'll get up in five minutes."

"If you would be 'healthy, wealthy and wise,' you must rise early, little boy" said Charlotte.

When Oliver came down to the breakfast-table, his father said, "How is this, Oliver? You are late again."

Oliver hung his head, and Charlotte said: "I woke him in good time, father; but he went off to sleep again the minute I left the room, though he promised to be up in five minutes."

"I went to sleep and forgot all about it," said Oliver.

"Come here, my boy, and let me feel your pulse," said his father. "I should not wonder if Oliver were suffering from a disease which is very common."

Oliver gave his hand to his father, who after feeling his pulse, said: "Yes; it is as I thought. Poor Oliver has Slack's disease. Take him up to bed again. Keep his breakfast warm by the fire; and when he feels strong enough, he can eat it. He may stay at home from school to-day."

The little boy wondered what Slack's disease could be; but he went upstairs with his sister, and was put to bed. He could not sleep, however. He heard children playing out of doors, he heard Ponto barking, and Tommy, the canary bird, sing a cherry song.

Then Oliver called to his sister, and said, "Charlotte, what is Slack's disease? Is it dangerous?"

"I rather think not," said Charlotte. "You dear little simpleton, don't you know what father meant? He meant you were troubled with laziness—a sad complaint."

Oliver saw that a trick had been played on him. He jumped out of bed, dressed, and ate his breakfast, and ran off to school, where he arrived just in time.

Since that day Oliver has been the first up in the house. He is no longer troubled with Slack's disease, and remembers that "an idle soul shall suffer hunger" (Prov. xix. 15).—Children's Friend.

A Close Argument

"Do you not believe," said a father to his patriotic son, that the preaching of divine truth is the main safe-guard of your country?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Why then do you not attempt to save your country in this way?"

"Because I am not pious."

"But you ought to be pious."

"I know that, but I am not; and while I am not, I ought not to enter a theological school."

"What profession, then, will you enter?"

"That of the law."

"But you have no right to study law while you are not pious."

"That of medicine, then."

"But you have no right to study medicine while you are not pious."

"Then I will be a merchant."

"But you have no right to be a merchant, nor a mechanic, nor a farmer, while you are not pious."

"What then shall I do?"

"You have no right to do anything while you are not pious."

"Then I will do nothing."

"But you have no right to do nothing while you are not pious. Except a man be born again he is not authorized to take one step in any direction, nor on any spot is he authorized to stand still. You must be born again."

Race and color are elements altogether eliminated from citizenship and the Negro should be the last to attempt to restore them. He cannot successfully compete for place on that basis any more than a German or a Welshman can. The convention must recognize this. Fred Douglass and his fellow leaders must recognize it, or the cause of their race will be turned backward to encounter again the elements and influences which hitherto have been its chief obstructions.—Philadelphia Press, Rep.

Our brother in red is as much our brother as our brother in black, and while we build our beautiful churches all over their old hunting grounds, let us save something to send the Gospel and give Christian education to those who remain of this fast-fading race. Some who have accepted Christ present noble examples of Christian maturity and activity.—Western.

Æsthetic is the science of the beautiful. The meed of merit for promoting persons æsthetics is due to J. C. Ayer & Co whose incomparable Hair Vigor is a universal beautifier of the hair. Harmless, effective, agreeable, it has taken rank among the indispensable articles of the toilet. To beauty locks it gives luxuriance; and withered hairs it clothes with the hue of youth.

The archbishop of Canterbury, in his speech at the anniversary of the Church of England Temperance Society, said it had been "found that wherever temperance work was most active the means of grace were best attended." He "trusted that all members of the Church of England would do their duty in furthering the temperance movement."

"Dr. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills cured me of neuralgia." Mrs. D. C. Hoppen, Clay Bank, Va.

General Robert C. Schenck, though a lover of good living, had the fortitude, so it is said, to adhere to a diet solely of milk and tomatoes for a year. His physician prescribed it as the only cure for his malady—Bright's disease. Now the General is well.

Consumption Cured.

Decoration day, May 30, was observed in all parts of the country. The nation turned its thoughts for one day more intensely than upon others, to the cause for which its heroes died. In New Orleans, the Mower Post of the G. A. R. made due preparation for imposing ceremonies at Chalmette cemetery, but inclement weather interfered with out-door exercises. The graves were strewn with flowers. On board the steamer exercises were held, consisting of prayer by Rev. J. G Vaughan, addresses and reception of floral tributes from representatives of Confederate veteran associations, and an oration by Gen. W. L. McMillen.

It is only ten years ago that the edicts against Christianity were removed by the Japanese Government. In the annual report of the Evangelical Alliance for Japan, for the year 1882, just published, there is given a summary of progress and the present condtion of missionary work in the Empire. The following items are of special interest: There are 145 missionaries, 93 active churches with 4,987 members; 895 converts were baptized during the year 1882; there are 49 ordained preachers, 100 assistants, and 11 theological students; there are 63 secular schools with 2,546 scholars, 109 Sunday schools with 4,134 scholars. The 93 native churches contributed for various benevolent objects $7,540.30.

The Vindicator says: "The colored people of Atlanta own a half million in real estate, and in the State almost ten millions. This is a good showing, but not as good as might be. If the thousands that are annually spent in the court houses, on excursion trains were put in real estate the amount would exceed by millions the amount above mentioned. We wish our people to accumulate wealth and educate their children; for wealth and intelligence are the most potent means by which a people or individual can secure recognition of rights. Never is a man respected and appreciated so highly as when he has land and money."

This is sensible. Keep out of the court houses, frown down excursions, generally gotten up by sharpers and schemers who are too lazy to work, and too proud to beg, and hope to make a living by fleecing unwary sheep. Keep out of grog-shops; practice and preach temperance; exercise economy; build up character, and educate your children and the future is safe and bright. Build upon the touchstone of power, viz: education, character and wealth.

Brought by a Smile.

Years ago we read of a London preacher who said to a brother clergyman one Monday, "I received seven persons into my church yesterday and they were all brought in by a smile." "Brought in by a smile!" said the astonished listener." "What do you mean?" "I will explain. Several months ago as I passed a certain house on my way to church I saw in the arms of its nurse a beautiful babe. As it seemed to fix its eyes on me I smiled and the child returned the smile. The next Sabbath the babe was again at the window and it smiled down on me; I threw the prattler a kiss. Instantly its little hands were extended and it threw a kiss back to me. And so it came to pass I learned to watch for the baby, and I soon saw that the nurse was not alone. Other members of the family were at the window to see the man who had always a smile for the household pet. One Sabbath as I passed two children stood by the window beside the babe. The father and mother had said to them, 'We think that the man who always smiles at the babe is a minister. Now you get ready and when he passes you follow him and see where he preaches.' The children were willing to follow the suggestion, and as I passed the door opened and they came out, following along behind until I entered the church, where they followed, and seats were given them. They listened to the sermon, and when they reached their home they said to their parents, 'He is a minister, and we have found his church and heard him speak.' The next Sabbath the parents were there—they were pleased and brought in others, and God blessed to them my ministry, and seven were led to give their hearts to Jesus—and all brought by that smile.'"

We look upon the minister as a man, but he is a rejoicing, smiling man. His name is written in heaven; his sins are passed and hidden. The life of God is in his soul, and the peace which passeth all understanding is his. The cross allures and charms his soul from day to day. Perhaps all ministers cannot be great preachers; but he is a good-for-nothing fellow who cannot give a smile and a kind word; these the Savior makes use of as the instruments to bring men to the house of the Lord and to the kingdom of God.

The Fifteenth Annual Report of the Freedmen's Aid Society.

To Bishop Clark was entrusted the work of establishing the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South at the close of the war. He soon became satisfied that it was impossible to do this with any degree of permanent success without denominational schools and teachers. He also saw that persons raised and educated in the South would understand the peculiarities and prejudices of the people, and could adapt themselves to this mode of life and style of thought. His theory of success in the South was to educate the young people and through them accomplish the work he really felt the church was called on to do. After extensive correspondence with prominent persons in the church and State and frequent consultation, it was decided that the time had come to form a society under our control to supplement our work in the South. A call was issued—a few unselfish spirits met in convention at Trinity Church, at Cincinnati, Ohio, and after prayer and mature deliberation the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized, and the church entered at once upon the prosecution of one of the noblest forms of Christian work ever committed to any human or divine agency. Sentimental and rose-colored views of social equality, miscegenation or political control formed no part of their plans; they sought simply the moral and religious welfare of the people by means of a Christian education. The report before us gives a brief statement of the work done, amount of money raised, and the purposes for which it has been expended. It shows for the colored people six chartered institutions, four schools of theology, one medical college, and fourteen institutions not chartered. The total number of teachers is 95, and 3,500 have been enrolled during the past year. For our white people there are three chartered institutions and twelve seminaries, with 75 teachers and 2,300 pupils enrolled. The society has collected and disbursed during the past year $110,745.66, and during the fifteen years of its history, $1,098,040.64. It has now invested over $350,000 in permanent school property. The work of the past year differs but little from the preceding ones, with this exception: The last general conference committed (we think unwisely) to the Freedmen's Aid Society the supervision of all our educational work in the South, and instructed the managers of that society to aid schools for whites all it could without embarrassment to the schools for freedmen. It also instructed "our pastors in presenting the claims of the society to the church to remind our people that a portion of the appropriations of the society will be made for the education of the white population connected with our church in the Southern States; but not to the embarrassment of the work among the people of color." Evidently it was the purpose of the church that there should be an enlargement of our educational work in the South through the Freedmen's Aid Society.

Just here arises this question: Have not the board of managers transcended their instructions? Has not the investment of money in real estate and buildings for the education of the white people of the South embarrassed and hindered in the work of education among the colored people? To this question there can be but one answer. Look at the report before us. At Austin, Texas, five and a half acres of ground overlooking the city, but no buildings, and we are accomplishing nothing, just waiting for some man to come who has means to give a name to the contemplated institution. At Houston, Texas, a great railroad centre, and the centre of an immense colored population, a property worth $10.000 was secured for $7,500 cash. The grounds are beautiful and ample for the erection of suitable buildings. The school was opened last fall in the mansion connected with the estate. But Bro. Campbell, an experienced and successful teacher, has been cramped and hindered in his work for the want of room.

At New Orleans, a city of over 220,000 inhabitants, and over 60,000 colored population, the great political and commercial centre of the Southwest, we have for our school one of the most beautiful sites in the city, but our buildings are in no way adequate to meet the necessities of the case, and many of our young people are going to other denominational schools, merely because they have finer buildings and better accommodations.

The LaTeche Seminary, at Baldwin, La., is included among the Freedmen's Aid Schools, and is grandly situated in the midst of an immense colored population, in the garden of Louisiana, but has nothing like suitable buildings—the students meeting part in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and part in an unfinished room of what was once an orphans home. This is the LaTeche Seminary; and yet, with these disadvantages, it has over 200 students enrolled. With anything like adequate buildings it is no exaggeration to say the numbers would be more than doubled.

In 1860 there were in Louisiana over 250,000 colored persons who were totally without books, and were forbidden by law to read. After the war this frightful mass of illiteracy was mostly looking to us for the means of education. That was our golden opportunity; but now, humiliating as it is, we must recognize the fact that most of our young people seeking the benefits of a higher education have been compelled to go to other institutions merely for the want of accommodations of our own. We believe that the New Orleans University has special claims upon the Church for better accommodations for the large number of students that would resort to it for instruction. Romanism is intrenched in Louisiana as in no other State, and our schools should furnish every facility in preparing our ministers to meet this wily foe. No institution in Louisiana has a more efficient and devoted corps of instructors than the New Orleans University, and none so poor accommodations for its students. We have made this special reference to Austin, Houston, LaTeche and New Orleans, because we know their needs and know them to be embarrassed for the want of funds. We believe that we have reached a crisis in our educational work in the South. That a turning aside from or the neglect of duty to-day will furnish regret for a century. We are facing the sunrise of a better day. No people in the South are increasing in numbers, wealth intelligence and piety as the colored people. It is no time to abate in efforts for their education; they aspire to great things in wealth, politics, culture and religion. They do not tend to Romanism or liberalism, instinctively they are Protestants nd orthodox in faith, and, when educated, orderly in conduct.

We do not think that the Freedmens Aid Society has reached the point where it can safely attempt any other work than that which called it into being. We believe that it should bend all its energies in this one direction, and that in so doing it will secure the greatest good to both our colored and white members in the South. Not that we would have our white members neglected, our heart beats quick and warm towards them. We appreciate their need. In 1870 there were in this country 2,850,911 white persons ten years old and over, who could not read and write, in 1880, 3,019,080, an increase in ten years of 167,169. The church cannot hesitate here; she must make provision not only for the education of her ministers and teachers but for all of our people who are seeking the benefits of a higher education. Her honor, good faith and self-preservation demand this, but not through the agency of the Freedmens Aid Society, "to the embarrasment of the work among the people of color." The mission of this society is peculiar, its name is indicative, incidentally it may help in other work, but its chief glory is to foster the schools for the colored members of the church. But the Report shows that while it has under its care twenty-five for the colored people, (and all there is to one of these is "five acres and a half of ground" said to be "overlooking the city" of Austin, Texas, while the buildings of the New Orleans University are justly described as "old and inconvenient dwellings of little value,") it has fifteen for the white people.

We regard this Society as intimately related to the prosperity and permanance of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South. Few agencies have done more towards the education and elevation of the colored people, but its work is not done So far as the facilities for education are concerned the white people have a great advantage over the colored. There is not an institution of learning in all the South from which white pupils are excluded, while there are but few that are open to the colored. The special work of the Freedmens Aid Society is not finished. It need not turn aside from its original calling to find work to do.

How the heart drifts away from Jesus? When you were converted you saw very vividly your need of Christ. Your need of Christ is as deep as ever. Every stage of your progress must be by a living faith in him. Do you feel your need as you did at conversion?

Editorial Correspondence.

The city of Galveston is on an island, separated from the main land by a sheet of water about two miles in width and eighteen in length, fordable in many places by horses and cattle, and hardly anywhere exceeding six feet in depth. According to the estimate made by Captain H. B. Ripley the harbor proper will furnish secure anchorage for 380 deep draft vessels. Originally this island was a track less plain, but now it is the chief port and commercial city of the State, and most of its streets are marked by a luxuriant growth of the evergreen and bright bloomed oleander. Many of the private residences are surrounded with groves of the orange, lemon and fig trees, and in some instances by the stately oaks, the pride and joy of every Texan. The city is laid out in squares, and contains many substantial blocks of business houses, and imposing churches and other public buildings, with a large number of costly and tasteful residences. The present population is estimated by the Galveston News to be over 27,000. The increase of the city in population for two or three decades has been as follows: In 1860 the population was 6,537; in 1870, 13,893; in 8881, by a census taken under the direction of the Galveston News, 27,420; this census is believed to be accurate and thorough. The Methodist Episcopal Church has three ministers stationed in this city. Rev. C. C. Minnegan is on his second year at St. Paul. This is one of the strongost appointments in the Texas Conference. and Bro. Minnegan is now doing what some thought ought to have been done years ago, namely, erecting a new church which, when completed, will be next to Trinity, Houston. the best in the Conference. It is now nicely enclosed at a cost of $2,400, and thus far all bills are paid. The Church Extension Society has aided by loan and donation in the sum of $1000. Rev. G. W. Smith is upon his second year at the Tabernacle. When Bro. Smith entered upon his work he found a church in process of erection upon which it was said $4000 had been expended. It is our opinion that the architect who gave the trustees that plan should be prosecuted and published to the world as a fraud. There is nothing in taste about it. But while the house in its present appearance has but little that is pleasant to look upon, to allow it to remain as it is is sure death. We think that the better way is to get a good architect and modernize the plan so far as possible, and move on and complete the house, trusting in the Lord. The Sunday-school, under the superintendency of Mrs. Richards, is one of the best we have seen. Bro. Smith believes that his people need to know all sorts of truth, all sorts of facts suited to their intellectual and moral improvement. He thinks that a religious newspaper is an agency of light; he likes the SOUTHWESTERN because of its manly and Christian independence, seeking the good of the whole, and the whole good; because it preaches when and where he cannot, and is his mutual help. Rev. E. O. McIntire is on his first year and is opening up a new work, and from all that we could learn should judge was having a wonderful degree of success. He has organized a Board of Trustees and they have purchased a property on the corner of Broadway and 22d streets, costing $4,000. The lot is 43x120, the building upon it is 40x80 and is to be remodeled, giving a lecture room 18x40 and parlor 18x40, the main audience room 40x50, all improvements costing $1000. The building when complete will present a very pleasant and attractive appearance, while a more desirable location could hardly be secured. We congratulate our brethren in Galveston on this forward movement. Methodism in Texas needs a few propagandista who have that degree of grace as the favorite expression goes, when men "enjoy religion." It is only speaking the truth to say that Bro. McIntire seems to be the right man in the right place. We were glad to see that these three ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church were not moving in Indian file but abreast. Heaven grant that it may always be thus. To us the greeting of friends of former years has been pleasant, a few have disappeared from among the living, and other heads are whitening, and we trust their hearts are ripening for the great harvest. But some remain who are holding on to Christ, and as we sat and talked of the glories and triumphs of other days, our hearts were filled with doxologies. We were gratified at the marks of progress in every direction; Church building, church repairing and the erection of parsonages are signs of substantial prosperity. The generation of old shabby churches is fast disappearing. Bells are taking the place of tin horns. The drift is toward a higher and a better form of civilization. Let God be thanked.

C.

Last week we received a letter from a member of our church in Texas, asking the price of the SOUTHWESTERN, saying "our preacher has not had time to refer to it once this year." We know of one church in the Texas conference to which there is sent each week over fifty copies of the SOUTHWESTERN; and at the last conference the preacher settled for each subscriber. This we desire to say, There is not a more enterprising church, nor a harder working, or more successful minister in the Texas conference than that man. The minister who fails to press the claims of his church paper, stands in his own light. The SOUTHWESTERN will preach when and where he cannot.

W. B. Pullam, presiding elder of Huntsville, Texas, district, sends some subscribers and says, "I have the promise of 20 more at another place."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. T. Abbott, Rosedale: "In a protracted meeting 42 joined the the church, 15 on probation At Musson Station we have no church, as we had no congregation before now. There is a fine Sunday-school of 59 scholars. There are between 300 and 400 inhabitants, and nearly all colored. They own homes of their own. William Harris has a large store, and is also postmaster. All are doing well. We need a church there very bad."

E. Clark, Shady Grove: "The presiding elder could not be present on account of sickness, and I held the quarterly meeting. Stewards and leaders made good reports Collection for pastor $15. Sabbath. schools show a fair increase, with 75 scholars. Received on probation 19, in full 5, converted 1."

MISSISSIPPI.

D. Goodwin, Benton· "Wesley Chapel, at Benton, is to be dedicated July 1. It is to be one of the finest frame churches in the State. We have averaged $125 per month from February to May."

J. C. Skinner, Roebuck: "Presiding Elder Barney was with us, and brethren came from every church, save one, and met him with good reports. Two loving sermons were preached. Collection $13.45."

TEXAS.

J. Browley, San Marcos: "The presiding elder visited us, preached a powerful sermon, and administered sacrament to 37. Among our visitors was the pasor of the A. M. E. Church."

ARKANSAS.

H. H. McAllister, Centre Point: "The work is growing grandly. It lies in four counties. I do a great deal of riding each week on horseback. This is a fine country. Several colored men are worth three and a half thousands."

TENNESSEE.

J. A. C. Wade: "At Friends Hill, May 13th, I preached to a large congregation. We were compelled to accommodate them in a grove, and had a nice time. There was present James England, who, before coming to church, had drank his last dram. He mounted his horse, and in his haste came near running over some of the people. About three-fourths of a mile from the church he overtook Riley Green, against whom he had an old grudge. After a few rash words, Green shot England below his left lung with a pistol shot. Just before death he told brother Jordan Smith, "How strange it is that a man will bring judgment upon himself." This is the second shooting since Christmas caused by whiskey. Brethren, please help us to buy a church in this wicked place. Send your gifts to Petersburg, Tennessee. I will acknowledge amounts received in the ADVOCATE."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

From Argenta District.

DEAR EDITOR:—I suppose your many readers would like to hear something from our work in these parts. I have just closed up my first round for this year on the Argenta District, Little Rock Conference. I started out on my year's work soon after Conference. I have had some difficulties to meet. Some of my preachers were late getting to their work, but I am thankful to say that not one of the eleven brethren appointed to work on my district has failed to go to his work. The year has opened up hopefully. We have more than a hundred and fifty accessions to the Church, and quite a large number of conversions this quarter. I went to Fayetteville in a few weeks after Conference. The pastor had not got to his work but the first quarterly meeting was held in his absence, and was protracted two weeks. By this time Bro. W. R. R. Duncan, the pastor, with his family, arrived. The work at this place had run down considerably. We had no church of our own. Our people there had been using a school house which belonged to the American Missionary society. Some time last summer they turned us out of the house, and our people wandered around for six months without a place to worship in. The Society and Sunday-school got scattered considerably. But the two weeks meeting referred to above brought things together again. The Church Extension Society had donated $250 last year to help us build a church there on condition that the trustees make a trust bond and mortgage to the Society. This had not been done. The trustees did not like to go into this because they did not understand it. But just as soon as I explained the matter to them the papers were fixed up and sent on to Dr. Kynett, and forth came the $250, and the pastor and his faithful people went to work and in less than six months they went into their new church to worship. So our work at this place is alive. We expect to dedicate the church there on the third Sunday in June. The Hinesville Circuit: the people on this work have been scattered. The white people about Hinesville, a little town where we had a about 25 members, fell upon the colored people in that part of the country and tried to kill and drive them out of there, but the whites did not kill any of the colored; one of the colored brothers of our Church heard that the whites were coming to his house on a certain night to kill him, and he prepared himself, and when they came the good brother emptied his gun into one of the white brothers, and his white friends had to take up a few moments in taking care of their fallen brother and see that he was buried, for the colored brother had killed him dead. Then the colored people all left that part and went to Kansas. So this work is not doing much.

Van Buren charge is in very good condition. We are trying to build a parsonage there this year. The Fort Smith work bids fair to make good progress this year. The faithful pastor has gathered in quite a good membership already, and is trying to build a church at Alma, a little town on the Little Rock & Fort Smith railroad.

Our Morrilton Circuit is progressing well. It is a new work just organized at our last Conference. We have gathered in about 70 members of our Church who came to this State from other States. We want to build two or three churches on this work this year. The pastor, Bro. Wm. Pope, is sparing no pains to build up a good work.

The Conway Circuit is doing well, though the pastor was late getting to his work. The people are very proud of their pastor. Bro. A. L. Richardson is in charge of this work. He is a very active young man, and I think he will make the work move up this year.

The Argenta Circuit started off well, but the pastor has been away from his work for a month or more, and I can not say much for this work.

The Little Rock Circuit is doing well under the pastorate of Bro. J. D. Johnson. Bro. Johnson has been attending Philander Smith College, but he has kept up his regular appointments. His work is progressing nicely.

The Swet Home work is doing well also. Bro. R. Boone has just within the last three weeks got to work. but the work is moving along nicely.

The Newport Circuit, under the faithful charge of Bro. U. S. Kitchens, is in a prosperous condition.

Jacksonport station, under the pastorate of Bro. A. J. Phillips, is moving along grandly. Bro. Phillips has had several conversions and accessions to the Church this quarter.

Our Batesville work is doing splendidly this year under the charge of Bro. G. W. Taylor, This work was without a pastor last year two-thirds of the year, and, of course, was not in good condition, but brother Taylor is redeeming the work from its cold state. Our work on the district, as a whole, is doing well. We are trying to build several new churches this year. We hope to do a better work in every way this year than we have ever been known to do.

Yours, respectfully,

G. W. SAMS,

Morrilton, Ark., May 29, 1883.

The Chautauquan for June continues papers on Scandinavian and Russian history, and touches upon numerous modern and scholarly topics. This bright publication should be in the hands of students everywhere. It is published at Meadville, Pa., at $1.50 per year.

The June number of the North American Review opens with an article by Joseph Nimmo, Jr., Chief of the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, on "American Manufacturing Interests', in which is given a sketch of the rise and progress of manufactures in the United States, together with a very effective presentation of their present condition, and of the agency of tariff legislation in promoting diversified industries and encouraging the inventive genius of the people. An article by the Hon. Wm. M. Springer, on "Incidental Taxaation", is an argument for Free Trade. D. C. Gilman, President of Johns Hopkins University, writes of the "Present Aspects of College Training," as effected by the increase of wealth and luxury, the development of natural science, and the influence of a larger religious liberty. Edward Self presents some weighty considerations on the 'Abuse of Citizenship,' as exhibited in the machinations of the dynamitists against a friendly power, in disregard of the obligations of American neutrality. Prof. Isaac L Rice criticises some of "Herbert Spencer's "Facts and Inferences" in social and political science, and Christine Nilsson contributes "A Few Words about Public Singing." Finally, there is a symposium on "The Moral Influence of the Drama" the participants being, on one side, the Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckl, an opponent of the stage, and on the other, Jno. Gilbert, the actor; A. M. Palmer, theatrical manager; and William Winter, dramatic critic. 50 cents a number; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York.

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

MRS. WILLIAM DOWNES, of Uxbridge, Mass., writes on March 15, 1883, as follows:—

"During the past three years I have been a great sufferer from a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the most experienced doctors, as I could not obtain permanent relief by their treatment and prescriptions; and I have also tried many so-called cures in the medicine line, but could get no relief. The pains, aches, and weakness increased so rapidly and constantly that I was so reduced in strength as to be unable to leave the bed, and the doctors informed me that there was no hope of a recovery. In this exhausted and discouraged condition a dear friend persuaded me to use Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it only three days I commenced to get better, and to my great joy and delight I have continued to improve constantly by its use, until now, after having taken the remedy only a few weeks, I am able to be about my house again, and am now doing my housework. My lame back is cured, the severe pains have disappeared, and I am now in better health than for many years, and beg this privilege of gladly recommending Hunt's Remedy to all who are affected with any disease of the kidneys or liver; and I also highly recommend it for the attack of sick headache. My husband also has experienced a very great benefit to his health by the use of this most valuable medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

"OUR FLAG IS STILL THERE."

Mr. S. B. Longfellow, Augusta, Me., east side river, writes under date of April 15, 1883:

"To whom it may concern: This may certify that two years ago I was very badly afflicted with kidney and urinary difficulties, which extended through the system and laid me up for weeks so that I could do no work. I had the most skilful physician in town, who gave me no assistance. Hearing of Hunt's remedy, I got a bottle, and half of it cured me intirely, so that I have been well ever since. The other half I gave to a neighbor who was afflicted much as I was, and it restored him to health. I can truly say that Hunt's remedy has been of great and inexpressible worth to me."

Li Hung Chang, will take command of the Chinese troops in provinces bordering on Tonquin.

They have a nice lot of Christians in British Columbia. A parcel of white hoodlums recently attacked a Chinese settlement at night, after the manner of Apaches, killed and wounded the surprised Chinamen and set fire to their huts. But worse remains. When the Chinese wounded were carried to the nearest town the white physicians refused to attend them, and the coroner could get no jurymen with enough sense of justice to examine into the affair. A nice lot of "white people they have up there!—N. Y. Herald.

Mr. Spurgeon and Bob.

The Rev. Mr. Morgan, of New York, was sitting on a bench one day beside Mr. Spurgeon at the latter's orphanage in London. A little fellow not a yard high came up and said, "Mis'r Surg'n may I sit on dis seat?" "Certainly, Bob," said Mr. Spurgeon, lifting him up. He meditated a long time, and then said, "Mis'r Surg'n, s'posing there was an orfuin 'sylum an' a hunnerd orfins in it, an' all the orfins had uncles and anties to bring 'em cakes an' apples 'cept one orfin dat hadn't no one—oughtn' somebody give dat orfin sixpence?" "I think so, Bob; but why?" "'Cans I'm him?" said Bob; and he got his sixpence.

The Housekeeper.

SOUTHERN BISCUIT.—Two cups of self-rising flour, one spoonful of lard; mix with warm milk; knead into soft dough, and roll; cut with biscuit-cutter and prick each with a straw. Cook in a hot oven ten minutes.

CORN BREAD.—Take two quarts of milk, five eggs, half ounce of salt, one teaspoonful of saleratus, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, two ounces of butter and Indian meal sufficient to make a thin batter. Bake in buttered pans in a quick oven.—The Caterer.

TO REMOVE KEROSENE STAINS—Stains from vaseline and kerosene will not come out with washing. The following is said to be effective:—"Cover kerosene stains with Indian meal, and when the oil strikes through remove and put on fresh; repeat this until the oil is removed."

FRUIT STAINS.—A lady writing to the Practical Farmer says:—"The best way to remove fruit stains of all kinds is to soak the article in pure soft warm water for two hours, then wash and boil as usual; the stain will all be gone. Do that way every washing and no more stains."

VERY NICE currant fritters are made of one cup and a half of very fine bread-crumbs, one tablespoonful and a half of flour, one cup and a half of sweet milk, one quarter of a pound of well-washed English currants (drain the currants thoroughly), two eggs, two tablespoonsful of sugar, a small lump of butter. Flavor with cinnamon or nutmeg to suit your taste; drop in spoonsful in hot lard and fry until done. Eat with sugar

LIME JUICE IN TREATMENT OF DIPHTHERIA.—M. Czartoryski, M. D., of Stockton, Cal., writes as follows to the London Lancet:—"During a prolonged residence in the interior of China I became acquainted with the fact that the Chinese place great reliance during epidemics of diphtheria on the internal use of the fresh juice of limes and of the fruit itself, which they consume in enormous quantities in every conceivable form—as lemonade, with native spirits, cut in slices, &c.—during attacks of this dreadful disease, with apparently most successful results, it hardly ever failing to effect a cure. The Chinese consider it a specific, and will, in case of need, do anything to obtain a supply. Since I have come back from California, as also in Louisiana, I have used limes and their juices in my practice as a physician, with most successful results in cases of diphtheria—even in the most desperate cases. As soon as I take charge of a case of diphtheria, I order limes to be administered as freely as possible, in any manner the patient can be prevailed upon to take them, especially in the form of hot lemonade, sweetened with white sugar or honey, or cut in slices with powdered white sugar. Besides lime juice (which I suppose acts by imparting an excess of oxygen to the circulation and thereby prevents formation of vibriones, &c., and so has almost a specific effect on disease), I prescribe whatever drug may be indicated to relieve symptoms as they develop and impart strength by appropriate stimulants and nourishment."

AMERICAN CREAM.—Put one box of gelatine into two quarts of milk, to dissolve over a slow heat. Beat well the yolks of eight eggs, and ten tablespoonsfuls of sugar. Set the kettle where it will boil, and stir in this mixture. Have the whites of the eggs beaten with as much more sugar. When the mixture boils, remove and stir in the beaten whites, and two tablespoonsful of vanilla. Pour into molds and set in a cold place.

GRAHAM GEMS.—One coffee cup Graham flour, one cup sweet milk, two eggs well beaten, two tablespoonsful molasses, one-third teaspoon soda dissolved in milk; pour in hot, well-buttered gem-pan and bake in hot oven.

Better Than Gold.

Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank and title a thousand fold,
Is a healthy body, a mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please;
A heart that can feel our neighbor's woe,
And share his joys with a gentle glow,
With sympathies large enough to enfold
All men as brothers—is better than gold.

Better than gold is a conscience clear,
Though toiling for bread in an humble sphere;
Doubly blest with content and health,
Untired by the lust or cares of wealth—
Lowly living and lofty thought
Adorn and ennoble a poor man's cot;
For man and morals, on nature's plan,
Are the genuine test of a gentleman.

Better than gold is the sweet repose
Of the sons of toil when their labors close;
Better than gold is the poor man's sleep,
And the balm that drops on his slumbers deep
Brings sleepy draughts to the downy bed,
Where luxury pillows her aching head;
His simpler opiate, labor, seems
A shorter road to the land of dreams.

Better than gold is a thinking mind,
That in the realms of books can find
A treasure surpassing Australian ore,
And live with the great and good of yore.
The sage's love and the poet's lay,
The glories of empires passed away;
The world's great drama will thus unfold
And yield a pleasure better than gold.

Better than gold is a peaceful home,
Where all the fireside charities come;
The shrine of love and the haven of life,
Hallowed by mother, or sister or wife;
However humble the home may be,
Or tried by sorrow with heaven's decree,
The blessings that never were bought or sold
And center there, are better than gold.

A Bishop's Experience.

Bishop Bowman attended the Methodist Conference at Indianapolis recently, and a correspondent relates the following incident which did not appear in the conference records: Bishop Bowman was not expected to arrive until Wednesday morning, but he came on the midnight train on Tuesday. Getting off at our lonely, rickety rattletrap of a depot, the Wabash, he, upon inquiry, found the direction of the hotel. Arriving there he knocked, and waited till the landlord could dress and open the door. Upon asking for lodging for the night he was told the house was filled, and there was no place to sleep. He then asked if he could be allowed to sleep on the floor, which was granted. The following morning he asked for the amount of his lodging and breakfast, and upon being informed, gave double that amount each to the wife and daughter of the landlord, never once uttering a single word of complaint. He is certainly a faithful servant of his Master, accepting entertainment in apparent perfect satisfaction which not one of the members of his conference but would have found fault with. The landlord was quite taken back when later in the day he learned who was his guest, as the Bishop did not attempt to make himself known to him.—Inter-Ocean.

The Drunkard's Will.

I leave to society a ruined character, a wretched example and a memory that will soon rot.

I leave to my parents, during the rest of their lives, as much sorrow as humanity in a feeble and declining state can sustain.

I leave to my brothers and sisters as much mortification and injury as I could bring on them.

I leave to my wife a broken heart, a life of wretchedness and shame, to weep over my premature death.

I give and bequeath to each of my children poverty, ignorance and low character, and the remembrance that their father was a monster.—From an old Scrap Book.

Sydney Smith being ill, his physician advised him to "take a walk upon an empty stomach." "Upon whose?" asked Sydney. Still better steps to take would be the purchase of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are especially valuable to those who are afflicted with any chronic disease of the stomach or bowels. By druggists.

What is Religion Worth?

In connection with the subject of giving, Mr. Spurgeon tells the following anecdote: "A gentleman went around with a paper to raise the minister's salary. He went to a poor man who had attended the the church twice, who put down $10. The gentleman asked him if he did not mean 10s. "10 shillings?" said the man, "do you think that the spiritual benefit and comfort that a man gets from such a minister as ours through a year is only worth ten shillings? I reckon it to be worth a great deal more, but really I cannot afford to give more." "Well," said the man who was collecting to himself, "if this man can afford £10, I can afford £25." He had never before given more than ten shillings. When a man gives sixpence, says Mr. Spurgeon, who is laying up thousands of pounds, I can only consider that he forms a pretty accurate measure of the value of his religion. A man who was pulled out of the river by another, offered him fourpence. "No, thank you," said the man, "I don't want to take your valuation of what you are worth."

A Sailor's Wife

There have been heroines as well as heroes on the sea, and of these Mrs. Annie Wilson is one. When she was fourteen years of age she married the captain of a vessel, and for seven years accompanied him on his voyages around the world without accident.

But in 1872 the ship encountered a terrible storm off the banks of Newfoundland. The captain was knocked down and his shoulder broken. The first mate and several of the crew were also disabled, and the second mate was so frightened that he could not give any orders. The captain was carried down, lashed on a door, into the cabin; and when his wife saw him rendered helpless in this way, instead of yielding to lamentation, she only thought of what she could do to supply his place. She rushed on deck and called the men around her.

"Boys our lives are in danger," she said; "but stick to me, and I'll take you into port all right."

She set them to work to clear away the wreck. They manned the pumps; and when the gale had subdued a little, they rigged up a jury-mast, under their new captain's orders, set sail again, and in twenty-one days the ship was safely anchored at St. Thomas.

After the necessary repairs had been made; and as her husband was still quite helpless, the brave woman worked the ship to Liverpool and made the voyage in thirty days. After this she settled down in New York, and for seven years supported her crippled husband and child by working in a dry-goods store.

When her husband died, Secretary Sherman appointed her to the post of inspectress in the New York Custom house.—Harper's Young People.

Christ's work was of a personal nature. He sought out the individual and taught him direct. While multitudes came to hear him, and he taught them publicly, yet this seems to have been incidental rather than his purpose; he never sent out his agents to call crowds together, but was himself the sought, and often his intended work was obstructed by the coming of the multitudes. He sought to get at individual hearts. So we do well to single out individuals, as did Jesus, and endeavor to bring them into the light. This seems to be Christ's plan for taking the world, each, when converted, to bring some others to Jesus. As with the leaven in the meal, each particle, when it becomes leavened, in turn becomes an active principle working upon the next to it, and all being individual workers; so Christians, following Jesus' example, will all be alive and unceasingly at work upon those next to them.

Rev. Daniel Curry, D. D., recently said; "Drunkenness is no longer palliated as a misfortune, but is characterized as an atrocious self-abuse a crime against society and sin against God. The pledge of total abstinence, though still in good repute, is no longer looked to as the one sufficient remedy for the evils of intemperance. Moderate drinking has not come into favor, but there seems to be more readiness than formely, to review the cooperation of men not pledged to total abstinence in efforts to suppress the nefarious and destructive liquor traffic—and upon that department of the great and complicated evils, the public attention appears to be becoming more intensely fixed."

The Illinois Senate has adopted a constitutional amendment resolution to enable the Governor to veto particular items in appropriation bills.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.
By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.
WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.
A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.
"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung.."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.
Bound in cloth, gilt, 272 pages, and portrait. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, 60 cents.

Getting an Education.

MR. EDITOR:—I think it necessary to say a few words concerning our Normal School. There are many young ladies and gentlemen in the State who have given credit to themselves, their schools and race, yet the normal schools are visited, and too little interest manifested on the part of the parents. For instance, daughters begin school Monday morning and Wednesday they stay at home to wash or do some other trivial work that need not be done just then. You do not see them again till the next week or next month, still they are expected to get an education. Now parents do not like to see their daughters and sons excelled by any on any occasion, and they should not be kept away from school and repressed. The obstacles may soon be removed, but an education will be with you forever. There are many young people not educated, but the days that have passed we look to no more, we look to the future. A great many are not competent to teach because they did not attend school regularly. You are not compelled to attend the Oakland Normal school; there are schools at Austin, Marshall and Prairie View and other places in your reach. Few if any possess riches, all can not be thoroughly educated, but all can at least learn to read and write. Look well to the future.

G. R. SMITH.

To the Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN—I have received a communication from Bishop Harris, Secretary of the Board of Bishops, and Messrs. Phillips & Hunt, New York, stating that the amount necessary to defray expenses of the next General Conference and the delegates appointed was the same as four years ago, $100. They requested that the amount be apportioned to the districts and charges of our Conference. It is about 90 cents to each pastoral charge. This small amount should be raised before the next Annual Conference. The amount to each district is as follows: Holly Springs District $12.65; Okolona District, $22.50; Greenwood District, $17.10; Meridian District, $18.90; Jackson District, $17.10; Gulf District, $11.75. Total $100.

Fraternally, yours,
J. M. SHUMPERT,
Secretary Mississippi Conf.

Conkling's Repartee.

Speaking of ex-Senator Conkling's quickness of mind during a debate, John F. Smyth said recently. "Mr. Conkling was equally swift of mind in replying to those who were rash enough to question him at political meetings. I remember that when he was a young man he was once interrupted during a speech at Utica by a fellow who bawled out: 'Do you want me to marry a black wench?' Conkling pretended not to hear the remark distinctly, and said with great politeness of manner: 'Will the gentleman who asked me a question have the kindness to come forward and repeat it?' The Republicans who were present cried out. 'Turn him out, turn him out.' Oh, no, don't, turn him out: I'm sure the gentleman asked some question which deserves a reply; let him come forward,' said Conkling. So they pushed the fellow forward to the middle of the hall, where he puffed out his chest and said defiantly: 'Do you want me to marry a black woman?' Conkling looked the man all over carefully for about three minutes. It was so silent that you could have heard a pin drop. Then he said with a drawl: 'Do I want you to marry a black woman? No, I can't say that I do—I have too much compassion for the black woman.'"

ANSWER THIS.—Is there a person living who ever saw a case of ague, biliousness, dyspepsia, or neuralgia, or any disease of the stomach, liver or kidneys that Hop Bitters will not cure?

General News Items.

The defeat of the army organization bill has been resulted in the resignation of the Swedish Cabinet.

The quantity of beer produced in the United States last year averaged more than fourteen gallons for every inhabitant of the country, being 525,000,000 gallons.

The Montana Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church is constantly assuming greater importance. She has now about 10 churches, with 500 members, and needs during the coming year at least 10 more churches to accommodate the on-coming people. Two railroads, now penetrate the heart of Montana, and all along their lines new towns are springing into exististence.

Two large sales of land in the South and West have recently been effected in London. General Thomas W. Conway, on his recent visit to that city, sold to the Hon. Robert Tennant, Director of the London and Northwestern railway, 230,000 acres in the State of Arkansas at $2,50 an acre. He also sold 1,800,000 acres of Texas grazing land to George Philpotts. Esq., for a syndicate of English capitalists, for $3,000,000. He is now negotiating with another London syndicate for the sale of 2,000,000 acres in the Territory of New Mexico and the State of Colorado.

The Rev. A. D. Mayo, one of the ripest scholars in the land, and thoroughly posted in educational matters, recently attened a three-day convention of colored school-teachers at Montgomery, Ala. He says "it was a convention every way creditable, and one of the best of the kind I ever attended." There are 1,500 colored school-teachers in Alabama, and the attitude of the people of the South is much more encouraging than at any former period. Education is the sheet-anchor of hope, not only of the black man of the South, but of the white man.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff, instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters, All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

No. 56 USE THE St. Charles St.

A WONDERFUL and
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON XI June 10. AT ICONIUM AND LYSTRA. (Acts xiv, 1-18.)

When you hear about Paul and his wonderful preaching, may be you think Paul had a grand time all the while. But if you remember how people treated Jesus himself, you will not wonder when you hear that Paul and the rest had a great many hard times. They were driven away from the city of Iconium, south-east of Antioch, and Paul and Barnabas were busy working for Jesus. Many believed, and this made the wicked Jews angry, and they stirred up the people to stone Paul and Barnabas. But they fled away from them, and went to a town called Lystra. There they began to work. The people there were heathen, and when they heard Paul, and saw him cure a lame man who had never walked, they wanted to call Paul and Barnabas gods. They wanted to bring flowers and oxen and offer to them. Now if they had been working for themselves and not for Jesus, they would not have done as they did. They told the people they were just men, and did these things because God helped them. They told them they had come to tell them about the true and only God. We know Paul could do this, for his heart was so full of love he could not help telling what he knew about Christ and his wonderful praise; they wanted all that to be given to Jesus. Little people can learn a lesson here. Your motto for to-day is, Every thing for Jesus.—Western.

On Thursday, May 24th, there met in Trinity Church, Louisville, Ky., eleven pastors, one local elder and two laymen from the cities of Jeffersonville, New Albany, and Louisville, who, proceeded to organize a Methodist Episcopal Church preachers' and laymen's meeting of the Falls cities of the Ohio and vicinity. In these cities there are five conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church represented, with twenty-one pastors and presiding elders, three other annual conference appointees, and two superannuates. The officers elected for the first six months are: President, F. Grider; vice-presidents and committee on program, J. H. Barth, M, W. Taylor, W, C. DePauw, G. P. Jenkins; secretary, George L. Curtiss. It was determined to hold monthly meetings on the first Wednesday of each month, commencing with June, alternating between the three cities.

The Lord Mayor of London was only a porter in a warehouse, but he persevered in the face of all opposition and rose rapidly. It is only persistency and merit that has made Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup the greatest family remedy for coughs and colds now offered to the suffering public.

The maine Conference at Lewiston closed April 30. In the report on temperance the Conference voted that the use of tobacco in any form was a crime against humanity and a sin against God.

Faces marred with pimples or freckles, should use Dr. Benson's Skin Cure. Use and be happy.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

DON'T BE SKEPTICAL. REASON TEACHES AND EXPERIENCE CONFIRMS THAT TARANTS SELTZER APERIENT IS AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR ANY AND ALL DISORDERS OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. A TEASPOONFUL IN A GLASS OF WATER EVERY MORNING BEFORE EATING, IS NOT ONLY EXTREMELY BENEFICIAL BUT A PROTECTION AGAINST DISEASE WHICH NO ONE CAN AFFORD TO DISREGARD. FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Three hundred persons have been arrested at Van, Armenia, for conspiracy against the Government.

NEW BLOOMFIELD, MISS., Jan. 2, '80.

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done more good than all the doctors and medicines that they could use on or with me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

Navasota District Camp Meeting.

This Camp Meeting will be held on the District Camp Ground, three miles east of Navasota on the Montgomery Branch of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fee Railroad. It will commence on Thursday July 12, and continue as long as the executive and business committee shall decide so to do. The business and executive committees, the same members answering for both, are as follows: Alexander Hackett, Jesse Deuson, J. W. Hinton, J. A. Tillory, Wm. May, James Cullen, G. V. R. Bookman, J. H. Hawkins, P. P. Felder, H. Williams, S. Thurman, Abner Thomas, Thos. Blake, A. Franklin, Jas. Washington and Louis Downey. I have appointed Rev. Edward Lee chairman of this committee and requet the members of it to co-operate with him in making the necessary improvements on the gounds and buildings. The members of committee or any other persons wishing information in regard to the Camp Meeting can address him at Navasota. As the few cannot bear the burden of the many let each one coming make provision for himself and family for there will be no free tables. Each pastor is a member of the Camp Meeting Association and ought not only to attend himself but to induce the members and friends on his charge to come. It is designed that each charge provide for the entertainment of its own pastor. The train on the railway on which the Camp Ground is located will stop at the grounds and no inconvenience will be experienced in getting to the place which is in sight of the railway. A committee will wait on the trains on the Central Railway to direct people to the grounds. The grounds are ample and the water will be abundant and good. It is intended to induce each charge to build permanent camps on the streets of its own. Now is the time to begin to agitate the camp meeting question and to rouse the people so that we may have a general turn out and a glorious meeting. Pray for its succes.

Editorial Notes.

The Methodist Episcopal Church leads all other churches in this country in church building. During the last decade we built 2,638, the Presbyterians of all shades built 1,721, while our Baptists, who boast so much of their numbers, built only 213!

Citizens of New Orleans should remember that the city's poverty, dirty streets and incompetent police force is due mainly to the dishonest policy of State and city repudiation, embodied in the Constition of 1879. As they have sown so will they reap.

R. M. Patterson, D.D., editor of the Presbyterian Journal, speaking of the Northern and Southern Presbyterians says: "Notwithstanding the present attitude of the Southern Assembly and especially of its leaders, I predict reunion of the two churches before five years have passed."

At the recent meeting of the Northern Presbyterian Assembly, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., there were present one hundred and twenty-two of the ministerial commissioners who were graduates from Princeton. We doubt if any other assembly could bring together so many graduates from any one institution of learning.

It is hardly the right thing to condemn a police force of 200 men on duty over several square miles of territory, for its failure to suppress or control the hoodlums; yet the suggestion of the City Item to Mayor Behan to improve by removing associates of hoodlums from the police force is a practical one that should be heeded.

In respect to material and spiritual interests the statistics show that the relative increase of the Methodist Episcopal Church South leads all other churches in the United States. For foreign missions and the conversion of the heathen world they paid full twice as much as the Southern Baptists. Our Baptist brethren labor under great disadvantage. It takes a large amount of water to run their machinery.

The Northern Presbyterians have what they call a Church Erection Society. The receipts from all sources during the past year were $108,000. Application for aid were made from 306 churches asking for $904,400. Aid had been extended to 215 churches in the aggregate sum of $104,600. At their recent General Assembly, held at Saratoga, N. Y., 500 churches were reported without house of worship. The Society asks for $200,000 this coming year.

Rev. John D. Knox, a well-known banker, Topeka, Kansas, and author of "Paths to Wealth," in a private note to the editor, says: "We are giving the whiskey and saloon men trouble of late and we expect to drive out the saloons from among us." The saloons of our land are like an immense whirlpool whose vortex is sure death. No one would rush into this vortex; but our boys are inexperienced boatmen exploring the sea of life, and ere they know they have entered the current of the whirlpool which goes round the vortex and swallows all who come within its power. For the safety of our boys we are called upon to drive the saloons from among us. There is no time for delay.

Dr. Lafferty, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, abhors cant and sham in religion, and knows how and when to speak so as to be heard and felt. Read: "In a certain little city of the bluegrass section of Virginia, it is said, they have the toughest beef in the State, while fine cattle are raised in that section. The best are sent to Baltimore, and the meanest kept for home consumption. We have observed that some saints have a surplus of sanctity for exportation, and retain a shabby assortment for individual use."

The State is interested in the material wealth and solid virtue of its citizens. Whatever can promote these results should be the constant aim of the State. Facts and figures prove that temperance and education are most potent factors in bringing about such results. Therefore the State should stamp out the liquor traffic, and provide ample means for the education of the masses. Intemperance and ignorance are twin evils that no State can long support. There is death in that pot. Death spiritual, death temporal and death eternal.

M. Donnat, a Belgian statistician has collected some figures showing the comparative amounts expended by different nations per head for war and education.

	Per head for war.	Education
England	$4 50	$ 70
Russia	2 50	03
Switzerland	1 16	1 00
France	4 84	31
Holland	4 32	76
German States	11 10	2 40
Denmark	2 08	1 07
Italy	1 80	16
Belgium	1 62	27
Austpia	1 60	30

This comparison is not very promising, taking the best figures for education. Certainly the millenium has not yet come.

The Texas Christian Advocate is responsible for the following: "Several Texas papers are discussing the question, 'Does it Pay to be Good.' It is evident that very few leading journals of the country believe the affirmative of the proposition: they attempt only that which they believe will pay."

The first Methodist Conference was held at the Old Foundry, London, England, June 25, 1744, and was composed of six persons, John and Charles Wesley, John Hodges, Henry Piers, Samuel Taylor and John Meriton.

Occasionally there comes to us a letter like this, "Our preacher has not spoken a word about the SOUTHWESTERN this year. If he would just speak about it he could get a good list of paying subscribers." We hope there are few such men, and we advise them to plant a patch of goobers or potatoes.

Bishop Foss to the Presiding Elders.

At the recent Presiding Elders' Convention, held at Minneapolis, Minn., Bishop Foss was present and being called out, he said he was greatly interested in the convention. Its pulse was in full harmony with the beating of his own heart. He had been a Methodist from his boyhood, and, to some extent, hereditarily. Though he was an optimist, he still did not forget the obstacles in the way of the best progress of Methodism. During his late illness the bishop had been trying to get his hand on the real pulse of the church, and to discover what its real condition was; and he had tried to discovere the character of original Methodism, and had found that it depended upon three things: ecclesiastical peculiarities, doctrinal statements, and personal religious experiences. These have not changed essentially from what they were in the beginning. The doctrines especially have not been changed. It has had no esoteric doctrines, and the members have believed the creed of the church The atmosphere was not favorable at first to the development of the church. The current worldly disbelief about religion ran about as follows: If you seek it you won't find it; if you find it you won't know it; if you know it you haven't got it; if you have got it you can lose it; if you lose it you never had it. [Laughter.] But the Methodists turned these expressions around and said of religion: If you seek it you will find it; if you find it you may know it; if you know it you have got it: if you have got it you may lose it; if you lose it you must have had it. [Applause.] What at the beginning was the teaching of the church to the masses of the people, is the teaching of the church to-day. Bishop Foss said his experience in the conferences east and west, north and south, was that the same doctrines were everywhere taught. Everywhere our connectional system has produced a great religious body, extending all over the continent, to many of the islands of the sea, and to many other continents, a solidarity and common life which is preserved by keeping up its tone and spirit at the altar of God. By the common connectional life we can propagate one spirit and can correct the evils of any remote part of the great Christian body politic. He said he would not disparage congregational forms of goverment; but for our church the connectional principle, the spirit of unity, is full of hope for a pure gospel wherever Methodism goes. He believed that Methodism, so long as it maintained the three distinctive elements he had mentioned, would not be thrown aside by God, but would remain as one of the great instruments which he had employed to save the world,

The Freedmen's Work Remembered.

We learn from Dr. J. C. Hartzell that Mr. Amasa Edson, of Brockton, Mass., has given to the Freedmen's Aid Society his farm in that place, containing fifty acres, and valued at about $3,000, subject to an annuity of $180 during the life of the donor, the annuity to be doubled in case the needs of the donor demand it. Mr. Edson is now eighty years old, and, although not a member of our Church, has great confidence in its methods for the education and salvation of the freedmen.

Mrs. Sarah Pierce, late of Flushing, N. Y., has left a property estimated to be worth $8,387 to various individuals and charities. The New Orleans University, as the residuary legatee, it is supposed, will come into possession of about $3,800. This sum is to be called the "Pierce Fund," and it is to be kept intact, the interest only being used by the trustees in the education of the colored people. Mrs. Pierce was a colored woman, who came from Virginia to Flushing nearly forty years ago, and became a servant in the family of a prominent citizen of that city. She died last February, having made her will last June. She saved her money when a servant, and afterward helped her husband to save money. When he died she cared for the property wisely, and as a result her estate is worth over $8,000, the most of which is in cash or its mortgages. Of this good woman we learn through Dr. Hartzell that her former employer and lifelong friends says in a letter, "She was very faithful to me and my children, and had an exceptional faculty in imparting moral and religious instuction. I valued her much, and her subsequent life as a married woman was in accord with her life in my family. Her strong Christian faith was a firm support during a long and very suffering illness."—Western.

TIDINGS FROM THE FIELD.

Wednesday morning, May 30, national decoration day, at 7:25 o'clock a.m., while the busy thousands of our great Southern metropolis were preparing for the observance of the day, and to scatter flowers over the sacred graves of the nation's honored dead, the writer and his better half boarded Morgan's Louisiana and Texas railroad transfer boat and train, bound for the second quarterly round of his district; to go forth scattering precious seeds of truth which should blossom into fragrance and beauty, to bless and support the living and to comfort and crown the dying. Having long since adopted the policy of doing everything on time, we arrived at the depot as early as was necessary. Here, among the motley crowd of waiting travellers, buying tickets, checking baggage, hustling and bustling, were several intelligent looking young people who were also to cross the ferry and take the train. We soon discovered, however, that they were students from New Orleans, Straight and Leland Universities who were returning home, or to places where they were to teach during their summer vacation. Freely they had received the elements of education during the school year, freely they were now going to impart it to others. Here we were also glad to meet a schoolmate of former days, Miss Salina Saucier, who had just graduated from Straight University the evening before, and had accompanied her sister-in-law to the depot. The river crossed, we were soon comfortably seated in a first-class coach aboard the train, and were speeding westward and northward through fertile and verdant rice, corn, cane and cotton fields, and through many thriving country towns and villages, on to Cheneyville and Lalmourie Bridge, the points of our destination.

On the train everything was pleasant, and we could find fault with nothing. The road was level and well ballasted, the coaches were nice and comfortable, the officers were polite and obliging, and the speed was highly satisfactory. On this train we had the pleasure of meeting an old friend, Mr. Bernard Meyer, one of the oldest merchants of Houma, who was returning from a trip to New Orleans. Although Mr. Meyer is a consistent Jew, he was always so kind and friendly to us during our stay in Houma, and in the parish of Terrebonne, that we always appreciated him. Meeting him at this time after four years absence from Houma, to press his hand and to look into his eyes was refreshing. It brought up many pleasant recollections of the writer's opening ministry in Houma, the first sermon which he there preached from the text, "Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world;" of his many revivals and temperance efforts and success, and of the many changes which time has wrought since. But God alone abideth forever, the same and unchangeable. May He bless us and make us better people as the years roll round. At Terrebonne Station Mr. Meyer took the Houma branch road and left us to continue our journey. Rev. A. R. Blunt, formerly a State Senator, and now pastor of the Baptist Church in Natchitoches, being on the train returning from the commencement exercises of Leland University, the writer soon fell in with him and profitably whiled away the time until we separated at Lamourie Bridge, where the writer left the train. Leaving Terrebonne Station we soon passed through Tigerville, where, during 1875 the writer occupied the office of Postmaster, and also taught the colored public school, which has never been reopened since. It was then and there the writer received the mysterious letter which was doubtless designed to scare him from off the path of duty and out of the neighborhood. The letter read about as follows: "Nigger school teacher, you are hereby notified to leave Tigerville inside of ten days, or there will be a boneyard procession. Signed, Tiger Invincibles."

Just about the time that this was received, a colored man was hanging to a tree near Bayou Boeuf only a few miles away, and no one dared to take him down or give him a respectable burial. Colored people living in that neighborhood can testify to this fact to-day. Through God's gracious providence, however, the writer stood his grounds and not a hair of his head was injured. Those unpleasant days are now past and gone, thank the Lord, and everybody breathes freer and better. Tigerville has since redeemed her good name, and the writer fails to recall the name of a single avowed enemy, at the time of his leaving Tigerville, among the white or black. All were friends. The colored people in that ward, however, are not rightly treated by the parish school board. For seven long years their children have been denied all the advantages of public school instruction. A school has been constantly kept for white children but none has been opened for colored children, although they are denied admission in the white school. This is a perfect outrage. Indeed it is an outrage upon the colored children in any ward, for the school board to fail to provide separate schools for them, and to prohibit their attendance at the white schools established in the ward. This is an injustice, the venality of which all men can understand, and of which all good men are ashamed. Colored parents whose children are denied school privileges in white schools, in wards where no separate schools have been opened for their children, should send their children to such anyhow, and if refused admission they ought to institute a test suit to be decided by the highest tribunal. Such an outrageous injustice ought not to continue to flourish undisturbed. Leaving Tigerville, a half hour's ride brought us to Morgan City, where the train stopped fifteen minutes for lunch. Here we found an equal right lunch house. Equal accommodation for equal fare in the motto. Here you get what you pay for, and you pay for what you get. Nothing more, how much less, we cannot say. No difference is made, however, upon the score of color. But why note this fact? This is nothing exceptional. At all lunch stations where lunchers stand up to the counter to lunch, no difference is ever shown on account of color; it is when they sit down to lunch that the difference takes place. Can't you understand the vast difference between tweedle dee and tweedle dum? Gliding along the beautiful Teche, passing each station in rapid succession, we were soon at Jeanerette, where Bro. Fields, our pastor there, as we hurried by cheered us with the news of his success. At Washington, Bro. Davis, was at the depot full of sunshine. At Eola, Bro. Luster told us enough to let us know that he and his people were living; and were lively. At 5:30 P. M the train arrived at Cheneyville. Sister A. here stopped off, and found Bro. A. Baham, our faithful district steward, in waiting with his buggy to take her to Booneville while the writer continued on to Larmourie Bridge. Before reaching his destination, however, the writer enjoyed the pleasure of an introduction to Rev. A. T. Galloway, a cousin of Rev. Dr. Galloway, the editor of the New Orleans Advocate (of the Church South). Brother Galloway is in charge of the Evergreen circuit of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in the parish of Avoyelles. He is a frank, young, and we should judge, a loving, able minister of the gospel. Brother Galloway promised to help us as much as he can in the establishment of our work in his section of the parish of Avoyelles. He will be of great service to us. 6 P. M. found the writer stepping off from the train at Larmourie Bridge. Bro. John Sparks was to have met him then and there, but through sore disappointment no one met him. The weather was threatuing, the rain was falling, and the road was muddy; but nothing daunting we hurried on to where we were to lodge for the night, about a mile and a half away, at Mr. Hector Turner's where we were kindly provided for by Mr. Turner and his Christian hearted family. Here, during the night, Bro. Sparks and one of his officers, Bro. Brown, called and took quarters with us, from whence we started for Spring Creek, in the pine woods, next morning Thursday, May 31. OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

MISSISSIPPI.

L. Clayton, Shuqualak: "Elder Campbell visited us on his second round, preached and gave sacrament to 75 members. Collection, $10.60."

R. T. Louis, Rodney: "Visited the Alcorn University and was called upon to address the students by the Rev. R. H. Revels, president. They are as fine a corps of young men as can be found in the South; they being earnest, studious and intelligent. They are preparing for the commencement which comes off on the 13th instant. Their musical skill is astonishing."

TENNESSEE.

H. Robinson, Spring Hill: "We have commenced the building of a new church, and laid the corner stone May 19th. Dr. Braden was with us, conducted the opening exercises and delivered one of the ablest addresses we ever heard; it has aroused a sentiment among white and colored, who will aid us now, and would not have done so otherwise. Prof. Lonis, of Columbia, also made an address. There was Sunday-school, and a festival at night. We raised $56 or $45.55 above expenses. Our people are coming to the front at Spring Hill."

B. Anderson, Murfreesboro: "We have had some success at this charge since conference. In a three weeks' meeting there were ten converts, and of these seven have joined the church. Elder Key held our first quarterly conference, and Rev. B. Manson assisted in services. Our Sunday-schools are in bright condition. Missionary prayer meetings are kept up and are held once a month. We hope they will do much good in bringing the children to Christ."

TEXAS.

R. K. Whiting, Crockett: "I have erected a church five miles from the city. When I came here I found no house on the work. I expect to build another house in a short time in the city. Have added to church 15 members. Pray for me."

John Jackson, Clarksville: "We will have our new church completed by the second Sunday in June. We bought a bell for $170—raising $150 for it in one day. On another day after preaching by P. H. Haley and myself, the collections were $88.56."

G. Jones, Orange: "The people are being much pleased with their pastor this year, Rev. A. Williams. We have built a parsonage for him 20x30, valued at $350; now we have commenced a new church. May 13th a subscription of $77 was taken up for it. We are moving on rapidly."

Wm. Allen, Cotton Gin: "Our second quarterly meeting was held by Elder Ripetoe. He preached to a crowded house. Collection $9.50. Sacrament was administered to 99 persons; seven were received into the church. Trustees have got the parsonage so we can use it. They expect to build a new church as soon as the parsonage is finished. The lumber is on the ground at a point eight miles from Cotton Gin, where we think we have a good site. We hope to get started at Mexia this summer, for a church is needed very much there. We are soliciting aid to build. Our Sunday-school is in a fine condition, and we expect to have a good time on Children's Day."

A lady has just given $6,000 to the temperance cause, who, a few years ago was told by her husband that as temperance was being agitated in Virginia, he thought he would sign the temperance pledge to help the cause. With great pride she said, "I would be ashamed of a husband who would thus surrender his personal liberty." One year from that time he died of delirium tremens, and her sons, learning to drink at their mother's table, have both died drunkards.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Remarks of Mr. John W. Randolph.

On the Occasion of the Closing Exercises of the Biloxi Colored Public School, on the 29th day of May, 1883.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I am pleased, and assure you I feel highly honored at the compliment paid in requesting me to address you on this occasion.

It is, no doubt, expected, it is intended, I suppose, that I make to you some remarks expressive of my views as relates to the subject of education and kindred matters in our midst. I doubt very much my ability to come up to your expectations. It is, therefore, with some feelings of distrust and diffidence that I undertake to comply with your request. It seems to me however that there is room for a great deal to be said on this subject; but to say a great deal and say it well requires a thought about, a consideration and an appreciation of the subject which I might not possess or be given to. It is evident, therefore, that the task now required of me cannot be considered as other than difficult, and, in some respects, unpleasant. In the presence, however, of so many friends to the cause of education, and professing to be a friend to that cause myself, it does seem to me that in my place here to-night I may indulge the hope of making a few remarks for your consideration and entertainment this evening.

We have here a beautiful spectacle—a number of the youths of our town who have been employed in this place, seeking, as it were, to find a hidden treasure. For five months these boys and girls have been at labor here and their labors have all been directed to the obtaining of that which when obtained is designed to assist in refining and embelishing the mind; and which in years to come is intended to make their aspirations more lofty and noble, and their achievements more numerous and less difficult. With this view and declaration of the services to which these children have been given, the school room asserts itself as a place of great importance; and as parents and guardians of these children, we are caused to think upon the responsibilities which rest upon our shoulders. Remembering, too, that the future of these little ones is fraught with such grave responsibilities, and that to us, as their parents, is imposed the duty and charge of marking out the path in which their little feet are to tread in passing all that varied way from the state of childhood to that of manhood, should we not feel admonished that our responsibilities in these things are second to none resting upon our shoulders as men, as parents and as citizens? I assure you it is my belief that by the manner of the performance of our duties to our children in this respect we are to be judged, and we shall be judged whether interested, capable and intelligent citizens. Knowing what our duties are, and admitting that we owe them to our children, to ourselves, to our country and to humanity, should we not resolve to go with one another hand in hand, head and shoulder together in their faithful discharge and performance.

To the parent who comes here to-night, and has witnessed what has taken place, there should be to him a peculiar pleasure and satisfaction in the recollection of the fact that he has had his children employed at so laudable an undertaking. The results of Mr. Graham's efforts shows out here in grand and splendid effect, and, no doubt, thrills the heart of every parent here with pleasure. I am sure I am delighted, and proud and satisfied with results. It is due that I say something to these scholars.

Boys and girls, we hope you are pleased with the efforts of teacher and parents in your behalf. We think you have done remarkably well under the circumstances. Do you feel that in the near future you are to quit school and be required to come upon the stage of action as men and women?

Let me say also to these boys: Soon will be confided to you a part in the management of governmental matters in this country. How you will perform the duties so soon to devolve upon you depends altogether upon the uses you make of your present opportunities. There are prayers now ascending on high in your behalf, and you have it in your power to amaze, to please and surprise those whose prayers are now going up in your behalf. Will you do this? To fit and prepare yourselves for those duties to which I refer you will have the assistance and encouragement of parents, and teachers and friends, but the real work must be your own; and to do that work as it should be done you have no time to lose. It requires, therefore, closest application and attention. There is great pleasure to be found, as you have no doubt already found, in hard study. Persons should love to study. If we do not study we shall certainly be compelled to be ignorant. Now I know that not one of these children wants to be or intends to grow up ignorant. Ignorance is a dangerous something to possess. It is an ugly something, too. We do not boast of that one thing in this world. The very name "ignorant" is susceptible of evil, and is also generally esteemed a reproach and injurious, and synonymous with brute, Men strike that word down everywhere it appears. There should be no such words as "I do not know," and "I am ignorant," and, indeed, they are words seldom to be heard. There are many persons who would prefer, and would sooner suffer to have their hair or beard torn out hair by hair than let fall one such undignified and uncouth expression. These, however, are exalted intellects. But as man, alone of all the creatures of our God, has been given intellect should it not be his purpose to exalt that intellect to the highest possible elevation? and should he not feel the importance of his exalted position in the midst of all of God's creatures? It seems to be required that the aim of man should ever be upward and onward. How shall we best comply with that requirement? The answer I make is, be a man. To be a man, however, my friends, consists not alone in eating, drinking and sleeping. The animal does all this, and in many respects much better than man. Man eats as does the animal, but man suffers from indigestion, and the animal does not. Man drinks as does the animal, but from the effects of his drinking man often sickens, reels, staggers and falls; while the animal never manifests any of these detestable symptoms. Man sleeps away his hours, the precious golden hours God has alloted to his work, but the sun always finds the the animal's couch empty. Men build houses, they construct railroads and cities, and all the habitations of man. So does the bird and the tiny bee construct a place for his habitation more complete and elegant in convenience for himself than man does for himself. Why, our best and most skilful engineers admire the perfection of the embankments and work of the beaver in building towns and villages. In the face of these ever living, ordained and undeniable facts, you see that the arts and sciences alone and in themselves as such do not give man a real superiority over the animal in all things. Although in so many respects the animal kingdom shows itself so much better provided for and instructed, and more moral than man's; and although it would seem that in many instances men are physically inferior to the animal, yet man possesses something that he knows places him above these creatures. He posseses something which justly makes him regard himself as a man, and the very name animal as a reproach. This is intellect you say. I say it is the uses to which intellect is put that justly ranks man above all created things. We are men then, my friends, in just so far as reason is our guide, and in so far as we make use of our reasons and intellects. God has done for the animal what he did not for man, and what it was not, in our likeness, necessary for him to do for man. He has fixed and regulated the appetites of the brute by laws which are never changed, and which will never cause his destruction. Man's appetite, on the contrary, must be governed by reason and those other qualities of head and heart not possessed by the brute. If man is not governed, then, his appetite is false to him and will betray him, yea, more, destroy him. Men die daily from excesses to which the animal wants not to stoop. In the beginning of the world God gave to man dominion over all the earth, and over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. A great law writer says, "this is the only true and solid foundation of man's dominion over external things." God's aim, therefore, proposes to put man at an alarming elevation above all other created beings. The Good Book also requires men to be "perfect," which seems to be also to be requiring progress upon the part of man upon a grand and gigantic scheme. Everywhere man is required to elevate himself. That is now, without doubt, and always has been, an eternal order. A legitimate order and authority marked over with the seal of the divinity. There should be every disposition, therefore, to comply with it. I believe they are anxious to comply with it. They must have their children comply with it. Children must obey their parents in all things. No person likes a disobedient child. Then, too, the disobedient child runs a great risk in not obeying its parents. If you refuse to and will not obey those whom God has put over you as parents, what is to become of you? It is somewhere said you will then be "lead as the blind by fools, or bound by executioners." The first slave about whom men know anything is said to have been a rebellions, a disobedient son. The fond hope is entertained that each one of you grow up competent to think, act and judge for yourselves. It is desired that above all books you have the Bible for the rule and guide of your lives, and that you prepare yourselves, each one of you, to read and interpret its contents intelligently, that you be led not astray by theorists who may be incompetent interpreters, or who may design to lead the world away from its teachings. It is predicted, and by some feared, that the Bible is destined to lead the world into a war of religions discussions. To me the Bible is a code divine in itself and designed to elevate our hearts and minds, and teach man how to act and move as required by the plan of God the eternal Legislator. Now I doubt not but that you coincide with me in the opinion that nothing is more necessary; nothing more evident than that the men who interpret the Bible should be men of the highest order of intelligence and integrity to teach the true meaning of its sayings and drive out and keep out from among men the chaos and evil originating out of and from misinterpretations of of our Bible, as well, also, to point out to men all of its essentials that he be relieved from all fear of erring in the application of those essentials to his conscience and his thoughts and actions. We must get on the high road of greatness. If we have among us any systems which may be fruitful of evil or of degrading or immoral consequences let them be removed. Let us tear ourselves away from them. We confidently expect the youth of to-day to grow up prepared to correct us, and see that men do not speculate on our lack of information. For these children Providence has provided a way and they enjoy blessings their parents never thought of enjoying, and although our public school system in Mississippi is not what it could and should be made, yet in many particulers its features are admirably adapted to the wants of our people, and if our youths will avail themselves of the advantages the present school system offers I am sure they may accomplish much good and realize great satisfaction in most gratifying results.

The gentleman who has had the care and management of this school deserves to be commended for his good work. To Mr. Graham, our efficient teacher, therefore, let me say that we feel that we owe you a debt of deepest gratitude for all your efforts in behalf of our children. Wherever you may go I am sure you may feel that you take with you from the patrons of this school the most kindly, interested and anxious feelings for your welfare and success in whatever pursuit you may engage.

I hope the exercises witnessed here to night may be of long and pleasing recollection. That this is but the beginning of a series of exercises to be repeated on closing days of our school in Biloxi, and which is destined to eventuate in the accomplishment of the greatneed of our people—the finding of many of these boys and girls in the full and complete possession and enjoyment of all the preparations, thus fitting them for any and all positions, and thus entitling them to a place in the ranks of the proudest and most accomplished men and women of their day and time.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Notes From Little Rock.

We have had the pleasure of hearing a lecture and sermon from Rev. W. H. Davis, President of Wiley University. The lecture was one in the course of free lectures which have been secured for the benefit of the Philander Smith College this year. Both the lecture, which was on "What shall our future be," and the sermon, from the text "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," were very impressive and instructive. We wish our Bro. and colaborer great success in his work, and we have no doubt but that he will succeed, for it is not hard to see that his heart is engaged in his work. Our school work in Little Rock is a success this year. In the Philander Smith College here and at Forest City, where we have been running a branch of the college under the management of Rev. G. N. Johnson, have been more than 200 students enrolled during the year, with a high average attendance. Our college building is up near the top of the third story. The university building is receiving the roof, while in the school there have been more than a hundred enrolled. We want 500 students to enter the college next September. Young man and young lady, here is your chance to prepare for the future. Sometime during last year the question of a convention of the teachers in our Freedmens schools was spoken of through the papers. What caused it to fail I do not know. But since meeting Bro. Davis and seeing others, it seems to be the most common sense proposition that could be adopted. It belongs to Methodists to grow in grace and knowledge by helpful experience in others. This would be the most effective way of holding such a class meeting. What say our brethren to having such a meeting, say some time in the latter part of August just before opening of ohe schools in the fall? We would nominate Little Rock as the place, but would go anywhere else.

Nashville City Mission.

The Church is progressing very well. Thus far we have bought fifty feet of ground in a very nice place within the city limits, and have erected a frame building 30x45 feet. We have had quite a hard time in trying to get established in this part of the city, owing to the fact that the A. M. E. Church has 15 years the start, and, besides, the people have been taught to strike the color line and then stay on their side of the line. It follows then that our Church that don't believe that God saves on account of color, would have an up hill way among that class of people, but by the help of God we have been able to get our church up. Rev. J. Braden, President Central Tennessee College, has rendered valuable assistance in the way of money and advice. Rev. John Seay, of Lebanon, Tenn., gave us $50. Rev. L. M. Hagood, the pastor of Clark Chapel, has taken a very active part in helping to push the work forward.

We are just now free from the dreadful plague of small pox, which has surrounded our church for three or four months. Those yellow flags, waving in a threatening manner, served to keep our people from the church. We have had a revival of religion for several weeks which resulted in four confessions and eight additions to the Church. Baptized four on last Sabbath at six o'clock a. m., and two children at night. The Lord was with us throughout the entire day. Now we wish those who love the cause of Christ and are willing to help in the time of great need to send us a donation, to J. Braden, from 25 cents up. Every friend who donates as much as one dollar will be named in the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We want to be able to have our church dedicated the 4th Sunday in July. Now please send on the names and the money.

Yours, D. COOK.

Our Foreign Letter.

The May meetings in London have grown into a very formidable annual institution of the metropolis and command a wide area of attraction. They are largely attended and some of them reach the white heat of enthusiasm. To enumerate them would occupy the space of this letter. They are not all in the interests of religion. Some of them are purely philanthropic, some purely political, some some politico-religious. The chief meetings are the missionary anniversaries. The Wesleyan meeting was very enthusiastic, and the speech of the President of the conference (Rev. Charles Garrett) made a grand impression.

The new Primate of all England presided at two missionary meetings and was present at others. Since he became fully invested with primatial powers he has been exceedingly active and energetic, and his policy seems to be comprehensive although decided and firm; and it is adopted and carried on from the High Church platform. He is certainly demonstrating the excellence of Mr. Gladstone's choice.

The Presbyterians are agitating for a revision of their Confession of Faith. This able and elaborate document is found to be considerably out of harmony with the living convictions of the church of Knox now, and learned Christian men consider it not just the right thing to be compelled to subscribe to a document they cannot cordially and fully endorse. And so it is. The leading ministers of all branches of Presbyterians are moving in the matter and it is probable before many years the revision of it may be an accomplished fact.

Justice has overtaken those miscreants whose deeds of atrocions assassination have rendered Ireland a reproach amongst civilized nations. The murderers of Lord Cavendish and Mr. Burke have been discovered, convicted, and one has already suffered the extreme penalty of the law and several others will do so in a few days. And these men all belong to the Roman Catholic Church. There is no exception in them. I think this fact morally incriminates that church, and places her in very unenviable association with deeds of blood of surpassing flagrancy.

Who Will Go For Us.

In the outset I will say I am no coward. My ancestry, though the world never consented to give them their place among the great men and scholars of the day, were people of no little intelligence and influence in the community where they lived. The matter which we wish to speak of is not in the past but the living present and should interest every member of my conference. I understand that our next general conference meets in Philadelphia next May, and that my conference is entitled to two delegates as you will see by looking in the Discipline. Now just who will represent our conference in that body is the question that is causing much uneasiness in this part of the moral vineyard just now. As to one of these delegates I think there can be no doubt in the minds of my learned brethren, but I am perplexed to know where they will be able to find the other delegate. He must of necessity be a man capable of making a speech that will equal the one that will be made. I don't know whether any one else has noticed it but it does seem so strange that but few, if any, annual conferences, have more than one suitable person for general conference delegate; and yet we must acknowledge that to be our condition. On account of this several of my brethren have told me that it would be a sad thing if some bishop should transfer me out of this conference before the election takes place. I have said to each one of them, as affectionately as my dignity and nature would allow, "I'll stay." Another wanted to know what my chances were, and I answered him by asking if he thought they could find another like me, (in intelligence on any and all subjects that would naturally come before that body) in my conference; one who knows the rules and regulations of the church as well, and as for that that could equal me in preaching or theology? With a smile, as if thoroughly satisfied, he answered "No." Indeed my conference will never find a man who has endured as much as I have and worked harder for the church. And then I have been a useful man; in the bishop's cabinet, held some of the best apppintments in the District, built several churches and have been invited to preach before the annual conference more than once. I know just what the next General Conference ought to do. I am certain I'll be the first, but I am bothered as to where they will find the other. I have been working this General Conference delegate business ever since the last one, there is no doubt as to my chances. All the brethren I could persuade have pledged themselves to vote for me and they have been pledged to me for some time. My chances ought to be good with P. E., Ex-P.E., and besides this I am a man of much experience. At conference when the bishop has been detained, I have heard members of the congregation whispering and asking why I did not take the chair. Not only this there are times when Moses alone will not answer and Aaron must go too. Just so. Some people where I have been, and indeed some of the members of my conference say I am the best preacher, sweetest singer and most prudent manager in the conference. Now it is plain that we cannot afford to have some man go to General Conference who will be content to serve on some committee and not make a speech during the whole session; who does not know how to offer and then push a resolution through. We need a man in the next General confer- who will remove the limit to the presiding eldership, lengthen the pastoral term, bring about organic union between the Southern Methodist and our own church, eliminate the various [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] them back from whence they came, and thus covering himself with glory and letting the reflections therefrom fall back on the church. We must have a man who can rise with dignity to a point of order and bring down the General Conference with a speech. Where can such another man be found? If any brother of any conference has any matter he wants pushed through the next General conference let him work and vote for me and if I don't try to get it through it will be because I am not there.

The Oxford School.

I had the pleasure of witnessing the examination and closing exercises of this school, which took place May 25. Mr. H. H. Avant is the principal, and is assisted by Mrs. Leah Stockard and Mrs. Anna Foster. The recitations of the classes showed that the teachers had done their whole duty during the term. It could not been other than a source of gratitude to any lover of his race to witness the vast improvement and progress made by the students of this school under the present principal. They show that they have imbibed a thorough knowledge of the studies pursued. I have known this school ever since its beginning and say that it, like many others, has been cursed by some immoral and, therefore, improper teachers, who were of no benefit to either pupils or parents. This is too often the case in many of our schools.

Mr. Avant graduated in Shaw University (now Rust) in the class of 1881, and is a man of good morals. Since his graduation he has spent the most of his time teaching this school, where he has made a grand impression on the minds of both white and colored. My opinion is that the people are well pleased with his labors and would do well, as they expect to do, to retain him as teacher for many years. Being a member of the M. E. Church, our Sunday-school finds in him an efficient Superintendent and in that office he acts with credit to himself. Those who are prepared to teach in the day school should also be prepared to teach in the Sunday-schools, hence the importance of that obligatory rule upon students in most of colleges to attend the Sunday-school. In short I must say while the people of Oxford doubtless have no desire of giving him up, that any people who wish a good teacher in their school room would do well to get Mr. H. H. Avant.

The Opening of the Congo.

The question whether the great Congo River is to be dominated by French or Portuguese influence or is to be free to the world involves political and business interests of great importance; but with these interests are bound up very closely the higher interests of civilization and Christianity. The grandest civilization attainable is Christian civilization, and Christianity prepares the way more thoroughly for commerce and other elements of civilization, as even a distinguished French atheist has recently admitted, than any other agency. Africa has been regarded, until the present generation, as an inacessible continent. Along its wonderful extent of coast-line, trading stations, towns, even colonies might be formed to gather up important articles of trade from the interior; but no thought, until in recent years, of even communication with the vast unreached interior was entertained. And yet the great unexplored regions lying immediately to the west of the great lakes can be reached by one of the most wonderful water-courses in the world, When Stanley descended the great Congo, which he rechristened the Livingstone, a few years ago, it was considered the greatest feat ever accomplished by an African traveler. Now, after some months' work and a considerable outlay, a pathway extending nearly fifteen hundred miles across the continent is open to travel and trade. Four steamers, under the auspices of the African International Association of Belgium, ply on the river. Three occupy the navigable waters between the cataracts around which Mr. Stanley has built good roads, below Stanley Pool, which is about 350 miles from the coast; and one is for the navigation of the stream above the Pool, a magnificent stretch of 1,000 miles being open to it. From Stanley Pool to the coast many trading and missionary stations have been established, and colonies are growing up around them; and the journey to the Pool, which the English Baptist missionaries made a year or two ago with the greatest danger and difficulty, will soon become as common as the trip up the Nile to the Second Cataract.

Mr. Stanley's mission is an international one. He is opening the way to the interior, not for Belgium, whose sovereign has generously assisted the enterprise from his own private purse to the extent of $100,000; not for Germany, not not for England, but for the world. It is a noble, a humane, a generous undertaking, designed to develop trade, introduce civilization, advance science, let Christianity into the heart of savage heathendom, and relieve human oppression and degradation. The flags which Mr. Stanley had raised over his stations are non-national. On the other hand M. de Brazza, as the envoy of France, is on the Congo to make French territory. He has raised the French tricolor at Stanley Pool, and in many other places, and claimed for the Republic a vast amount of territory. A conflict with Stanley seems more than probable; but we hope, for the sake of Africa, and humanity and civilization, and Christian Missions, that the tricolor will not triumph.

The great struggle, however, will be for the mouth of the river. Whoever controls the outlet controls as a matter of course, the whole stream. Portugal lays claim to it, and asks England's support, on the ground of occupation of the whole territory in the seventeenth century. Portugal still holds the Congo and Angola districts to the south of the river, and would be glad to annex Loango to the North. France proposes to seize all the territory it can lay hands on south of the equator, and French gun-boats and Portuguese have aroused the natives to a high pitch of excitement. England at first seemed inclined to listen to Portugal, on the ground that a more stable government was needed along the coast than the native chiefs could provide; but public sentiment in England sets strongly against this policy, and the Government must heed it. Portugal's colonial policy is selfish, if not rapacious. So little of beneficence has there been in its rule in Congo and Angola, that improvement cannot be found anywhere. Even the Catholic religion has well-nigh died out. France's designs are quite as ungenerous. At home the Republic is tolerant of all religions; in its colonies it is generally rigidly intolerant. If it obtains control of the Congo the great Protestant missionary enterprises will probably be suppressed, or be greatly hindered; and this would be extremely unfortunate, for these are only the beginning of what, we trust, will be the greatest work ever wrought in and for Africa. There are wonderful opportunities opening for missionary work, and, if the Societies improve them, the day is not far distant which will witness a chain of stations across the continent. If our own Missionary Society had the funds necessary for a mission up the Congo, it could undertake, we believe, no grander or more promising enterprise. Our Mission in Africa has not been the success which the cost in life, labor, and treasure ought to have secured. A small outlay, in the aggregate, among an inferior people, not contaminated by the vices of civilization, which reach those of the coast, and living in a more salurious climate than that of the deadly West Coast, would be likely to secure more satisfactory results.

Because, therefore, of the grand possibilities which the Congo opens to Christianity, civilization, and commerce; because it is the key to the great interior regions and population of the continent, we do not want to see it under the control of France or Portugal. Its importance to Europe is such as would justify its being internationalized, as the Danube is, in Europe. Let no national flag predominate on it. Let it be free as the ocean is, and let no flag be excluded except the slaver's flag. England is now thoroughly awakened to the importance of maintaining the Congo as a world's highway. It has subjects who want to develop trade on it. It has subjects connected with two Missionary Societies, who are laboring heroically to Christianize and civilize the people on its banks. England always takes care of her own. She believes in progress, she believes in humanity. What power has done so much on the high seas for the extinction of the slave-trade? The world expects England to do her duty on the Congo.—N. Y. Advocate.

The School Boy.

We bought him a box for his books and things,
And a cricket bag for his bat;
And he looked the brightest and best of kings,
Under his new straw hat.

We handed him into the railway train,
With a troop of his young compeers,
And we made as though it were dust and rain
Were filling our eyes with tears.

We looked in his innocent face to see
The sign of a sorrowful heart;
But he only shouldered his bat with glee,
And wondered when they would start.

'Twas not that he loved not as heretofore,
For the boy was tender and kind;
But his was a world that was all before,
And ours was a world behind.

'Twas not that his fluttering heart was cold,
For the child was loyal and true;
But the parents love the love that is old,
And the children the love that is new.

And we came to know that love is a flower
Which only groweth down;
And we scarcely spoke for the space of an hour,
As we drove back through the town.

A farmer's boy was once seen to, listen with great attention to an address. At the close of the next week his fellow-servants saw him cleaning his boots on Saturday evening. They asked him why he did not do them as usual Sunday morning. He replied, "Why, have you forgotten what was said last Sunday by the parson? He told us that we ought not to do any work on the Lord's day, which could be done as well on Saturday; and can't I clean the boots now as well as to-morrow?"—Children's Friend.

"All Hands Below."

A good story is told of a parrot who had always lived on board of a ship, but who escaped at one of the southern ports and took refuge in a church. Soon afterwards the congregation assembled, and the minister began preaching to them in his earnest fashion, saying there was no virtue in them—that every one of them would go to endless perdition unless they repented. Just as he spoke the sentence, up spoke the parrot from his hiding place:

"All hands below!"

To say that "all hands" were startled would be a mild way of putting it. The peculiar voice and unknown source had much more effect opon them than the parson's voice ever had. He waited a moment, and then, a shade or two paler, he repeated the warning.

"All hands bolow!" again rang out for somewhere.

The preacher started from his pulpit and looked anxiously around inquiring if anybody had spoken.

"All hands below!" was the only reply, at which the entire panic-stricken congregation got up, and a moment afterward they all bolted for the doors, the preacher trying his best to get there first, and during the time the mischievous bird kept up his yelling:

"All hands bolow!"

There was one old woman present who was lame, and could not get out as fast as the rest, and in a short time she was left entirely alone. Just as she was about to hobble out the parrot flew down, and, alighting on her shoulder, yelled in her ear:

"All hands below!"

"No, no Mr. Devil!" shrieked the old woman, "you can't mean me. I don't belong here. I go to the other church across the way."

Every man is in danger of becoming covetous, who does not systematically give to the cause of God. Human nature loves gold, and will love it idolatrously, unless its power over the heart is kept broken by giving away as the Lord prospers.—J. M. Pendleton.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, B. D., Assistant.

Subscriptions from now to end of 1883 taken at $1.

THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1883.

The Democratic Review is a new paper started June 7th at Natchitoches, La. It is a seven column weekly, edited by Charles V. Porter.

The Methodist preacher who sees no special need of asking his people to subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN had better go a fishing or a hunting.

James H. Davis writes from Bonnet Carre, La., that St. Matthew Benevolent Association was organized Oct. 12, 1882, and now numbers 130 members.

The success of Mormon missionaries in Western North Carolina is creating considerable excitement. The press recommends the shotgun as a remedy from the social pests.

The St. Mary Herald announces the closing of the public schools of that parish, after a session of two and a half months, which exhausted the apportionments of 1883. This is the result of grabs and repudiation by the party in power in this State.

Reliable authorities report 1200 towns west of the Mississippi to be without churches or regular religious exercises of any kind. Where are the stewards of the Lord's money? Such information as this should have the effect of stirring them up to duty.

We take pleasure in announcing that Mr. Geo. Ball, of Galveston, Texas, has made a munificent donation of $50,000 for the erection of a public school building in that city. This will doubtless give to Galveston the best elementary school building in the State. The Galveston Public School Teachers' Association held a special meeting to express their appreciation of Mr. Ball's generous gift to the city.

At Macon, Ga., a hanging being about to take place, a shrewd speculator erected tiers of seats near the gallows and sold them at $1 a seat. The Mayor decided he should pay a show license of $100, which he did. Such debauchery of legal penalties should find a corrective at the hands of the next Legislature of Georgia. The hanging of criminals ought not to take place in view of future mothers, young children and morbid humanity in general. Let executions be confined to the seclusion of jail yards.

The closing exercises at Straight University, 1883, were pleasing to its friends. A class of ten, eight white and two colored, were graduated from the law school. The oration of Gen. R. B. Elliott, on the "Advancement of Civilization in the United States," was of a superior order. President Alexander preached the baccalaureate sermon. At the annual meeting of the alumni Rev. A. E. P. Albert delivered an address reviewing Dr. [illegible]'s famous pamphlet, indicating careful thought and preparation. A. H. Colwell delivered a poem of some merit. There were a number of orations, good music and an appreciative audience to applaud.

God seems of late to have put his grasp upon the winds and given them all their fury. Does God Approve?

This is a question of great importance and one that should deeply interest every man. Nothing will satisfy the child of God but the assurance that God approves of his conduct. But God will not approve of that which is morally unclean, only those who separate themselves from the impure will he receive and make them his sons and daughters. To his ministers he says: "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." This may be the reason. It is the minister's duty to lift up his people, but he cannot lift them higher than himself. He is not merely a guide-board pointing out the way, much less a commander, or a driver. He is a leader and as such he must be an example, not of weakness, indecision, intemperance and wastefulness, but of real moral strength and Christian decision, temperance, and prudence. Let us come home. Now look for a moment at that tobacco chewing preacher, and you see an example of weakness, indecision, intemperance and wastefulness. That minister should be an example worthy of imitation but he is not. No father can say to his son follow his example, because it is evil. He is a miserable slave to a morbid appetite which he himself has created. In 1880 the tobacco bill of this country was over $700,000,000, while the salaries of all the ministers was about $7,000,000, and these tobacco-chewing and tobacco-smoking ministers help to make this shameful showing. What think you. Does God approve? We talk of a sanctified minister and a sanctified church, but what hope have we as long as ministers are the slaves of an unsanctified appetite. There are few exceptions, and only a few, as a rule the tobacco-chewing and tobacco-smoking preachers do not have that degree of prosperity as those who let it alone. If you doubt we ask you to sit down and count over those who indulge in the filthy practice and then count those who do not; and see who are the most successful in lifting up their people and bringing men to Christ. We ask you to make the investigation, and make it carefully, and note the prosperity of those ministers who are lovers of that poisonous weed. Here in this number of the SOUTHWESTERN we stand and like Moses ask: "Who is on the Lord's side?" Let them from this day stop their tobacco-chewing and tobacco-smoking and the Lord will receive them and be a Father unto them and they shall be his sons and daughters.

The Northern's Edeavor to Explain.

Certainly, the SOUTHWESTERN has no desire to misinterpret or misrepresent any statement, and if it ever does this it will be because it does not comprehend the question. We understand that the Northern Christian Advocate under certain circumstances would be in favor of schools exclusively for whites. Are we correct? It would also have "the church free to prosecute her work as best she can under the conditions which existing race prejudices in the South present, provided she remain faithful in her teachings of Christian brotherhood." To this we say, Amen; and yet we are in doubt. By the doctrine of "Christian brotherhood," we understand the oneness of all who are in Christ—Christ represented in the person of each. Dr. Warren is a Christian gentleman. Will he be a little particular and tell us under what circumstances he would favor the erection of churches or schools from which he would recommend that certain of the brethren should be excluded? At one time he says he would have the church "remain faithful in her teachings and administration to the doctrine of Christian brotherhood." And in the same article he says the church "would not be justified in demanding the highest standard of doctrine on the subject of human brotherhood as the condition on which this work should be carried forward." We are powerfully perplexed. We cannot see how the church can "remain faithful in her teachings and administration of the doctrine of Christian brotherhood," unless she "demand the acceptance of her highest standard." Grant for a moment that the standard is too high, we want to know how the church can be "faithful in her teachings and administration," unless she demand the acceptance of the highest standard? Dr. Warren indicates that on this question of "Christian brotherhood," the church has a number of standards, and it is only her highest that she "would not be justified in demanding the acceptance of as the condition on which this work should be carried forward" in the South. We are anxious to have the Northern formulate the doctrine of "Christian brotherhood," and let us, who are here in this field, know how far we can go and "be justified." True, the editor of the SOUTHWESTERN may eat and sleep with his colored brothers, and white brothers, too; he believes in manhood and brotherhood—not in colorhood or whitehood. And to the question, "would he refuse to preach to white men unless they should consent to eat and sleep with black men?" he answers, No! a thousand times, No! He preaches to all men; but he does not have one standard for colored men, and another for white men; one for sinners north of the Ohio, and another for those south of it. And should he with some colored brother call at a house where caste and not Christ reigned, and they should say to him, come in, and to his colored brother, sit thou there, his idea of Christian brotherhood would not allow him to enter. We know a little of the illiteracy and degradation of the South; daily we come in contact with it; but we "preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks foolishness." Everywhere, for every sinner we have but one Christ, and all who are in him are one. To some it may be a "stumbling-block," to others "foolishness." We have nothing to do with that; it is our duty to preach this one Christ, and if adhering to this is "tying the hands of the church," we say let them be tied, for she will accomplish more in her work of education and evangelization in the South with her hands thus tied by Christian principles, than by yielding to the wicked prejudices of men under the plea of "Christian expediency." The only way to conquer is to adhere to Christian precepts. We cannot compromise in any particular with the sin of caste. The church has said that every law of Christ was violated when color or race determined chattlehood, when church members chattleized men, when ministers held slaves, when color canceled testimony in church trials; but we think the law is equally violated when schools or chuches are erected from which persons are excluded because of race or color. Caste is a harpy, and caste schools and churches are a libel on God. And we say here once for all, and to all, if our church shall in any way by her action reorganize, or attempt to regulate the spirit of caste, she will indicate a policy that must work ruin to our work in the South. Caste is a sin not to be regulated, but prohibited. The colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church are facing the sunrise of a better day. Discriminations on account of color are not agreeable. They ask to be treated as brethren in the same church, not as colored brethren, or white brethren, but simply as brethren. The so-called "Christian expediency," which would divide church and educational work on the color-line, means disintegration of our work, and to make it the common prey of other competing denominations, rapidly advancing in their acceptation of the truths of Christian brotherhood and manhood.

The catalogue of Fisk University, 1882-3, is on our table, with its interesting outline of the work and needs of that institution.

Houston.

Houston, Texas, is the county seat of Harris county, and is pleasantly situated on Buffalo bayou at the head of navigation and is about fifty miles from Galveston. It is the chief railway center of the State, and presents the unique condition of an inland city possessing at the same time the advantages of a seaport. The ship channel in process of construction will allow steamships drawing twelve feet of water to discharge their cargoes at the wharves of the city. In its commercial, manufacturing, educational and religious advantages it takes rank among the most progressive cities of the southwest. There are no less than nine railways radiating from this city to all parts of the State and country. The following comparative statement shows the progress of the city in population, wealth and commercial importance. In 1850 the population was 3,112, in 1860, 6,047, in 1870, 11,5 4, in 1882, 20,000. The exports of Texas products for the year ending Sept. 30, 1881, were over eleven millions of dollars. The increase of the receipts and shipments of cotton according to the statement of the Houston Cotton Exchange and Board of Trade during the past ten years has been over 500 per cent. The manufacturing interests of the city are constantly increasing. Probably no city in the southwest has a better organized and conducted system of public free schools, kept open for the full scholastic term of nine months each year. All the leading religious denominations have church organizations and houses of worship in this city, and some of them are buildings of real beauty. The Houston Seminary, an institution of high grade, offering educational advantages to all people, is located here. A valuable property known as the Vosmer estate, embracing beautiful grounds and ample accommodations for all buildings that may be needed in the future, has been purchased and a school was opened last fall in the old mansion, connected with the estate. The school is under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Campbell, one of the most successful teachers from Illinois, and has thus early had 150 students enrolled. Certainly Houston has entered upon a new and marvelous era of permanent prosperity. About forty per cent of the population are colored.

A Legalized Murder.

An Atlanta, Ga., dispatch dated June 6th, says: "This morning a child was to Toben Brooking's unmarried daughter, in Baldwin county. She confessed that York Cooper, a negro, was the father. Brooking thereupon killed Cooper, and the coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide." This is another repitition of the old story. A negro is charged with crime, and he is run out of the country, shot down or hung to the nearest tree. In this instance, in Georgia, a State, the laws of which prohibits the intermarriage of the races with a vengeance, a colored man, charged with illicit connection with a white girl, is killed by the girl's father, and "the coroner's jury returned a verict of justifiable homicide." If this is not legalized murder, it must be a crime without a name. Cooper might, or might not, have been guilty of the crime lodged against him; but, conceding his guilt, and that Brooking was justified in killing him for ruining his (Brooking's) daughter, what ought to be done with the thousand wicked and worthless white wretches—professional seducers—who prowl around, at night, in the colored people's social entertainments, collations, etc., and ruin the daughters of some of our most respectable colored people? What ought to be done with those daily traducers, nightly polluters of negro wives and daughters, whom they consider the natural and lawful prey of their lust? If colored men arise in their strength and manhood to take vengeance upon the thousands of such white destroyers of their race, will coroner's juries, throughout the South, return verdicts of justifiable homicide; as in the case of this white man who murdered the colored man Cooper in Georgia? We fear not, for history and experience tell us too many bloody stories to the contrary. A colored man needs but be suspected of crime to hang to the next tree. Indeed it has really become dangerous in some parts of the South for a colored man to even look upon a white woman. Her spite and hatred against a negro, like that of Herodias against John the Baptist, is liable to cost him his life any day. God hasten on the time when equal justice shall be meted out to every race alike.

Presiding Elders' Convention.

The chief interest in the late Presiding Elders' Convention, held in Minneapolis, Minn., was the discussion and recommendation by a vote of twenty-six ayes to fourteen noes on the proposition to repeal or remove the disciplinary limitation of the pastoral term of service. That these presiding elders should vote as they did will surprise no one, we presume. It may give a little impetus to the coming discussion of this question. And while there is doubtless a desire among some of our ministers and churches to modify the law of limitation, we do not think that there is the least desire so to change our organic law as to remove all limitation and thus do away with our itinerancy. In fact we do not suppose that the General Conference itself has power to effect a change so revolutionary in its nature. We concede that body has power to modify, but the right to change and modify does not imply the power to destroy. But the action of these twenty-six presiding elders does not disturb us much. We prefer to wait. Let the question be discussed, and by and by the whole Church will speak, and perhaps these men may be sorry that they spoke quite so soon. In the meantime let the presiding elders and pastors keep preaching, and if at the end of one year they have not won some souls to Christ we should say that it was time for them to be removed, law or no law.

A Sensible Judge.

A teacher in one of the public schools in St. Louis who had occasion to punish one of his pupils, was arrested and tried for assault and battery. The judge before whom the case was brought in summing up the case closed as follows:

Four years' experience in the administration of criminal law convinces me that the boys who become criminals are the boys who don't get whipped, and when it is remembered that a large percentage of the bolder crimes known to the law are committed by youths ranging in age from 14 to 20 years, the question arises: Is it better to whip first or imprison afterward? Boys who from infancy are allowed to follow the road of their own vicious inclinations go from bad to worse and unrestrained to their ultimate ruin. The defendant is discharged.

Strong wholesome family government is one of the great needs of the times. God seemed to have a special regard for the man who commanded his household.

Brother, do you owe any accounts to the SOUTHWESTERN? If so please search the scripture, and find the gospel text: "Pay me that thou owest." That is our present urgent request to you. Heed this text. We need the money. Our printers are good men, who are thankful for fresh air and sunshine, but they can't launch out the SOUTHWESTERN every week upon air and sunshine, and the empty praises and sweet promises of delinquent agents and subscribers; they need other and more substantial lever, which only the ready cash can command. Come, now, pay up "that thou owest."

The Methodist Ministers' Relief Association, of Boston, through its clerk, Rev. Joseph H. Mansfield, has just paid the family of the late Dr. L. S. Weed, of the New York East Conference, $1879.09. This Association is composed entirely of Methodist ministers, and is doing a grand work of benevolence for the families of our deceased preachers who have belonged to it. It commends itself to the Methodist preachers of the whole country in preference to any local or sectional organization. The plan is simple and almost works itself. When there is a death in the Society an assessment is made on each member and every dollar collected goes to the family of the deceased brother. There are now over 800 members all over our work who are members of this Society. No insurance organization in the world can be safer. There are no initiation fees and annual dues, only assessment in case of death.

We call the attention of the readers of the SOUTHWESTERN to the card of J. R. Morris, Houston, Texas. They will find Mr. Morris an intelligent, honest business gentleman, always pleased to wait upon customers who pay for their goods. We speak from personal experience and observation.

Alexandria, with a population of over 2500, reports, "no deaths," for the month of May.

PERSONAL.

—Senator Brown, of Georgia, has the largest income of any man in the South.

—Mrs. Sue Burke, has accepted the commissionership of Lafayette Square from Mayor Behan.

—Mr. James A. Harris, the orange king of Florida, received $63,000 for his orange crop this year.

—Olin Willard, youngest son of Rev. W. H., and Annie E. Kincaid, died suddenly on Monday morning, May 28.

—United States Senator Jones of Florida, was given a banquet at Westminister by the Irish members of Parliament!

—Senator Wade Hampotn has killed nine bears and much smaller game on his plantation in Mississippi during the past three months.

—Miss Edith, daughter of Hon. Hamilton Fish, of New York, on the 7th inst. married Hugh, son of Sir Stafford Northcote, of England.

—William C. Whittaker, who voted for license in the Bridgeton (N. J.) City Council, has been expelled from Trinity Methodist Episcopal church on the charge of "aiding and abetting the liquor traffic."

—The German Emperor remains ha'e and hearty, notwithstanding his great age, and goes out to public demonstrations far more than his chancellor, who now seems plagued with all sorts of physical ills, in addition to his annoyances from political opponents.

—Mrs. J. H. MCarty, wife of a former pastor of Ames M. E. Church this city, died at her home in Elmira, N. Y., May 28. She was the daughter of Dr. J. Espy Stevenson, of Kitanning, Pa., and her friends here speak highly of her Christian character and worth.

—Ex-Governor Seymour reads many newspapers and goes out but little. A man once stole a load of wood from the Governor's estate and broke down on the road. Many drivers passed him, but the Governor alighted and not only aided him, but lent him a strap. He knew that the wood was his own.

—The tomb of Thaddeus Stevens, in Lancaster, Pa., is in a small corner lot, crowded with humble graves. The monument is a huge block of Vermont granite, and about it grows wild roses, wood violets, and dandelions in the rank grass. His former residence is now owned by his old colored housekeeper, and her son occupies a part of it as a barber shop.—Pittsburgh Advocate.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Elizabeth Hebert, Plaquemine: "We ask for help. There are a faithful few here trying to build a M. E. church, and who will not stop until it is completed. It is needed here; there is much opposition from other churches. Our pastor, Rev. George Lacy, is hard at work and is much beloved. Our expenses are heavy, but we are determined to stand up until our work is completed."

S. R. Hason: "I was appointed by Elder Duncan to the charge of Scott circuit. There are three Sunday-schools, and we need tracts and books."

Mrs. M. L. Dale has returned from a visit around the North New Orleans district in the interest of the Woman's Home Missionary work. She organized societies at Thibodeaux, White Hall, Napoleonville and Woodlawn. A very great interest was manifested by pastors and people at above named points. There are in operation several mission schools largely attended. Mrs. Dale has been careful in selecting teachers, and has secured competent Christians and Methodists."

F. D. Bowers, Springfield: "The Lord is surely blessing Springfield this year. We started with a membership of 20, and by subscription cards and aid of friends, shall be able to repair the church, which we have tried to do for eight or ten years. On third Sunday of May we collected $31.55—notwithstanding a hard rain prevented a great many friends. Rev. H. Green, H. Carter, J. Washington, C. Clay, Wm. Ramsay and A. Adams were preachers on that day."

Next Sabbath, June 17th, has been set apart for Children's Day at Ames M. E. Church, New Orleans. The exercises will consist of recitations by the children, responsive readings, short addresses by the pastor, and others.

Cornelia Wayman, Clinton: "For the past few weeks we have had revival meetings. There were 50 additions, 25 converts, and several backsliders reclaimed. It closed with a grand union meeting. Rev. J. Qualls, H. James and Charles Moore were present. Our pastor, W. P. Forest, preached the closing sermon. Collection $38.70. Sister Hester Williams met us on her first quarterly round, and found the Woman's Home Mission work still going on. She spoke words of encouragement. The church is increasing under Bro. Forest."

MISSISSIPPI.

Anthony Williams: "I attended Sunday-school at Brookhaven, and had a glorious time."

J. W. Stewart, Tupelo: "Since Rev. James Price has been pastor, Sunday-school and the church have much enlarged."

A. S. Ricks, Canton: "I found members here scattered, and poor in spirit and finances. Now 75 children are in Sunday-school, and literature in their hands. I have added 16 to the church, six of them converts."

TEXAS.

A. Harris, Willis: "Elder Pullam held our second conference. The brethren were all present and made encouraging reports. The church at Danville is in good condition. I find 70 members,—Methodists of the right stripe. The elder preached to a large audience. Two were received in full membership. Collection $9.40.

D. C. Brown, Mooresville: "Elder Gates held the quarterly conference. The reports were good. The elder talked to the children and preached an inspiring sermon. TENNESSEE.

H. Dunlap: "Elder Price held the quarterly, with a large attendance. Reports were good. Paid elder $8.50; pastor $37.25—and other collections. At Peter's Grove we had services long to be remembered. On following Thursday night Elder Price organized our church in Paris. We expect to commence building right away, and are preparing for payments on the materials."

KENTUCKY.

Asbury Church, Lexington, Rev. W. H. Evans, pastor, on Sunday week, raised $99 toward the erection of the new Church. The subscription was $250.—Western.

The State Central Express of Alexandria referring to the observance of Children's Day among our people in that city, says: "Fadeless Flowers" is the name of the order of services with which the Sunday-School Society of Murray-Street M. E. Church will celebrate Children's Day, Sunday, the 10th inst. Children's Day is observed by the officers and scholars in nearly all Methodist Sunday-Schools in the world; and besides being a day set apart for collecting money to increase the children's educational fund of the church, it is also an occasion of select singing, reading essays, etc., by the children. Our colored friends of Murray-Street Church intend to make the occasion very imposing, judging from the preparations they are making, and we bespeak for them the success they deserve."

Sixth Street Delivered.

MR. EDITOR: It seems to me that a brief statement as to the condition of Sixth Methodist Episcopal Church may not be unacceptable to your paper. Rev. Morris J. Dyer our present pastor is doing effective work upon this charge. He came among us February 1882, and by his quiet, gentle demeanor, and enlarged Christian spirit, soon won his way into the favor of the church and congregation. He found a small congregation, and about forty good but discouraged members of the church, a Sunday-school with fifteen or twenty in attendance, and a debt of over $800 upon the church and nearly every one saying that it could never be paid. The people soon saw that for once they had a Christian gentleman for their pastor and they rallied to his call. Bro. Dyer alone, and before his God resolved with God's help and blessing to redeem the church. In his preaching he was plain and practical, in his life he was an example worthy of imitation. The Lord wonderfully blessed his labors. The people came to hear him preach and were in large numbers converted to God. The congregation has more than doubled, the Sunday-school under the superintendency of Bro. H. Wilson, a young man who has been converted since Bro. Dyer came among us, has an average attendance of over ninety with one hundred and thirty-four scholars enrolled. Nearly one hundred have been added to the church, and the entire debt of the church has been paid. Yes Mr. Editor, the entire $800 and interest has all been paid, the Trustees have had the notes discharged and Sixth Street is free. We know that the Lord has done this work for us, and that He through our Presiding Elder and the Bishop sent Bro. Dyer among us and made him His instrument in saving this church. We are loyal to God and we thank him, we thank Bro. Dyer, the Presiding Elder, the Bishop, and we thank [illegible] God, Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal Church is free.

A Scientific Discovery.

A New and Most Important Theory on One of the Most Vital Questions of the Day.

If any one had informed Queen Elizabeth in her palmiest days that she could have been seated in her palace in London and conversed with Sir Walter Raleigh in his North Carolina home; receiving a reply from him within an hour's time, she would have declared it to be a miracle. And yet, had they lived in the present day, this apparent miracle would most readily have been witnessed and not seem at all strange or unnatural. The truth is, new principles are coming into existance, and the operation of many laws unknown in the past is being fully understood in the present. In no way does this fact come more forcibly to the mind than in the care and treatment of the human body. Millions of people have died in past ages from some insignificant or easily controlled cause which is thoroughly understood now and readily handled. Consumption during the entire past has been considered an incurable disease. And yet it is demonstrated that it has been and can be cured, even after it has had a long run. Dr. Felix Oswald has just contributed a notable article on this subject to the Popular Science Monthly. He regards consumption as pulmonary scrofula. The impurities of the blood produce a constant irritation in the lungs, thus destroyed their delicate tissues and causing death. His theory shows conclusively that consumption is a blood disease. It has its origin primarily in a deranged condition of the kidneys or liver, the only two organs of the body, aside from the lungs, that purify the blood. When the kidneys or liver are diseased they are in a sore or lacerated state which communicates poison to every ounce of blood that passes through them. This poisonous blood circulates through the system and comes to the lungs, where the poison is deposited, causing decomposition in the finely formed cells of the lungs. Any diseased part of the body has contaminating power, and yet the blood which is the life of the system, is brought into direct contact with these poisoned organs, thus carrying contagion to all parts of the body. Bishop Jesse T. Peck, D. D., LL. D., whose death has been so recently regretted, is reported to have died of pneumonia, which medical authorities affirm indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. It is well known, moreover, that for several years he has been the victim of severe kidney trouble, and the pneumonia which finally terminated his life was only the last result of the previous blood poisoning. The deadly matter which is left in the lungs by the impure blood clogs up and finally chokes the patient. When this is accomplished rapidly it is called pneumonia or quick consumption; when slowly, consumption, but in any event it is the result of impure blood, caused by diseased kidneys and liver.

These are facts of science, and vouched for by all the leading physicians of the day. They show the desirability—nay, the necessity, of keeping these most important organs in perfect condition, not only to insure health, but also to escape death. It has been fully shown, to the satisfaction of nearly every unprejudiced mind, that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is the only known remedy that can cure and keep in health the great blood-purifying organs of the body. It acts directly upon these members, healing all ulcers which may have formed in them and placing them in a condition to purify and not poison the blood. This is no idle statment nor false theory. Mr. W. C. Beach, foreman of the Buffalo, N. Y., Rubber Type Foundry was given up to die by both physicians and friends. For four years he had a terrible cough, accompanied by night sweats, chills, and all the well known symptoms. He spent a season south and found no relief. He says: "I finally concluded to try Warner's Safe Cure and in three months I gained twenty pounds, recovered my lost energy and my health was fully retored." The list could be prolonged indefinitely but enough has been said to prove to every sufferer from pulmonic troubles, that there is no reason to be discouraged in the least, and that health can be restored.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON XII, June 17. END OF FIRST MISSIONARY JOURNEY. (Acts xiv, 19-28.)

Saul and Barnabas were the first who preached the Gospel to the Gentiles at large. They had many to hear and relieve, but a great many hated them. At Lystra they stoned Paul and left him lying outside the city. Some friends who loved him came and stood around him, thinking him to be dead. All at once Paul arose and walked into the city with them. God does not often do such things, but God could if he knew it was best. God had work for Paul and so he raised him to work for him. Saul and Barnabas were over two years on this first missionary trip and now they are going home; but before going they visited all the places where they had preached and talked again about Jesus. Then they sailed for home and when they reached it all the Church came together to hear their report.

Now every boy and girl may be a real missionary. You can't go to strange countries to preach to the heathen, but you can save your money and help to send some one who can go to them and other poor people who need teachers here in America. But you may be a real home missionary; that is do all the good you can to every one. You can often help keep baby when mamma or nurse is tired. That is real good work for little girls and boys too. All you need is to watch, and every day you will have a chance to show that you want to obey Jesus. If people see that following him makes his little ones kind and loving it is a real missionary sermon to them.—Western.

The Housekeeper.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Faith.

We housekeepers have not much time to read, amid the many things we have to do each day; but it is well to make reading the Bible one of the most important of those duties, and if we cannot find time to read much else, we can think. When we do such familiar things as kneading bread, making pies, and preparing vegetables for cooking, or mending our husband's and children's clothing, our minds can be busy, not about those things especially, but many other subjects may claim our attention. I have tried it and I have found that I make fewer mistakes and my work seems less laborious. I have been thinking much about faith lately. People seem especially interested in that subject nowdays. We would like to know something about it. To comprehend it fully in all its relations is probably beyond the reach of mortals; yet we may see its effects around us. The principle has always been within us, forming our daily lives and controlling our actions. It is the power that connects us with God. It is really the telegraph upon which we send our messages to Him and from whence the replies come. It is the power that binds us fellow-beings together. Faith in whatever is good, purifies our virtues and elevates us above the world; but its exercise in whatever is bad may cause us many sorrows. It has caused the death of the body, and it has healed its diseases. I once heard a physician say that he often gave his patients some simple drug knowing well that it would do them good only in proportion to the amount of faith they had in it. People often have much faith who have no idea of God, and that is why some are easily humbugged. Worthless quack medicines have appeared to effect cures upon the credulous. Dr. Monck, a famous imposter in Brooklyn, is now making much money and a great stir, by praying for sick people; and it is asserted that many are positively benefited. It has been clearly proven that he is a bad man. He is pointing to a way in which he himself is too unworthy to walk. The heathen cling to their idols, because they have found that sometimes faith in them has done them good, and in their ignorance they have believed the good came from the idols. It is strange that there are those who are willing to exercise faith in such weak and unworthy objects when they can go to "Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think." He knows our needs and he knows just how to relieve them. He can forgive our sins and root them all out. "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The worth of that promise no one can begin to realize but those who have claimed it by faith in Jesus' name. There is more still He can do. If our faith is weak He can strengthen it. He can teach us what to trust Him for and He can give us entire willingness to have His will done; just what we need at any time, we may have. "Only believe. All things are possible to him that believeth. Ask in faith nothing wavering. Ask and ye shall receive. For every one that asketh receiveth." O, how often we feel the need of just these promises! How we reach out for something to cling to! We would like something tangible to believe in. What needless pains we bear before we are willing to trust in the Savior!

Luther, in the midst of great [illegible] the just shall live [illegible] So much compre[illegible] in only that! He wanted [illegible] familiar word in every household. We in these days have learned that we can be very fruitful in good works, only after we have trusted in the Lord for guidance.

We have reason to believe that God turns us not empty away when we ask Him for temporal blessings. "If ye being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give good gifts to them that ask Him." Of course spiritual needs are of the first importance. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and these things shall be added unto you." Many are now believing that by faith in God we may be healed of our diseases. "Who forgiveth all our iniquities, who healeth all our diseases. If ye ask any thing in my name I will do it. Is anything too hard for the Lord?"

One who has heard the evangelist, Harrison, who is so very successful in winning souls to Christ, told me that the secret of his success was not in his eloquence, nor were his words very convincing, but in his simple, child-like faith. He just asked, and he just believed, and the answer just came.

I have just been reading in a paper a letter from a lady who is very benevolent, but who does not have much of this world's goods: Her own words are: "I cannot tell you how often I have laid my empty purse upon the altar of prayer, and asked my Father to open a way for me to work; and he answered my prayers in many ways delightful to remember. I could but say, would that the full purses were as consecrated as this, then indeed would these barren places blossom as the rose." And it is indeed so. God does fill empty purses as well as empty souls. Temporal, physical and spiritual needs are all supplied by faith in Jesus' name, or the Bible is not true. O that we may make ourselves as familiar with the promises of God, that we may always be able to exercise that precious faculty, that our loving Father has given us, to relieve us of our sorrows here and to prepare us to live with Him forever.

MEAT SAUCE.—A hot sauce for meats, which will be found very piquant and appetizing, says Aunt Addie, may be made by chopping two onions very fine and adding them to a can of tomatoes; also a teasponful each of cayenne pepper, cinnamon, cloves, salt, just a grating of nutmeg and a pinch of ground mace. Let these boil together until the tomatoes are thickening; then take from the fire and stir into it a cupful of strong vinegar.

A POTATO PUFF.—According to the Binghamton Meteor, a nice potato puff can be made after this style: Take a large cup of mashed potato, stir in two tablespoonsful of melted butter, beating to a cream; add two eggs, beaten thoroughly, and a teacup of cream or milk and salt, bake in a quick oven until brown. It is very nice for lunch.

ANGEL CAKE.—This is Christian Mugel's recipe: Beat one and half pints of the whites of eggs until stiff. Mix together one pound of sugar, one pound of flour and half an ounce of cream of tartar, sifted with the flour. Beat in the whites of egg and bake in large moulds. Remarks—Do not grease the moulds for this cake and bake in a moderate oven.

CORNED BEEF.—A good rule to follow when boiling corned beef is to allow half an hour to the pound after it has commenced to boil.

AN appetizing dish is made by boiling some macaroni till it is tender; then cut some pieces of cold-boiled or fried ham and mix with the macaroni; melt a lump of butter in a saucepan, and put the ham and macaroni in it; add a little milk to moisten it. Send hot to the table.

DELICIOUS PUFFS for tea are made by beating the yolks of six eggs till they are very light; stir in a pint of sweet milk, a large pinch of salt, the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth, and flour enough to make a batter about as thick as boiled custard. Bake in gem-pans in a quick oven.

BOILED ICING.—Boil one pound of sugar with a little water until it will spin in threads when dropped from the end of a spoon; take it from the fire and add immediately the well-beaten whites of three eggs, stirring them in very quickly. Flavor with lemon or any flavoring preferred.

SOUP COLORING.—To make burned sugar for soup coloring, stir about half a pound of sugar and a tabespoonful of water in a porcelain saucepan over the fire until it becomes a bright dark brown color. Be careful that it does not blacken or burn, and stir all the time. Then add a teacupful of water and a little salt; let it boil again a few minutes; when cool, strain and cork tight in a bottle for use.

BREAKFAST ROLLS.—Take two quarts of flour, rub into it two tablespoons of butter, one teaspoon of sugar, and one of salt. Scald one pint of sweet milk, and when partially cooked, put in it one-half cup yeast. Make a hole in the flour, and pour this in, stirring in very carefully just enough flour from the the edges of the little well to make a very thin batter. If this is done after dinner, at early tea time, it will be light, then knead it well. It requires no additional flour. When thoroughly light, roll out, and cut with a large biscuit cutter, butter and fold like a turn over, and set them over night in the cellar, where they will rise slowly and be ready to bake for breakfast.

If We Would.

If we would but check the speaker
When he spoils his neighbor's fame;
If we would but help the erring,
Ere we utter words of blame;
If we would, how many might we
Turn from paths of sin and shame.

Ah, the wrongs that might be righted
If we would but see the way!
Ah, the pains that might be lightened
Every hour and every day.
If we would but hear the pleadings
Of the hearts that go astray.

In each life, however lowly,
There are seeds of mighty good;
Still, we shrink from souls appealing
With a timid "if we could;"
But God who judgeth all things
Knows the truth is, "if we would."

Mr. John G. Whittier's recent letter concerning prohibitory liquor legislation having been misunderstood by some persons, he has written another, defining his position more clearly, in which he says: "In answer to thy note let me say briefly and decidedly that I have never swerved in my hearty approval of the labors of the friends of temperance, especially the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, for prohibition, the ballot for women, and the waking up of the people to the danger of intemperance and the sale of intoxicating liquor. I know of no instrumentallity more potent than the Union in rendering prohibition practicable by educating the masses of the people, and especially the young, preparing them to not only vote for prohibition but to enforce it when it becomes a law. Of the right and duty of prohibition I have never doubted, but we can only have it effectual when the people are made to see and feel its necessity.

A most urgent need of the times is, that all of us who profess and call ourselves Christian go back to the Bible; not to ask questions concerning the length of the day in the Book of Genesis or of the exact number of quails that flocked down on the wanderers in the desert; nor as to the thermometer temperature of the Babylon furnace; nor of the restorative power of the bones of the prophet Elijah; nor of the possible proclamation of the gospel of salvation by Christ to the spirits in prison. But to go to the Bible as hungry men go to a dinner; that we begin, by a heart prepared through prayer, to read it as the very voice of God to us, are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of the H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were use in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Be good, then you may hope to do good. They should be pure hands that are reached out to lead souls to Christ.

Messrs. Fleming Bros.:

Sirs,—I take this opportunity of informing you of the benefits I have derived from Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills. I have for two years past been afflicted with a severe pain over the eyes, accompanied with a nervousness and sense of dizziness; a malady beyond the power and skill of our physicians to relieve and cure, caused, as far as I myself could judge, by a diseased state of the liver and stomach. Some of the doctors tried bleeding, and various other remedies were tried, but all in vain, for the deep-rooted disease still stuck fast. At last, I procured a box of your valuable Liver Pills from a druggist here, and found, after taking a portion of them, that the disease and painful sensation over the eyes have almost entirely left me. I will close by advising all those afflicted as I have been, to procure the valuable medicine at once and save much time and pain, with little expense. With sincere gratitude and respect, I remain, yours respectfully,

GEO. W. RUSSELL, Toronto.

New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams, No. 248 Seventh street, testify that they have both been suffering with the liver complaint for about five years, during which time they have spent a large amount of money and tried many remedies, but to no purpose. Finally, hearing of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., they purchased four boxes, which they took according to the directions accompanying each box, and now pronounce themselves perfectly cured of that distressing disease.

The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

Found At Last.

A little girl stood by her mother's death bed and heard her last words: "Jessie, find Jesus."

When her mother was buried her father took to drink, and Jessie was left to such care as a poor neighbor could give her.

One day she wandered off with a little basket in her hand, and trudged through one street after another, not knowing where she went. She had started out to find Jesus. At last she stopped, from utter weariness, in front of a saloon. A young man staggered out of the door and almost stumbled over her. He uttered the name of Him she was seeking. "Can you tell me where He is?" she inquired.

"What did you say?" he asked.

"Will you please tell me where Jesus Christ is? for I must find him."

The man looked at her curiously for a minute without speaking; and then his face sobered and he said in a broken, husky voice, hopelessly:

"I don't know, child—I don't know where He is."

At length the little girl's wanderings brought her to a park. A woman, evidently a Jewess, was leaning against the railing, looking disconsolately at the green grass and the trees.

Jessie went up to her timidly.

"Perhaps she can tell me where He is," was the child's thought. In a low, hesitating voice she asked the woman:

"Do you know Jesus Christ?"

The Jewess turned fiercely to face her questioner, and in a tone of suppressed passion exclaimed:

"Jesus Christ is dead!"

Poor Jessie trudged on, but soon a rude boy jostled against her, and snatching her basket from her hand threw it in the street. Crying, she ran to pick it up. The horses of a passing street-car tramped her under their feet—and she knew no more till she found herself stretched on a hospital bed.

When the doctors came that night they knew that she could not live until morning. In the middle of the night, after she had been lying very still for a long time, apparently asleep, she suddenly opened her eyes, and the nurse, bending over her, heard her whisper, while her face lighted up with a smile that had some of heaven's own gladness in it:

"O Jesus, I have found you at last!"

Then the tiny lips were hushed, but the questioning spirit had received an answer.—Old Colony Herald.

For men who "could not take care of themselves if set free" certain colored residents of Richmond, Va., have done pretty well. Rev. James Holmes is worth $3000; Joseph D. Most of this money is invested in real estate. In one ward there are more than one hundred colored people who own property varying in value from $2500 to $5000, and in Manchester, a suburb of Richmond, about twenty. One of the finest residences in the city is owned by Dr. Ferguson, assistant superintendent of the Central Lunatic Asylum. Many gentlemen conduct successful business. There are some thirty colored teachers in and around Richmond, which supports fourteen colored churches, mostly of the Baptist denomination.

Forty Year's Experience of an Old Nurse.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never failing success by millions of mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhoea, griping in the bowels, and wind colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price twenty-five cents a bottle.

That poor bedridden, invalid wife, sister, mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters. Will you let them suffer? when so easily cured!

R. T. Louis, Rodney, Miss., writes: "Mrs. Liddy Chase, a colored lady at St. Joseph La., is now in the 118th year of her age, she has cut teeth three times since the age of forty, and is now cutting her fourth set. She does all her dress-making and sewing, can see a man a mile off; she walks 2 miles twice a day and back on Sunday to the church, and is always first in the church at each service."

Advertising Cheats!!

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

To induce people

To give them one trial, which so proves their value, that they will never use anything else."

"The Remedy so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation.

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along pining away all the time for years,

"The doctors doing her no good;

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about.

"Indeed! Indeed!

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we have shunned before using it."—The Parents.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable.

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters.—A Lady of Utica, N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A WONDERFUL [illegible] d
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Mrs. Patsey Edwards a member of Trinity M. E. Church, Houston, Texas, departed this life at 2 o'clock in the morning of May 20. She was sixty years of age but was as sprightly in her movements, and as faithful in her attendance at church as if she had been only twenty. When her pastor read to her the words "Fear thou not" &c., she said "I am not afraid." We believe Sister Edwards has gone to rest. She was much beloved by our people, but by none more than her pastor. In her, he loses a faithful friend and the church a strong member.

GENTS—Whoever you are, I don't know; but I thank the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago I had a slight shock of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that they are now as steady as they ever were. It used to take both hands to write, but now my good right hand writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune, and confer the greates blessing on your fellow men that was ever conferred on mankind.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Owing to the unprecedented success attending the sale of Dr. Scott's renowned $3.00 Corset, and a very general inquiry for Electric Corsets of less price, but possessing the same therapeutic quality and elegance of shape, the Doctor has decided to place upon the market a full line of these beautiful and invaluable articles, which will now retail at $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $3.00; thus bringing them within the reach of all. These Corsets, we are assured, possess real merit, and apart from their "Electric" quality, are well worth the price asked. 1883 NEW PRICES! 1883

Dr. Scott's Electric Corset

$1, $1.50, $2, $3.

Owing to the unprecedented success attending the sale of our $3 Electric Corset, and the constant demand for Electric Corsets of less price, but of the same therapeutic value, we have decided to place upon the market A HANDSOME LINE OF ELECTRIC CORSETS, ranging in price from $1 to $3, thus bringing them within the reach of all. They are equally charged with Electro-Magnetism, the difference being only in the quality of material. The two higher grades are made of extra fine English Sateen, while those of lesser price are of correspondingly good quality, made on the latest approved Parisian models, thus imparting a graceful and attractive figure to the wearer. By a recently invented process of boning or cording, we are enabled to offer to the public an ABSOLUTELY UNBREAKABLE Corset, and will guarantee them as such with all ordinary wear. Being "Electric," "Unbreakable," the true French shape, and of better material than those ordinarily sold at the prices, these Corsets will command the preference of the purchaser. They are constructed on scientific principles, generating an exhilarating, health-giving current to the whole system. Their therapeutic value is unquestioned, and they quickly cure, in a marvelous manner, Nervous Complaints, Spinal Difficulties, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Numbness, Dyspepsia, Liver and Kidney troubles, Impaired Circulation, Constipation, and all other diseases peculiar to women, particularly those of sedentary habits. They also become, when constantly worn, equalizing agents in all cases of extreme fatness or leanness, by imparting to the system the required amount of "odic force" which Nature's law demands. Scientists are daily making known to the world the indisputable beneficial effects of Electro-Magnetism, when properly and scientifically applied to the human body in this manner; and it is also affirmed by professional men that there is hardly a disease which Electricity and Magnetism will not benefit or cure, and all medical men daily practice the same. Ask your own physician!

DR. W. A. HAMMOND, of New York,

Late Surgeon-General of the U. S., an eminent authority, publishes almost miraculous cures coming under his notice. Always doing good, never harm, there is no shock or sensation felt in wearing them. Those enjoying good health should also wear them, as they prevent as well as cure disease. The ordinary Electric Battery, when resorted to in similar cases to those above mentioned, is often too powerful and exciting, doing good during the operation, but leaving the patient more exhausted and weakened than before; whereas, by daily (and nightly, too, if desired), wearing our Electric Corset as ordinary corsets are usually worn; a gentle and exhilarating influence is lastingly and agreeably perceptible, quickly accomplishing that good for which they are worn. They will never harm even in the most sensitive cases. Ladies who have once tried them say they will WEAR NO OTHERS. The prices are as follows: $1, $1.50, $2, and $3. We now make all these goods in Dove and White only. They are sent out in a handsome box, accompanied by a silver-plated compass, by which the Electro-Magnetic influence of the Corsets can be tested. We will send either kind to any address, postpaid, on receipt of the price; with 20c. added for packing and registration, and we guarantee safe delivery into your hands. Remit in P. O. Money Order, Draft, Check, or in Currency by Registered Letter. In ordering kindly mention this publication, and state exact size of Corset usually worn; or, where the size is not known, take a light measurement of the waist over the linen. This can be done with a piece of common string which send with your order. Make all remittances payable to

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. BEATTY'S {27 Stop} BEETHOVEN ORGANS $65.00

Regular Price $125.00 without Bench, Book and Music.

View, Latest Style RESONANT WALNUT Case No. 15,000.

☞ IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT! Keys, Lumber, Steel Springs, Rubber Cloth, Reed Boards, etc., used in the construction of this instrument, are of the best quality and are bought from the very same parties that sell to all other organ makers in the United States and Canada. The Beethoven, therefore, contains more Reeds, more Stops, more musical combination effects than an organ of ordinary make at four times its cost.

The Beethoven is beyond a doubt the most popular Cabinet Organ ever placed upon the market. During the past 119 working days 6,434 where manufactured and shipped to all parts of the civilized world. The factory is taxed to its utmost capacity to supply the demand, working nights by Edison's Electric Light to fill orders promptly. ☞ If you are about to purchase a Cabinet Organ or to buy one as an investment to sell again you should avail yourself of the special limited offer as below. (Be sure to read Description of Stops 26 and 27, see below.)

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE INSTRUMENT.

There are TEN FULL SETS OF GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS built upon an entirely new and scientific plan, producing music equal to an organ costing four times its value of other makes. The Reeds are arranged in the Reed Board, as follows:

1st. Set Charming Saxaphone Reeds. 6th. Set Sweet Voix Celeste Reeds.
2d. Set Famous French Horn Reeds. 7th. Set of Soft Cello Reeds.
3d. Set Beautiful Piccolo Reeds. 8th. Set of Dulciana Reeds.
4th. Set Jubilante Violina Reeds. 9th. Set of Diapason Reeds.
5th. Set Powerful Sub-Bass Reeds. 10th Set of Clarionet or Celeste Reeds.

Special attention is called to the number of stops used in this famous instrument. With the above 10 sets Golden Tongue Reeds and the following Stops fourteen (14) distinct Combinations are produced. THUS MAKING THIS ORGAN EQUAL TO 14 ORGANS OF ORDINARY MAKES COMBINED.

27 STOPS, as follows:

1 CELLO, 8 ft. tone. 2 Melodia. 3 Clarabella. 4 SUB-BASS, 16 ft. tone. 5 Bourdon, 16 ft. tone. 6 SAXAPHONE, 8 ft. tone. 7 VIOL DI GAMBA, 8 ft. tone. 8 Diapason, 8 ft. tone. 9 VIOLA DOLCE, 4 ft. tone. 10 Grand Expressione 8 ft. 11 French Horn, 8 ft. tone. 12 Harp Æolian. 13 VOX HUMANA. 14 Echo, 8 ft. tone. 15 Dulciana, 8 ft. tone. 16 Clarionet, 8 ft. tone. 17 VOIX CELESTE, 8 ft. tone. 18 Violina, 4 ft. tone. 19 Vox Jubilante, 8 & 4 ft. 20 Piccolo, 2 ft. tone. 21 Octave COUPLER. 22 Orchestral Forte. 23 Grand Organ Stop. 24 Right Knee Stop. 25 Automatic Valve Stop.

In Solid Mahogany Case only $15.00 extra.* (Height, 72 ins., Depth, 24 ins., Length, 48 ins.) All cases are profusely ornamented with neat hand carvings. Editorial Notes.

It is said that mosquitoes have again appeared in London, and passengers from America are charged with their importation. If our friends across the water want a superior kind of these animals we advise them to ship direct from Galveston, Texas, or New Orleans.

To be sure the Republican party has been charged with the guilt of star route thieves; but then it will be remembered that a Republican administration prosecuted and a Democratic jury acquitted them. The failure to convict is not so much of a partisan matter as it is a national disgrace.

Ten persons were recently baptized in Tremont Temple, Boston, the service being performed in three different languages. Four of the number were baptized in the use of the English language, two in Swedish and four with the French, these being converted Roman Catholics, but all uniting with one and the same church. This gives a striking illustration of the kind of work a live Christian pastor can do in the great cities of this Union. We are in great need of men who will go after the lost.

Public opinion all through the South justifies caste churches and caste schools. But men and women have to answer at the judgment day not for their conformity to public opinion, but to the law of God. Public opinion is but the judgment formed by sinful men, from a mere human standpoint, and is often vacillating. It never has been, and never can be the standard of right and justice. God holds individuals accountable and each singly must stand before His throne and give an account for the deeds done in the body. As to this question of caste churches and schools we are anxious to know who is on the Lord's side?

The New Orleans Auxiliary Sanitary Association have published and are distributing broadcast, a pamphlet of information relative to small-pox and vaccination, written at its request by Prof. Stanford E. Chaille, M. D., member of its executive committee. It recites the origin and benefits resulting from vaccination, together with the regulations of various cities compulsory and otherwise. It is important that all information possible relative to the suppression of the loathsome disease be promptly and widely disseminated. Get a copy of the pamphlet, read it and profit thereby. If you are a pastor, teacher, or public spirited citizen, use all your influence to educate the people to accept vaccination and follow proper sanitary rules to check small-pox.

President Arthur wrote to the President of the Southern Exposition, Louisville, that he should give his personal and official encouragement. He said: "Such exhibitions have come to be among the most marked features and the most instructive agents of our modern civilization, for they enhance the dignity of labor and show to both labor and capital how inextricably their interests are interwoven. They elevate the standard of industrial attainment, and give fresh and enduring impetus to inventive genius and skill."

The Christian Neighbor, of Columbia, S. C., in an extended notice of Henry Watterson's address at Vanderbilt University, on "The Homicidal Side of Southern Life," comments that crime in the North does not justify it in the South, and false witness against the South is no reason that it should not know the truth as it is about her own crimes. Mr. Watterson seems to have found it difficult to avoid comparisons between the sections, for fear that if he confined himself to the text he would make the South appear to poor advantage, and yet he stated some excellent truths.

Few men in the Methodist Episcopal Church are more abundant in labors than Bishop Warren. Aside from his regular episcopal work he has been engaged in raising money for the erection of the Gammon school of Theology, connected with the Clark University, Atlanta, Ga. This institution has been endowed with $20,000 by the man whose name it bears. He also gives $7,000 towards the building; Bishop Warren pledged $16,400, and of this sum has already raised over $13,000 leaving between $3,000 and $4,000 more to raise. The Bishop is frequently admonished by his friends because of his incessant and heavy labors, but somehow he does not seem to know how to restrain himself from going ahead. It seems to us a pity that such men should grow old. May it please the Lord to give him many years.

The grand jury of Orleans parish asserts that it deprecates the necessity of resorting to a vigilance committee, yet admits that the few half paid police cannot cope with "the vastly prepondering force of hoodlums;" and it suggests on the same principle as the Sanitary Association is working in accord with the Department of Public Improvements, citizens can, if properly organized, aid the police. The mayor might grant commissions to five property holders of each ward to organize an auxiliary police force, under the regulation of the chief of police, such patrol to be organized without reference to politics or race. We doubt the legal power of the mayor to do anything of the sort, or the propriety of calling into existence any such unlawful appliance to aid the administration of justice. The party in power, having repudiated its financial obligations in support of efficient municipal and State government, the people should unite in demanding a return to the old landmarks. Bourbon leaders have imagined that to starve out and discharge necessary public servants would be a capital essay at reform, and so the blind leaders of the blind have almost brought their following into a Slough of Despond.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Our Letter from China.

[Extracts from a journal of a visit to country Churches with Mr. Davis and Dr. Howard.]

During the first day of our visit to Tsun Hua, we were out in the yard for a walk, when Mrs. Li, the Helper's wife, introduced me to Mrs. Wang, who, with her husband and son and his wife, has lately joined the church on probation. Mrs. Wang's bright face impressed me pleasantly, and I invited her in for a talk. She seemed afraid, and hesitated at first, but I soon induced her to go with me. We sat down and had a chat together, and I could feel her fear gradually vanishing and soon she was smiling upon me approvingly. I gave her a prayer in large type and asked her to learn to read it. I was afraid if I gave her a book she would say she had not time and was too stupid, but this task was such an easy one that she went at it with good courage, and I knew if she were learned a few characters she would be anxious to go on. Mrs. Ti, regarding her with a dry complacent smile, said, "Now, are you afraid of Miss C.?" "No," said Mrs. Wang, and the Helper's wife proceeded to explain that Mrs. Wang had said, "What shall I do about going to Sunday service? I heard yesterday that the foreigners had come and I worried through the night thinking day after to-morrow will be Sunday, and I am afraid to go to church!" Mrs. Wang seemed to be anxious lest I be angry and hastened to say, "Now that I have seen you, I am not afraid, I love you." During the entire time of our visit in this city I did not see a woman on the streets except those who were with me. I said as much to the women, and Mrs. Wang said, "It is so! I never went any where, and have just lived for nothing all my life." As though to go somewhere was the chief end of life, and failing of this, life was a failure. As we talked of heaven, Mrs. Chiao, who was also present, asked, "Do children go there?" "Yes, Christ's death atoned for them and they die before they know sin." "Seven of my children died when they were very small. Can I surely see them again?" How eagerly the mother's eyes watched me to see if I could give her sure promise of re-union with her lost ones. "Yes, you may certainly see them if—" Here Mrs. Wang interrupted me fearing I did not understand the case and might be making rash promises. "Some of your children died before you entered the church; of course, you do not expect to meet them?" How glad I was to assure her that that their salvation did not depend upon her merits. Sunday I held a meeting with the women, which I enjoyed exceedingly. After talking to, and with them, I said, "We will pray together." "Ho!" said one; "Ai yah!" said another; "I can't pray," said the third; "I don't know what to say," said another. Finally, Mrs. Wang said, "I can pray the Lord's prayer." "That is a good prayer," said I. "All right, I'll pray that," said she, with an embarrassed laugh. It was a new and unheard of edition known only to Mrs. Wang, but I think it was acceptable to God for He could see the honest earnest heart. During the week Mrs. Wang urged me to make them a visit as the daughter-in-law could not come out on the street to see me. Accordingly I went to their house. I was charmed with the young woman. Often in the homes to which we are so fortunate as to gain admittance, we meet these pure innocent young women, who know nothing of the world and its sin, except what they see inside their own door. A kind word and smile wins their love at at once and their guileless faces and gentle ways win our love as quickly. A lot of women soon gathered to see me and listen to my talk; among them was a woman with a very bad neck. I felt sure the doctor could help her. So I said, "Why do you not go up to the parsonage and ask Dr. Howard to cure your neck?" The poor thing seemed delighted with the prospect of help, especially when I told her she would not have to pay anything, and started off immediately. When I got back to the parsonage they were in a state of great excitement, and proceeded to tell me of a woman with a sore neck who had come to be cured by the doctor, and as she was waiting for doctor to finish his supper, a young man, her son, rushed in, in a great rage and screamed, "Come right out of here, quick! Don't you know they will take your head off, if you stay here?" And he dragged her off by main force before the decapitation could take place! During the day a woman came in looking as sorrowful and disconsolate as only a woman with the toothache can, and said, "Please give me something for my toothache, the pain is very awful; my tooth aches, my face aches, my head aches, I can't eat and I cannot sleep for the terrible pain"—then in the most beseeching tones she added, "Please give me something for I surely cannot endure this much longer." "Yes," said the doctor, "I can help you so it will never ache again; I will pull it out." "Oh! oh!" said the woman, "it is not my tooth at at all; a friend of mine wished me to get some medicine for her toothache." This woman is a church member in good and regular standing, and is a fair specimen of Chinese veracity, and I was very glad to bring her daughter into the boarding-school because her mother is a Christian. One great lesson we have to teach these Christians is, that it is not a proper thing to lie! Our superintendent once said to a member, who was supposed to be giving his "experience" in class meeting, "Don't lie, brother, tell the truth about it."

Since our visit to Tsun Hua, Mr. Lowry and Mr. Willitts have been there, and Helper Ti told them that after I went away some of the people in the streets would make fun of Mrs. Wang's son, because he had had the "Foreign Devil" at his house. Of course this disturbed the young man's peace of mind and he went to the Helper for advice, and Ti said, "I'll tell you what to do; say to them 'Oh, you say I have had the Foreign Devil at my house, do you?' Well, you keep on talking that way and the next time they come I will bring them straight to your house." This stopped the ridicule. 'As wise as a serpent, and who shall say it was not "harmless as a dove?" Chinese understand their countrymen and know their vulnerable points. C. M. C.

Commencement and Dedication at Rust University.

Commencement week at Rust University began on Monday, June 4th, and continued till Tuesday, 12th inst. It was a season of protracted joy and profit. The examinations, which were brilliant and highly satisfactory, commenced on Monday, the 4th inst., and closed on Monday, the 11th inst. They elicited commendations from all sides. Of the examination of the classes in geometry, Rev. R. D. Miller, the pastor of the white Baptist church of Holly Springs, and the school superintendent of the county, said that he had never seen it excelled anywhere.

Sunday, June 10, at 9.30 a. m., the annual love feast was held. It was spiritual and Methodistic. At 11 a. m. the baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. R. S. Rust, D.D. At 3 p. m. the annual sermon was preached by Rev. L. Bradford, and at 8 p. m. Rev. J. M. Shumpert preached the last sermon of the school year. In these gospel messages impressions were made which, doubtless, will influence the life of those who heard them, to their own good and to the salvation of many more. The annual entertainment of the Literary Societies was held in Rust Hall, on Monday at 8 p. m. The Hall was crowded to overflowing; a very large number of whom were some of the best white citizens of Holly Springs, who expressed themselves as highly pleased with all that they both saw and heard. All of these pleasant and profitable exercises, however, did not form the main features of the annual commencement week of Rust University; they were only antecedent and preparatory to the culminating glory which was to be manifested in the closing programme of Tuesday, the 12th inst. At 11 a. m., animated by the charming notes that floated upon the wings of the breeze from the Holly Springs Silver Cornet Band, the multitude were soon seated in their places under the stately oaks on the college campus, and a few minutes thereafter the following programme was introduced:

Music: Anthem—"Great is the Lord:" by the Choir.
Prayer—By Rev. A. E. P. Albert, B.D.
Music—"Nearer my God to Thee"—by the Cornet Band.
Oration—"Time Bringeth to Light Many Hidden Events"—by J. C. Bullen, of Fayette, Miss.
Music.
Oration—"The Progress of Liberty"—by J. W. Holmes, of Liberty, Miss.
Music.
Oration—"Behind the Thought there Lies a Mind"—by H. G. Grant of Pontotoc, Miss.
Oration—"The March of Intellect"—by J. H. Brooks, of Meridian, Miss.
Music.
Presentation of Diplomas—by Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D.
Music: Anthem—"Be Joyful in the Lord" —by the Choir.
Benediction—by Rev. J. W. Dunn.

The above programme was simply grand, and grandly it was carried out. The four young men who delivered the above orations, and who graduated with high honors, acquitted themselves nobly. At the close of the exercises the class ascended the platform in the following order: Messrs. J. C. Bullen, J. W. Holmes, H. G. Grant and J. H. Brooks. In the presentation of the diplomas to these young men Dr. Rust delivered an excellent address, which cannot fail to assist them in their good work through life. This is the third class graduated from the institution; giving a total of eleven graduates. At 3 p. m., Rust Hall was dedicated, when addresses were delivered by Bishop H. W. Warren, D. D., Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D., Rev. J. W. Dunn and others. The occasion was one of special interest. Indeed it was the celebration of an epoch in the history of our educational work, not only in Mississippi but in our general Southern work. Dr. Rust's address was able and timely. Bishop Warren's reflected credit upon his well earned reputation as a brilliant orator, and inspired everyone with the purest emotions and the grandest purposes. At 8 o'clock p. m. the College campus, brilliantly lighted with torches and Chinese lanterns, was as crowded as at any time during the day, to listen to the closing address of the day. Prof. Hooper introduced Rev. A. E. P. Albert, of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, as the orator of the evening; whose subject was: "The Modern Application of the Question of the Ancient Seer: 'Watchman, What of the Night?'" In an address of something over an hour long in its delivery, the speaker defended the colored people of the South, against the groundless and merciless attacks of the Rev. Dr. Tucker, of Mobile, Ala., formerly of Jackson, Miss. Bishop Warren, in an able, impressive and fitting manner, endorsed the speaker's address, and took occasion to add his personal testimony to the Negroes' progress in all the walks of life. After which the exercises were closed, and the benediction was pronounced by the Bishop. Thus ended a week of the greatest significance in the history of Rust University. This institution was chartered thirteen years ago, and has since enrolled about 1,000 students, who are, today, nearly all preaching or teaching, and exerting a beneficial influence among the people throughout the South. Eternity alone will fully reveal the good that this and similar institutions are doing for our people in the South. Our only regret is that there are not enough of them. For the past five or six years the enrollment of students in this University has been gradually increasing every year. During the school year just closed 280 students were matriculated. Under the wise management of Rev. W. W. Hooper, A. M., the highly esteemed President and his excellent corps of professors and teachers, the institution has entered upon a high way of usefulness and success which promises to continually expound and brighten, as the years march around. In addition to Prof. Hooper, the faculty as now composed, consists of Prof. W. L. French, A. M., Mrs. Ella D. French, Miss L. A Sanford, Miss Anna L. Tolbert, A. B., and Prof. R. R. Green, A. B., the last two of whom are graduates of this University, of the class of 1881. Prof. French and Mrs. French not being expected to return next year, were the happy recipients of a beautiful silver sugar dish, as a souvenir, from the students of the school. The other teachers, however, will return with those who will succeed Prof. and Mrs. French, prepared to do more and grander work than ever. With such an educational fountain, (an institution where nearly 200 boys and girls can be lodged and boarded, and where 400 or 500 can be taught daily) in the State, our work in Mississippi promises a moral and Christian fertility, that should far excel the physical fertility of the Mississippi valley or that of the valley of the Nile.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

At the entertainment given for the benefit of five little orphan children of Mrs. and Mr. Oliver Smith, Saturday night, May 19th. the children of First Street Sabbath school turned out en masse. The memorable event of their entertainment was the willingness of the Sabbath-school "Broom-Social," to render what service laid in their power to further the success of the entertainment. During the evening the following Misses took part in the "Broom Drill:" M. J. Mackin, captain; Della J. Moore, 1st sergent; Sarah Watkins, 2nd sergeant; E. Alexander, R. Smith, S. Lewis, J. Miller, Carrie Brown, J. Alexander, M. Jackson, O. Joseph, Emma Wills, J. Miller, and little Beulah Smith, guard. These children are under the supervision of Mr. Y. H. Campbell, who has provided them with very fine suits. God bless the children for their noble response to such a good cause. The profit of the evening was $46.85.

A. J. Pickett, Pleasant Hill: "We held a grand basket meeting May 27th and there was a large attendance. Bros. S. S. Wright and C. Crockett, and several local preachers were present. Collection was $26.05. Many white ladies and gentlemen gave us encouragement by their presence and contributions."

Rev. H. J. Wright wrote us some days ago, to give warning to our church officials and people against harboring or encouraging a person who represents himself to be a son of Rev. J. Thomas, deceased, of the A. M. E. Church, and to have intimate relatives with leading preachers of our conference. He is simply a tramp and mischief-maker, seeking his meals and lodging by various means.

TENNESSEE.

S. Barnett, Soddy: "A grand Sunday-school picnic was held May 1st, at Lakeside. An essay was read by Master George Carter, aged 16 years, on the "Cincinnati Southern Railroad," which created a profound impression upon those who heard him. Solomon Rogers, aged 12 years, read an essay on "Sunday schools and their Importance;" other essays were by Willie Jones and Miss Virginia Rogers. Addresses were made by H. N. Hutchinson and Miss Sarah McKinney, teacher at Lakeside. Full justice was done to well provisioned tables. Superintendents were Miss Virginia Rogers and John Thatcher, at Tate's chapel; Ephraim Rogers is assistant superintendent at Lakeside."

A. J. Blakemore, Springfield; "Elder J. P. Gregg held our quarterly conference, which was an agreeable one, and preached for us. Paid elder $13.40, pastor $21.05, on rent $12. I am attending a missionary school taught by Miss S. S. Collins, who is 1500 miles from her home in this place. Our missionary collections already amount to $14.80."

MISSISSIPPI.

G. D. Dukes, Summit: "May 27, there was a spirit of revival, and several souls came to us. It was a happy season."

P. Johnson, Macon: "We rejoiced when the conference sent us Rev. Brooks as pastor. He was ill near unto death, but by April 15th he was able to take the church in hand, organize it under the missionary rule, and then go to work as a teacher. Since then the church has revived, and sinners have been awakened, ten were converted and added to the church; 23 in all have joined, and the seats are filled with penitents."

C. W. Ivy, Enterprise: "Elder Campbell held our second quarterly conference to the satisfaction of the people. He advocated the interest of our church paper, and there were six cash subscribers taken. The reports indicated improvement. Collected this quarter $38.10; for pastor $22.50, elder $9.50 for the ADVOCATE $3.75, benevolent claims $2.85. The elder preached and administered sacrament to 77 persons."

Our Southern Educational Work.

BY THE REV. J. C. HARTZELL, D.D.
Assistant Corresponding Secretary of the Freedman's Aid Society

I wish heartly to congratulate the SOUTHWESTERN upon its improved appearance. The enlargement to eight pages indicates prosperity, and the number and interesting character of its letters from the ministers and laymen within its patronizing territory, show plainly how important a factor it is in the work of God in the South. I read every page of the paper with intense interest, and follow the triumphs, and study the difficulties of the brethren and churches with prayerful interest. Scarcely a name or church is mentioned in the paper from week to week that I do not know something of personally. How grandly the old men are standing at their posts! And yet how rapidly they are falling! And how our young men are multiplying and springing to the front all over the South! What an army they are coming to be! God grant they may be equal to the splendid work He is giving them to do.

What the SOUTHWESTERN now needs and ought to have is at least 5000 paying subscribers. What say you, pastors? The thing can be done if you say so. Your people were never as able to take this paper as now, and they never needed it as much as now; and no pastor deserves the name, who does not earnestly and successfully push his church paper among his people.

The great problem in our Southern work is now the enlargement and permament development of our institutions of learning. Our Southern conferences must have more educated ministers to take the places of those whose work will soon be done, and to occupy the widening fields of opportunity presenting themselves on every hand. We ought to have at least one thousand young men in our schools in the South, preparing for our own Christian ministry in that field. The North cannot meet this demand, and if it could, it is better that they should be educated and enter the work in the South. Our Southern work must more and more rely up on its own resources both as a matter of necessity, and of good policy.

Beyond the work of preaching the gospel in the South, is the work of giving Christian teachers to that section. In this duty the whole nation has an imperative call and the Methodist Episcopal Church must bear a chief part of that responsibility. In her congregations in the South are more than two millions of communicants and adherents, who not only look to her ministers for spiritual instruction, but the great majority of that vast multitude will not have any proper education, unless that same church plans for, directs and largely supplies that education. The poverty of multitudes of these people, and their peculiar surroundings, make this educational work one largely of benevolence. The millions of dollars needed to develop this vast educational movement, must come chiefly from the North at least for a generation.

The work of collecting the funds and superintending its expenditure, in planting and sustaining our institutions of learning in the South, has been committed to the Freedmen's Aid Society. Fifteen years of the work of that society is now before the church and nation. About one million one hundred thousand dollars up to July 1, 1882, has been received. As a result nearly $300,000 school property has been built up in the South, and each year nearly one hundred teachers have been employed, and a vast multitude of young men and women have been educated, many of whom grace our pulpits or preside at teacher's desks; and thousands of them are mothers or fathers in Christian homes, laying solidly and well the foundations of the truly American civilization, up into which God is lifting the freedmen of our nation. Rev. A. S. Hunt, D.D., of the American Bible Society, said at the late New Jersey conference, that after having seen the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society in the South, he did not hesitate to give it as his opinion that no organization on the foot stool was doing a grander work than that society, in proportion to its means and opportunities.

As its name indicates, the educational work has been almost wholly among the freedmen, although no distinctions on account of race are made in the organizations of the schools, or in the offers of instruction. Beyond the instruction established by this society, there have sprung up among our white membership of the South quite a number of academies and colleges. Heroic men and women, with very small pay, have worked in these schools in the midst of poverty, and often of persecution. With only one or two exceptions these schools are from fifty to a hundred miles away from any others of our other institutions. The work of these men and women is worthy of all commendation, Beyond these schools are the multitudes of white people who have come into our church in the South since the war. Their only hope for ministers for their pulpits are in those schools, and from this same source must come nearly all their Christian teachers. God has given the Methodist Episcopal Church a great place and a vast influence among the white people of the South since the war. Other denominations from the North have not built over 500 churches in the South since the war; while the Methodist Episcopal Church has in the same territory and time built 3500 churches; and of these, about one-half are among the white people How marvellous the hand of God is in all our Southern work!

The same condition of poverty and ignorance, and lack of school facilities, permeate and surround millions of white people in the South as they do millions of freedmen.

The last General Conference looked this question in the face, and said—the educational work among the white people in the South must be helped. But how? Some said we must have a new society for this work; but, a better wisdom said, no. We have enough societies already. Others said, let the Board of Education, with its headquarters in New York, take charge of this work; but a better wisdom said no again. That Board has an important but special work, and can not establish and maintain institutions of learning without its organization is remodeled. Besides, this last plan would put two administrations at work in our Southern educational field; one among the whites, and one among the colored people. This would by legislation, not only recognize, but commit the whole church to the perpetuation of the color-line in all our Southern institutions of learning. To such legislation the Methodist Episcopal Church can never be committed.

The third and wiser plan was for the General Conference to say in substance to the church—we have a great educational society operating in the South; our educational work among the freedmen must not be hindered but greatly enlarged; the educational work among the whites must be helped, but this can best be done by the church enlarging its contributions to the society already operating in the field—so the General Conference said:

"Resolved, That under the phrase 'and others' of article II, in the constitution of the Freedmen's Aid Society, we see our way clear to aid the schools which have been established by our church in the South among the white people, and the General Conference hereby recommends to the Board of Managers of the Society to give such aid to these schools during the next quadrennium, as can be done without embarrassment to the schools among the freedmen."

This action has now been before the church for three years and its practical results can be studied. In the first place, more and more has been done each succeeding year for the freedmen. During the year now closing, new properties have been purchased, several new buildings began, and some of them completed, and more money put into the whole work than in any former year. In the next place, plans have been inaugurated for the developement of a comprehensive and powerful educational movement among the eighteen and a half millions of white people in the South. Two great centers—Chattanooga and Little Rock, commanding the whole South—have been selected, at which are located central universities, and about these are clustering gymnasia of academies. Already more than 2000 young men and women are in these academies. Here is the beginning of an educational movement, far-reaching and tremendous in its significance for the South and the whole nation. Into this movement the society has not been able to put much money as yet. The schools have been almost entirely supported by the people themselves.

In the third place, this action of the General Conference has paved the way for a unification and enlargement of our educational work in the South, in harmony with the work of the other great benevolent societies of the church in that region. The Missionary Society helps the whole South in the support of its ministry; the Church Extension Society helps the whole South in the erection of churches; the Sunday-school Union and Tract Societies help the whole South in the Sunday-school and tract work. In like manner the action of the last General Conference, points to an Educational Society, so-named, and engrafted into the organic life of the church, as to command the thought and benevolence of the whole church, in the tremendous work of giving Christian ministers and teachers and physicians, to the needy millions of the South, irrespective of race or condition.

In such a unified and comprehensive educational movement the church can best assert itself in meeting every improper form of race prejudice, which has and does yet deride and mar American society. Slavery, born first of love for money, came at last to be accounted a holy thing because of race prejudice. The first has gone but that upon which its defense was based remains, and dies slowly, but die it will. A friend donated to the Freedmen's Aid Society a $10,000 property, stipulating in the deed that it was to be used in establishing "a school for whites." That deed was handed back to the donor with the statement that that clause must be taken out, or the property would not be accepted. The clause was taken out and the Society has the property. The Society cannot in its deeds to property, or in the organization of its institutions, pledge that only one class of students shall ever be admitted to any particular school. No such pledge is asked of any other institution in the South.

I cannot speak authoritatively, but still I feel safe in saying that our Society would see any one or any dozen of its schools in the South closed, and the property sold at auction, rather than commit itself to the policy, that no freedman should be admitted to what are known as white schools or that no white person should be admitted into what are technically known as freedmen's schools. Bishop Wiley has the mind of a statesman and the heart of a Christian; Dr. R. S. Rust has grown gray in a life of magnificent doings in behalf of God's poor and despised ones in America; Dr. J. M. Walden for a generation has battled bravely and with splendid results on the same line. Those are our President and Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer; and, our whole board of managers—including Dr. Hoyt, Dr. Hight, Amos Shinkle Esq., and others—are like unto them, true and tried men, in whom the whole church has confidence. In the hands of such men no principle will be allowed to suffer in the administration of our Southern educational work.

Woman's Home Missionary Society.

BY MRS. R. S. RUST.

The second quarterly-meeting of this society was held at St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, May 25th. The attendance throughout the day was large, giving evidence that the women of our Church are interested in this new branch of Christian effort.

The morning session was preceded by a devotional service led by Mrs. J. W. Gaddis, with music led by Mrs. L. Sargent, which imparted a benediction to the exercises of the day. Mrs. John Davis presided, and her words of welcome and encouragement cheered the hearts and quickened the faith of all present. Mrs. Getchel, in an interesting address, presented the claims of the South, setting forth the necessities of the people and pleading for increased effort in their behalf at this crisis of our nation's history. Mrs. Aiken, with pertinent illustration and convincing argument, urged the obligation of Christians to combat Mormonism in Utah, and wipe out this stain from our national fame. Mrs. Thirkield read several letters abounding in valuable information from our missionaries in the field; and the ladies of St. Paul's Church served an excellent lunch, which was greatly enjoyed by the ladies and the distinguished guests present.

The afternoon program included a valuable paper on "Work Among Indians," by Mrs. L. D. McCabe; an able address on the same subject by Mrs. F. S. Hoyt; a sparkling poem by Mrs. F. Hildt DeWitt; Incidents of a two months' tour among the conferences, by Mrs. R. S. Rust, and a missionary love feast, which embraced reports from secretaries and representatives of auxiliary societies, and the report of Mrs. L. Williams, of the Cincinnati Conference Society. This half hour was full of interest, and furnished valuable material for pleasant recollection and earnest endeavor. The Lucy Hayes mission bands of Fairmount, Pearl Street, and other Churches, furnished a pleasant contribution to the interests of the day in the charm of children's voices and the inspiration of their enthusiasm.

Mrs. Lulu Spear Hodson and Mr. and Mrs. Towner contributed beautiful and appropriate selections of music, and a pretty incident of the afternoon was the contribution by little Willie Crosley, three years old, of one hundred cents to make his little sister a member of the society.

The reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer exhibited progress in organization and steady advancement of the work. An encouraging number of new auxiliaries were reported, and many children's bands have been organized during the quarter. The reports of the missionaries at Savanah, Miss Viola Baldwin and Mrs. S. M, Lewis, indicate earnest and success ful work. Mrs. Bristol, in Atlanta has done a good work in her visits to the homes of the poor and the needy. From Miss Josephine Cowgill, Mrs. Bentley, and Mrs. Williams, we have most encouraging reports. Said a professor in the New Orleans University, who is well acquainted with their field and labor: "Miss Cowgill's work is incessant and untiring. To appreciate it, it must be seen. Its value and influence for good can not be estimated." Mrs. L. M. Dunton, our efficient missionary in Greenville District, S. C., has formed a large number of temperence societies and bands of hope in the Churches of the district where she had devoted much labor. But the ladies of the State Woman's Christian Temperence Union did not approve of colored people having this organization, so they have been turned into women's home missionary societies, retaining the old temperance features. The Home Missionary Society has an efficient organization among the colored people of the Louisiana Conference, which reports sixteen schools, with 742 pupils, and the work is self supporting. The labors of Mrs. Howells, in Texas, and Mrs. Richardson, in West Texas conferences, are bearing rich and abundant fruit. The people are anxious to improve, but need the counsel and guidance that intelligent Christian ladies can give to enable them to develop plans for self improvement.

Miss Daily at Ogden, and Miss Wheelock, at Salt Lake, missionaries of the society, are doing excellent service in the schools in these Mormon cities. The Christian school is regarded by all acquainted with the facts as the only sure means of counteracting the fatal influence of Mormonism. A large number of centers where schools could be established, with even a small outlay of money, are appealing to the society for teachers. It is earnestly hoped that the society will be able to erect the building for home and boarding department for the Salt Lake Seminary during the Summer. This building is absolutely necessary to give the school permanence and success, for without boarding accommodations it can secure only local importance and usefulness.

The executive board, realizing the importance of presenting the claims of the society at the Spring conferences, requested the corresponding secretary, and their missionary, Mrs. L. M. Dunton, to undertake the task. by holding anniversaries and other meetings, as opportunity might be secured. Twelve conferences were visited, and a committee was appointed by each conference, which committee, after duly considering the question, brought in a report cordially commending the enterprise, and recommending the organization of an auxiliary in every charge of the conference. Similar action was secured in the Maine conferences, which we could not reach. With one exception the conferences adopted the report of the committee favoring the organization of the work.

Seven Conference societies were organized in, New England and the far East. The other conferences visited already had efficient organizations in successful operation. Twenty-three special public meetings were held, and seventeen auxiliaries were organized. Organization was always made the prime object of our meetings, but many persons desired to aid the cause by contributions of money, and $805.55 was contributed in cash, $627 additional was subscribed, and four hundred and ninety-three annual members were pledged, aggregating $1,925.55. Also $1000 was pledged for furnishing the building at Salt Lake when it shall be completed, and ninety $10 share cards were placed in the hands of persons who promised to collect the money.

These results of the presentation of the claims of the society during this two month's tour furnish evidence that the people only need to know the facts concerning this home mission work to become deeply interested in it, and to contribute liberally towards its support.

Great credit is due Mrs. Dunton, our devoted missionary, for her faithful services in the field, and for her eloquent appeals, which touched all hearts, and drew them in tender sympathy to the cause.

Notes of Travel.

MR. EDITOR:—The twenty-first of May ult., witnessed the departure from New Orleans northwestward of a happy party of eleven persons, via the C. St. L. and N. O. Railroad. Our train left the depot at 5:30 p. m. Next morning we breakfasted at Grand Junction, Miss. Having left New Orleans, bathed in sunshine and redolent with perfume of flowers, we were hardly prepared to encounter clouds of snow when our eyes greeted the first morning. Yet, thus it was, and we reflected that it was not the first time that December and May had met and greeted each other. The second morning found some of us in Chicago and some in Cincinnati. We had met only one detention, which occurred a little south of Cairo, in Kentucky, and was due to a wrecked freight train on our track. Yet the detention was brief, because the skilful management of the R. R. officers and employes soon removed the obstacles. We have reason to express our admiration of the good qualities of the great Jackson R. R., and we are glad to record our thanks for the courtesy and kindness of its officers and managers. We have traveled over a large part of our country and on nearly all the great through lines of rail, and we have nowhere experienced more of comfort, courtesy, promptness and efficiency of management. Some of our little ones are enjoying new homes among good Christian families, and we are glad witnesses of their happiness.

In Columbus, Ohio, we found ourselves among relatives and old friends, and enjoyed much in worshipping with the Rev. J. L. Jackson and his people, of the Broad street M. E. Church, on Sunday, May 27. Among esteemed friends who greeted us here were the Rev. Dr. J. M. Trimble, Rev. Henry Whiteman, Rev. B. N. Spahr, Rev. W. W. Cherrington, Matthew Gooding, Esq., Prof. A. H. Welsh, Prof. Young, Prof. Henry O'Kane, and others equally esteemed—many of them our former students, whom it was a great joy to meet. The writer thanks God for the affectionate remembrance of those whom he has instructed. This is one of the best rewards of a laborious life.

Bro. Jackson and his noble people generously remembered our good cause, of which report will be made at another time.

At Zanesville, Ohio, our son-in-law, the Rev J. M. K. Pettenger, rector of St. James parish, and his lovely family made us happy. We had the pleasure of preaching at the Second street M. E. Church, through the courtesy of the Rev. Dr. Mullenix, the pastor. Here are memories of veterans in the kingdom and service of Christ; of David Young, Jacob Young, Leonidas Hamline (afterwards Bishop), Daniel Brush, Esq., and his lamented son, the Rev. George W. Brush, and of his excellent son-in-law, John Taylor, Esq. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Edward Brush are living representatives of Bro. Brush's family. Here, too, are other elect ladies—a sister-in-law of the great philanthropist, George Peabody, whose name is dear to all the South. These, and the others named, have shown their love to Christ and his poor. We addressed the people of St. James parish, among whom are some of the distinguished citizens of Ohio and active servants of Jesus. Judge Granger is of the Supreme Court of Ohio; Mrs. Granger is a niece of Senator Sherman, Ohio's favorite son. General Granger, a cousin, formerly distingushed himself in military service; George M. Jewett, Esq., son of the Hon. Hugh J. Jewett, of Erie railroad fame, is an enterprising man of business and an agriculturalist. He has one of the most charming homes in Ohio; and on his broad acres, facing the picturesque Muskingum may be seen feeding 70 or 80 high-bred horses, and about 20 pure Jersey cattle—every one as pretty as a picture. The prices, too, are "up in the pictures," and justly so. It is a pleasure to meet persons as social as Mr. and Mrs. Jewett.

In Mount Vernon we are at home among old parisioners and friends. We must close right here. Adieu,

W. D. GODMAN.

From Georgetown.

DEAR EDITOR:—I wish to congratulate the SOUTHWESTERN in her new dress. The type is clear and her columns full and newsy. It gets better all the time, and her bright dress is hailed with joy and delight by her many readers throughout the bounds of West Texas conference. As the session of the quadrennial approaches I feel safe to say that the General Conference will forward and embrace the SOUTHWESTERN as the official organ of the great church in the South and Southwest; give her a hearty God-bless you, and bid her live long to bless our churches that cover hill-sides and plains throughout the sunny South. We love the SOUTHWESTERN, and as such will give it our hearty support. She is faithful to her duty; she is unswerving in faith, and has the backbone to confront fairly and squarely all questions that have a tendency to throw cold water on the colored race. She hews to the line, let the chips fall where they may; she loves the old landmark and is plumbing it. So, I will say, "God bless her, may she live long to use her influence in transfering the thousands that live and the millions unborn to the golden shores." From the first of June to the end of the year I will be immediately on my work; then look out for a shower of subscribers. Wife passed up to the city of gold in full triumph of faith Jan. 1st, leaving four children on my hands, and my being over a hundred miles by rail from my appointments accounts for my slackness. My church at Lampasas is growing right along, and I am wonderfully pleased with my new field of labor. By watchful care and close nursing, Lampasas will be one among our leading Methodist centres. It has one of the finest medicinal springs in the State. In summer thousands resort to its springs for its healing efficacy.

J. W. ROBINSON.

Georgetown, Texas, May 25.

Dr. Trowbridge on Yellow Fever and Ammonia.

Dr. S. T. Trowbridge, of Vera Cruz, has issued a pamphlet, giving his views and observations upon yellow fever. He has resided there overr thirteen years, has been a practicing physician and surgeon since 1849—was surgeon of the Eighth Regiment of Illinois, and presided over the State Medical Society at Quincy in 1868 and again at Chicago in 1869. He says he perused all the literature pertinent to yellow fever and that he came to the conclusion that yellow fever was contagious, communicable and transportable, and that when he received the appointment of United States Consul at Vera Cruz, he knew he would encounter the disease in its most reputable stronghold. He and his family did not escape the fever.

He now says from an observation of thirteen years, of the most impartial and convincing nature, amounting to a knowledge, he has come to the conclusion that the fever at Vera Cruz is neither transportable nor contagious. The population of Vera Cruz is 23,000.

His remarks are worth noting. His ideas about the fever were acquired by reading medical works written in the North, and by authors who had not seen a case of fever, and it appears that he was convinced of the contagiousness of the disease from his reading. He is one among the many who regarded facts as more convincing than theories.

We have never, he says, in fourteen years, had an epidemic of yellow fever, unless some extensive interference with the continuity of the surface gave to the immediate locality the first cases. We have never seen, in those years, extensive breaks in the pavements, such as laying gas or water mains, or for street railroads, without having a corresponding epidemic of yellow fever. Hence it is clear that the malaria for yellow fever lies under the surface of this city, and rushes forth upon its victims whenever opportunities are opened.

The epidemics in Vera Cruz of 1871, 1875, 1876 and 1877 were owing to the disturbance of the soil. An old ditch in the suburbs was re-opened by Gen. Foster in 1871, and the soldiers and prisoners who were the laborers, were the first cases. The epidemic subsided soon after the work was completed, and in every year after an extensive disturbance of the soil, the fever appeared.

Dr. Trowbridge is well posted in yellow fever literature. He attributes the breaking out of the scourge in Norfolk, in 1854, to the overflow of the Dismal Swamp, and that at Shreveport, in 1873, to the high water overflow of Red river and the raft, which impeded the flow of the water for a time, but broke through and overflowed the island immediately above the city and drowned 200 head of cattle, which were allowed to decay and putrify in the hot summer weather.

It is absurd; he argues, for the Board of Health of New Orleans to quarantine for ten days when a vessel has been at sea from thirty to seventy days, enjoying good health all the time, and especially at this season, to quarantine vessels from Rio, as any one who is familiar with geography must know that June, July and August here are the winter months corresponding with December, January and February at Rio.

When the National Board of Health sent out its pathological ferrets, as called by Dr. Sternbergh, to Havana, no inquiry was made of the singular fact that the steamships of the Morgan line going to and from Havana for a series of years, while the fever was epidemic there, the officers and crew escaped the contagion, as it is called, and did not carry it to Indianola, Galvestou and other ports; a fact which he thinks the representatives of the National Board of Health should have investigated, and if possible explained, why these vessels, with officers and crew, escaped the fever and did not transport it to other places. Ammonia was the active agent.

He treated himself and family with ammonia and all recovered, and he recommends sal ammoniac and quicklime, which, placed in pans over braziers of live coals, will give free ammonia and arrest the spread of yellow fever.

Another fact he mentions is that the crews of vessels which are anchored in the harbor escape the fever, while he has never known any cases to occur outside of the city limits, never appearing in any of the villages in the vicinity. These are facts which convince him that yellow fever originates in, and is confined to Vera Cruz, and that it is neither contagious nor transportable.

As all views and theories concerning the origin and treatment of yellow fever should be made known, we have given a condensed statement of his opinions, which, coming from such a high source, deserve the attentive consideration of the scientific.—N. O. City Item.

The farmers of New England, of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and even of Illinois want to know more about the South, and they are coming to Louisville to gratify this knowledge. They naturally expect to see at a Southern Exposition a full representation of the products of the soil. If a Southern State can produce anything but cotton, they take it for granted that this fact will be demonstrated at the Southern Exposition next August. If any State neglects this opportunity to advertise her cheap lands and fertile soil it will be said everywhere she exhibited nothing because she has nothing to exhibit. —Courier Journal.

How Farragut Faraday Went a Fishing.

A fishing young Farragut Faraday went
One morning without the paternal consent,
He was bubbling all over with glee,
"I'll show all the people," said he,
"That I can bring home a most wonderful catch,
And that not a boy in the town is my match
At fishing."

He stealthily crept through the back garden gate,
Completely equipped with his tackle and bait.
Said he, "I shall catch, without doubt,
A fine mess of speckled brook trout,
Some large yellow perch and some excellent catfish,
Pickerel, mackerel, flounders and flat fish,
A few fine black bass and perhaps a big eel,
Enough to supply the whole town with a meal,
By fishing."

He first caught—his heel on the side of the boat,
Thus proving his skill before fairly afloat.
He next "caught a crab" with his oars;
His line caught a tree on the shore,
He caught a bad cold from having wet feet,
And his trousers he caught on a nail in the seat—
Of the boat; and as 'gainst the stream he was rowing up,
He caught from a bargee a terrible blowing up,
But he got mad, and thought it was hard
Kind of luck, yet these catches he did not regard
As fishing.

It is true, he did afterwards catch a few fishes,
But nothing to equal his hopes or his wishes.
He caught one respectable chub,
By baiting his hook with a grub,
A few sickly perch and two or three cunners,
And one of a kind of bass known as tide runners,
And the great catch of all if I recollect right,
Was the threshing he caught from his father that night,
For fishing.

A Breeze in Church.

In a certain village in Maryland a small boy kicked up a breeze in the parish church on a recent Sunday. It seems that a certain good woman bought a calf's head and put it on to boil, leaving her little boy to mind it while she went to the church close by.

The minister had reached his fifthly "my brethren," when a small boy stuck his head in the door and whispered:

"Mamma!"

The good woman recognized her son instantly, a began to make signs for him to leave the door.

"Mamma!" again came the whisper—this time a little louder than before.

The mother shook her finger at the boy warningly, and indulged in other familar pantomimes with which she was accustomed to awe her son. But it didn't work worth a cent. The boy was excited and in dead earnest, as the denouement will show. Raising his voice he shouted:

"Mamma, you need't wink and blink at me, but you had better come home right away, for the calf's head is bittin' all the dumplins out of the pot!"

Dr. Gill and the Old Woman.

An old lady of his flock once called upon him with a grievance. The doctor's neck-bands were too long for her ideas of ministerial humility, and after a long harangue on the sin of pride, she intimated that she had brought her scissors with her, and would be pleased if her dear pastor would allow her to clip them down to her notions of propriety. The doctor not only listened patiently to her lecture, but handed her over the offending white bands for her to operate upon. When she had cut them to her satisfaction and returned the bibs, it was the doctor's turn.

"Now," said he, "my good sister, you must do me a good turn also."

"Yes, that I will, doctor; what can it be?"

"Well, you have something about you which is a deal too long, and causes me no end of trouble, and I should like to see it shorter."

"Indeed, dear sir, I will not hesitate; what is it? Here are the scissors, use them as you please.

"Come, then," said the sturdy divine to the sister, "put out your tongue."—From the Life of Spurgeon.

Robert A. Howard is a son of Col. Thomas C. Howard, whom we desire to specially commend as he deserves to be. In his teens, when other lads are disposed to see life and live without labor, he has started out on his own hook. With his own hands he erected a small dwelling. The ventalation of it would command the admiration of Dr. Tucker, it is so perfect. He built the picket fence around it, and has gone into the rearing of fowls systematically and intelligently. He devotes his entire time to their care and farming. He is one of the boys who is not disposed to live off "the old man,' and he is bound to be a useful man. —Southern World.

An Honest Saloon Advertisement.

Friend and Neighbors: Grateful for the liberal encouragement received from you, and having supplied my tavern with a new and ample stock of choice wines, spirits, and lager beer, I thankfully inform you that I continue to make drunkards and beggars for the sober, industrious and respectable community to support. My liquors may excite you to riot, robbery and blood, and will certainly diminish your comforts, augment your expenses, and shorten your lives. I confidently recommend them as sure to multiply fatal accidents and distressing diseases, and likely to render these incurable. They will agreeably deprive some of life, some of reason, many of character, and all of peace; will make fathers fiends, wives widows, mothers cruel, children orphans, and all poor. I will train the young to ignorance, dissipation, infidelity, lewdness, and every vice; corrupt the ministers of religion, obstruct the gospel, defile the church; and cause as much temporal and eternal death as I can. I will thus "accommodate the public," it may be, at the cost of my never dying soul. I have a family to support—the trade pays, and the public encourage it. I have a license from the magistrate; my traffic is lawful, even Christians countenance it; and if I do not bring these evils upon you somebody else will. I know the Bible says: "Thou shalt not kill;" pronounces a "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink;" and enjoins me not to "put a stumbling block in a brother's way." I also read that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God," and I cannot expect the drunkard maker without repentance, to share a better fate; but I wish a lazy living, and have deliberately resolved to gather the wages of iniquity and fatten on the ruin of my species. I shall therefore carry on my trade with energy, and do my best to diminish the wealth of the nation, impair the health of the people, and endanger the safety of the State. As my traffic flourishes in proportion to your ignorance and sensuality, I will do my utmost to prevent your intellectual elevation, moral purity, social happiness, and eternal welfare. Should you doubt my ability I refer to the pawn shop, the police office, the hospital, lunatic asylum, jail and the gallows, where so many of my customers have gone. The sight of them will satisfy you that I do what I promise. JUDAS HEARTLESS.

A sick man was advised to go to a doctor for advice; the doctor happened to be a very thin, spare man, so when the invalid saw him, he refused to take any advice from him, remarking: "Why you look to be a confounded sight worse than I am."

No Whiskey!

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881.
Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

L. P. CUSHMAN, Editor.
A. E. P. ALBERT, D. D., Assistant.

Subscriptions from now to end of 1883 taken at $1.

THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1883.

Circular No. 1, 1883, of the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., is a compend of the legal provisions of the several States respecting the examination and licensing of teachers, and therefore valuable for reference.

It seems after all that the dwellers upon St. Charles Avenue are to have a paved roadway. From Lee circle to Louisiana avenue the paving on both sides is to be thirty feet. From Louisiana avenue to Carrollton the paving upon the river side is to be twenty-four feet wide.

Throughout central Louisiana the crops are in excellent condition. Most of the corn is laid by, while the cotton is generally doing well. A few "first cotton blooms" are already exhibiting themselves. With such prospects, it is no wonder that our happy planters wear bright and cheerful faces.

L. M. Hagood, Nashville: "Everyone of taste whom I have met admires the improved appearance of the SOUTHWESTERN. It is winning its way among the people and is destined to take its place alongside of any church paper in the land. Long may it live to bless the Church and mankind."

The annual catalogue of Philander Smith College, Little Rock, Arkansas, 1882-83, is on our table. "The privileges of the College will be granted to all without regard to race, color, sect or sex," is an italicized sentence which demonstrates the fidelity of this institution to its founders and the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Alfred L. Sewell, No. 40 State Street, Chicago, Ill., has the most convenient device we have seen for the use of Sunday-school teachers. It is a Sunday-school wallet, a pocket for each lesson in the month. It is just the thing to hold the lesson leaves or anything pertaining to the school. Price five cents per single copy or fifty cents per dozen.

The Texas Methodist Advocate is sent regularly to the Rev. John Wesley. Who can duplicate it?

Not only have Rev. John Wesley, George Washington, Thos. Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, and Millard Fillmore been regularly comforted by the SOUTHWESTERN, but its scintillations of light have aroused the enthusiasm of Mr. Bug Tate. Brother, can you duplicate that?

We have read of a Kentucky presiding elder who wrote a gushing letter to one of the Advocates describing the ministers of his district thus: "The deacons and elders on my district are all the husbands of one wife." Whereupon two of his preachers published a letter conjointly denying the slanderous statement, and declaring that each deacon and elder had a wife of his own.

The Vicksburg [illegible] published as a [illegible] of the recent meeting of the Republican State Committee, one asserting Gen. J. R. Chalmers to be a friend and ally in whom they had confidence; a friend of the Administration who had been cheated out of an honest election. The Peoples' Adviser says the resolution was presented, referred to a committee and died, not even being adopted or reported to the meeting.

Rev. J. W. Hamilton, pastor of the People's Church, Boston, Mass., in a personal note to the editor says: "I do not know as I have paid you for the SOUTHWESTERN. I will pay you now. It is so well worth the money, that one such paper in the Church ought to be sustained. These, again, are tremulous days for people to say all you say. But preach God's truth, and if they will not hear let them know at least that a prophet has been in their midst."

Aggressiveness.

We cannot in any way sympathize with the "I cant's" or "do nothings" in the church. We like gentleness, love and peace. But the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force. All the world was included in the apostolic commission, Christ's ministers are to go out into the high-ways and hedges, into waste and desert places. Religion is a light and it flashes in all directions. It is a mustard seed, and germinates and grows a tree on whose branches the fowls of the air come and lodge. It is leaven in the meal working till the whole lump is leavened. It is not fierce, violent or censorious but it is aggressive. "The stone cut out of the mountains without hands" is to "break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver and the gold," and "become a great mountain and fill the whole earth." Right and truth must ultimately triumph. The period of their ascendency may be delayed but it is sure to come. Their sound is to run into all the earth and their voice to the end of the world, and "the kingdoms of this world" shall "become the kingdom of our God, and of his Christ." Satan may for a season deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, and Gog and Magog may gather themselves to battle, and their number be as the sand of the sea, but in the end the islands of the sea shall clap their hands for joy, and the heavenly hosts join exultingly in the chorus, "Hallelujah; the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." He shall reign.

Bro. Johnson, Editor of the Texas Methodist Advocate, has a well prepared paper on "Is the Organic Union of Methodism Desirable and Practicable." This argument relates only to two Methodisms. The Methodist Episcopal Church and the M. E. Church South. He considers the union of these two Methodisms desirable, as it would destroy sectionalism, which he regards as one of the great perils of the nation; it would put Methodism in the right position in the eyes of the world, and it would increase the spiritual power of the church. All that needs to be done to have this accomplished is for us to expunge from our Discipline all reference to slavery, and the M. E. Church South to drop the word South from its corporate name. This is certainly an easy way to accomplish the union of two of these Methodisms, but it leaves a number standing out in the cold. We have in this country almost as many Methodisms as different nationalities. Now If Bro. Johnson can devise a plan for the unifying of all of these Methodist families, not a confederation, not a mixing as of oil and water, but a real assimilation, we will say, Amen. Some people may stand aghast, others may stagger a little, but neither more nor less than this will satisfy us. Until that time, it is as true of churches as of individuals, they will get a good living by attending to their own business.

We are in receipt of an address delivered by Rev. J. W. Hamilton, at Natick, Mass., on memorial day, on "National Assimilation." Bro. Hamilton holds a strong hand and ploughs a straight furrow. He has no place for the poor arts of cunning and cant or cumin and anise. He says truthfully, "There are no races in America which have not mingled with other races found here," and that "five generations more with a continued immigration will mix America as thickly or thinly as the Crescent City is mixed," where "there is little unmingled blood in the creoles of three generations." He thinks that the "mulattoes, quadroons and octoroons, measure the dissipation of race distinctions, so the second and third generations of mixed people from the ends of the earth, as found in great cities, foreshadowed a homogeneous nation whose God is the Lord." Hence he contends with marked ability for one broad Christian civilization, "absorbing and conquering all the foreign and antagonistic social varieties now entering into the life of our great republic." Thank the Lord we are getting beyond the waddling lizard, the pig-headedness and intolerance of the past. Silently and sweetly Christ is moving on, and is fast removing the mistaken notions of men about themselves and their brothers. Let those who like to paddle in muddy waters keep silence.

One of our preachers, not long since, on account of his color, had to sleep in the woods one night. Traveling through the country in his buggy he had the misfortune to break down, a great distance from home and where he was not known. Night coming on he hurried to the house of the nearest colored family, to seek lodging for the night; but all in vain. The head of the house addressing him said: "I am sorry sir, but you can't stay here in my house to-night, It would not be safe for me, a colored man, to allow you, a white man to stay in my house." The brother protested that he was not a white man, but all to no purpose. Leaving their house he went to other colored families, but with as little success. None would lodge him for the night because he was thought to be a white man. Failing among the colored, he went among the white but only to fail again most disastrously. They could not entertain him they said because he was a "Nigger." This unfortunate brother was too white to secure lodging among the colored people and not white enough to secure it among the whites, hence he had to take to the woods for it. There he spent the night in solitude a wiser, though perhaps not a better man.

The Colfax Chronicle, the People's Vindicator, and other papers published in the section along the line of the Texas Pacific R. R. in this State, are waging a vigorous warfare against what they style "the Texas Pacific railroad land grab." The Natchitaches Vindicator, says:

As a question of law we have no hesitancy in asserting that the Texas Pacific Railroad under its charter has no shadow of right to the lands in this State, on which it has laid violent hands, and compelled, under threats of ejectment, the actual and bona fide settler of government lands, to pay to it (the railroad,) a price in cash greatly in excess of that required by the general goverment.

Again it continues:

As a matter of fact, we here assert that the Texas Pacific Railroad had or has no right to sell a single acre of this land.

The necessity of investigating this "land grab" matter must be apparent to every defender of the people's rights, against the encroachments of powerful corporations. The next Congress owes it to the many settlers on these lands to forever settle in impartial justice their rightful titles

Our Assistant met a large number of the Mississippi brethren at the commencement and dedicatory exercises at Rust University at Holly Springs, Miss. Every one of whom he met congratulated him upon the appearance of the SOUTHWESTERN in its new dress, and heartily thanked the editors for the manly and uncompromising stand taken against all caste and color prejudice in church or State. He states it as his honest conviction that the paper is more popular among the Mississippi brethren whom he had met, and among those of his district than at any time since he has been connected with the paper. "It is booming," he says.

The catalogue of LaTeche Seminary, 1882-3, is on our table. It reports 217 pupils enrolled. In the primary department 78, intermediate 64, English 67, Theological 6, classical 3, University Preparatory 2. This Seminary has a charming location. It is spoken of in the catalogue as a Christian, but not a sectarian school. The faculty are Christians seeking only the general good of their pupils.

The Daily Arkansas Gazette of the fifth inst gives a pleasant account of the commencement exercises of the Little Rock University. The baccalaureate sermon by Geo. W. Gray, D.D., upon the unity of the race and the oneness of all who are in Christ, was a clear and Christian presentation of these questions. He said:

"The unity of the race is maintained by the relation we sustain to Christ. Christian society is but an expression of the inner Christ. With the most complete personality there could be no oppression. Why? Because all become one in Christ. As the body is the expression of the inner mind, so society is the expression of inner Christ. The mission of Christ is to do good, to upbuild society, and we are but the instruments. One may be a serf or slave, but above that, as Paul says, he is a brother. While they may be hewers of wood and drawers of water, yet they are part of the whole that grows out of the bidding of Christ. Paul argues this question, what would become of society if we were all any one thing. He argues the folly of any one part of human society decrying the other parts. Society is made up of parts. All parts of the body.

All the questions that agitate society would be simplified if we would feel that all men are members of one great whole. Out of this comes universal sympathy. Some people make an ado about missionary work; that there is enough to do at home. But the essence of Christianity is missionary work. No lines or boundaries can be drawn to it. Wherever he is, the man that feels that he is a part of the whole, links himself with the world.

It binds us together by a common bond. We want to develop this power. Wherever Christian civilization goes experience shows it ennobles the human race. When human society shall stand out with a strong individuality, restrained by love of Christ, it takes up the great mass of mankind to a higher plane.

The Northern justly says:

The Atlanta Post-Appeal, very narrowly, is opposed to the whole public school system because by its operation the whites in the South will be taxed to educate the blacks. It believes that each race should pay for its own education. Which unfairness compels us to say: There is about one fairly black man in the South to fifty or twice fifty mulattoes. Like the race themselves, the educational expense is decidedly "mixed." Indeed, it is too late to discriminate. Tax the whites and blacks alike for schools, and then make the children of both go to school.

Our cotemporary is right; there is more than twice fifty mulattoes, quadroons and octoroons, to one pure black, and in a community where full fourteen-fifteenths of the colored people are partly white, what could be more unbecoming than the proposition that each race should be taxed for its own education. Wonder how it would work to have every father taxed for the education of his own children?

At a meeting of the school board of East Baton Rouge parish, La., recently, a resolution was offered expressing the belief that under article 224 of the Constitution, the apportionments of $30,000 per year to the State Universities is an injustice to free public schools and unconstitutional. Therefore it directed the District attorney to bring suit immediately to enjoin the State Auditor from issuing, and the Treasurer from paying warrants on the funds appropriated by the Legislature, under act 63 of 1882, and the sum of ten dollars was allowed from the general contingent fund of the parish to supplement the amount appropriated by other parishes to defray the expenses of the suit.

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Southern Colored University, C. H. Thompson, D.D., president of the faculty, stated that they had instructed 209 pupils, 92 male and 117 female, and were preparing four for college. It was resolved that this session of the school close the last Friday in June, and the next session begin the first Monday in October. It was also resolved that all the present faculty retire July 1, and that the board be empowered to appoint the next faculty during vacation.

The Evangelical Alliance, of Japan, which embraces all Protestant churches in Japan, in its summaries for 1882 reports 93 organized churches, with a membership of 4,987; pupils at schools, 2,546; theological students, 71; Sunday-schools, 109 with 4,131 pupils; ordained preachers, 49; assistant preachers and catechists, 100; converts baptized during the past year, 895; contributions of native Christians, $7,540 30. These results are highly gratifying, and afford many reasons for which Christians here at home should be thankful, and continue to manifest a lively interest, with their purse and prayer, in behalf of all our mission fields. God owns and blesses Christian labor among any people any where. Let the church be true; Let Paul plant and Apollos water, and God will, as He always does, give the increase.

Rev. W. F. Hatfield, who made a tour through Virginia, and the Carolinas, wrote to the New York Advocate: "No intelligent person feeling the claims of humanity resting upon him can visit this section of our land, mingle with the people, attend the schools and colleges where the descendants of those once enslaved are taking rank in scholarship with those in Northern institutions, witness the progress of the Freedmen in industrial pursuits note the growth of moral sentiment in their favor, and also the efforts that are being made to secure their suffrages for partisan purposes, and to proselyte them to the Church of Rome, without the conviction that an opportunity is afforded the evangelical Churches of America, especially our own, the grandest that was ever offered, and that a duty the most sacred and important devolves upon us as a nation."

The foreman in the publishing department of the State Central Express, the leading Democratic paper in Central Louisiana, published at Alexandria, is a colored man connected with that paper. His name is P. H. Osborne. He is a bright, intelligent, and respectable young man of Alexandria, and is a teacher, and secretary of our Sunday-school there. Mr. Osborne is the only colored man connected with that paper, but by virtue of his worth he is placed in charge of the publishing department, and of the three white men who are also employed in that office. Mr. A. D. Williams, the publisher, and Judge J. R. Waters, the editor of the Express, deserve great credit for ignoring caste and appreciating faithfulness, worth and efficiency, in the selection of Mr. Osborne for their foreman.

Speaking of Lieutenant Schwatka and the detail of five persons made by the War Department for exploration in Alaska, the Chicago Interior says: "The experience and energy of the head of this little party gives assurance that valuable results will follow their investigations. It is true that this is a beggarly force to send out for the exploration of the resources of so vast and important a region as Alaska, but any effort to break up the corner on this great territory which has been too long enjoyed by the Alaska Commercial Company must be welcomed as good as far as it goes."

We have read of a pension agent at Natchez, Miss., who secured a colored widow a pension of one thousand dollars and handed over to the poor widow one hundred and fifty dollars, taking the balance as his fee. We would like to have some of our readers at Natchez give us a little information as to this matter. We would like to know if such a transaction did actually occur. Then we would like to know the name of that pension agent, who evidently believes that "a nought is a nought and a figure is a figure," that the figure is for the pension agent and nought for the poor widow.

—About noon on Monday last, M. Sagendorph, Esq., one of the proprietors of the Evening Chronicle, of this city, received injuries on the head from some falling bricks and mortar which dropped from an upper story, and rear of the building corner Bank Alley and Natchez streets, as he was passing on the sidewalk. He is to be congratulated on his narrow escape. Two scalp wounds and bruised limbs it is believed will speedily heal.

The remains of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," were interred in Oakhill Cemetery at Washington, under a noble monument to his memory. A grand procession followed the poet's dust to its last resting-place, the President, members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court, Foreign diplomats, Senators, Congressmen, and other prominent persons being in the funeral throng. The services at the tomb were impressive, the Philharmonic Society and Marine Band rendering the solemn music of the occasion.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

TENNESSEE.

Moses Cox, Georgetown Circuit: "I have been reading your good paper now for some time and like it much; it is the paper that our people need in this part of our beloved Methodism. I have been trying to get some subscribers for it; but our people are very poor up here and can hardly pay for a paper. At our second quarterly meeting we had a glorious time. Our much loved presiding elder, Rev. E. Provine, was with us and preached us some good sermons that we have not yet forgotten. The love feast was a feast indeed, and several partook of the Lord's Supper. During the evening one was converted and united with the church, one was baptized. These are good people and it seems that they are doing what they can for their pastor and presiding elder. We are hoping for better times now. The first part of the year we were scattered by the small pox, but that dreaded scourge has abated, and we are again rallying our forces together and the prospects are good. Our Sunday-schools are also doing well. Some of the mothers and fathers walk two and three miles every Sunday and bring their children to Sunday-school, and thus keep it up. Pray for us that we may do some good; and may your good paper continue to hold up for the right, and rebuke the wrong."

Hon. John W. Ramsey, of Cleveland,, believes District conferences a necessity covering the spiritual and temporal affairs of a large field. The introductory sermons or discourses should be carefully prepared, and each literary exercise or report be subjected to just and discriminating criticism. Reports should be brief, of the work, not of man, and would make a complete map and history of the district, and every reporter a better workman.

G. C. Hardin, Linden circuit: "The presiding elder held our second quarterly conference. The sermons were eagerly listened to; there was a large crowd of mourners, backsliders were reclaimed. Paid elder $5.35; pastor $32.75. Thirteen joined the church. The benevolent causes have been remembered. Our white friends were pleased with the sermons."

Jesse Stanfield, recording steward, Cumberland Furnace: "Some 150 of us went to Charlotte to attend our second quarterly conference, and were much disappointed by the Elder not being present. Our preacher had a praise meeting, and preached us a carefully prepared sermon at 2 o'clock in the courthouse, the church being inadequate to hold the people; $18.45 was the collection. We are doing something for all the collections."

J. F. Summerhill, Lawrenceburg: "Our floral exposition passed off nicely, on the 18th inst. at St. John's M. E. Church. It was given by sisters for the benefit of the church, and $19.80 was cleared. The second quarterly meeting was held by Rev. E. M. Manson. Received this quarter on benevolent claims $4.35; for elder $9.40; pastor $35.55. This is more than ever before in one quarter."

LOUISIANA.

The observance of Children's Day in the Louisiana Conference is becoming more and more general. At Cheneyville, Booneville, Alexandria, Natchitoches, and at many other points in this State the day was celebrated this year in a fitting manner, as never before. The State Central Express, of Alexandria, the People's Vindicator of Natchitoches, and other papers in that portion of the state, comment very flatteringly upon the beauty and brilliant success displayed in the faithful observance of the day.

George A. Payne, Bertie: "We met May 11, under the supervision of Mrs. Dale, for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Home Missionary Society. After listening to an admirable lecture by Mrs Dale, we enrolled 36 names. The society is officered as follows: Judy Parker, president; Priscilla Williams, first, Josephine Williams, second, and Elvina Francis third vice-president; Carrie Tunson recording secretary; G. W. Brown, corresponding secretary: Eliza Hill, treasurer; Nancy Harris, Alice King and Rose Prudhy vigilant committee. We feel that no other work is more important, and expect good results to follow. In the missionary school now open Robert Armstrong, teacher, there are thirty scholars, and the number is increasing."

MISSISSIPPI.

L. J. S. Bell, Coffadeliah: "The Philadelphia circuit has been signally blessed during the month of May. On the first Sabbath a number came forward for prayers; on the second Sabbath one joined; on the third Sabbath three joined; and there were more on the fourth Sunday. There have been 15 accessions this year. Sunday-schools are moving along nicely. The cyclone destroyed much property, and left some members without homes, but fortunately no lives were lost."

F. G. Bumpass, steward, sent us from Aberdeen a long list of contributors to the building of the church there, and requested us to publish, but as the list is long, and would require too much space, we must decline to do so. We rejoice to learn of the excellent spirit pervading this church as shown by the support of the brethren. There was raised for the elder $18.75, for pastor $67.25. Says Bro. Bumpass: "On May 26, Elder Shumpert held the second quarterly conference, preached and administered sacrament to 174 persons. Bro. P. Jamison, our pastor is carrying on a good work in Aberdeen, is much loved, and is an earnest worker in the cause of Christ."

N. Cannon, Pass Christian: "Elder W. McDonald held our quarterly conference and we had a pleasant session. He conducted our Sunday services, and administered sacrament to 73. One joined the church. Paid elder $17.50, pastor $100.35 this quarter."

TEXAS.

M. Wilson, Butler: "My work is progressing finely. I have received in full connection 22, on probation 4. We shall observe children's day, and do all we can for the grand cause of education among the people in the South."

A. Logan, Woodville: "I have had a hard time but other brethren helped me, and I have one Sunday-school and 23 church members. The congregation is increasing, and we have bought an acre of land to build a church on. I think the prospect is good."

H. W. Wilson, Willis: "Elder W. B. Pullam held our second quarterly at conference; nearly all official brethren were present with their reports, which exhibited the work in a prosperous condition. The elder is a good leader, and animated his hearers by his instruction. About 400 listened to his sermon, and most of them partook of sacrament. Received four members; collections $22; raised by subscription $33 for building purposes. We are now in our new church; though is it not complete, we are making rapid progress toward completion. We have a very fine Sunday-School and an excellent day school, of which Mr. J. R. Anderson is principal. A better man for the position can't be found. He also deserves great credit for efficient services in helping us to purchase an organ for our Sabbath School and playing for us every Sabbath. A few more such men as J. R. Anderson and our people will be what they should be viz. honest, upright, and intelligent citizens. How I long to see the time come when our schools can have such men to take charge of them and devote their time and talents to the training of the youthful minds and morals of our children. Then and not till then will the condition of our affairs be changed."

Editorial Correspondence.

A VISIT TO RUST UNIVERSITY.

What a wonderful age is this in which we live! It is the "Iron Age," animated by steam and electricity, and tempered with the blessed influences of an enlightened Christian civilization. A more veritable "golden age" than that of all the ages of antiquity. One sees, hears and knows more in a single day, in this age, than Methuseleh could in nearly a thousand years. After spending Sunday, June 10 very pleasantly and profitably in Alexandria, next day, Monday morning, at 5 o'clock, the writer boarded the train of the Morgan's Louisiana & Texas railroad, bound for Holly Springs, Miss. Arriving at New Orleans at 4:45 p.m., and making close connection with the evening train on the "great Jackson Route," Holly Springs, Miss., was reached Tuesday 12th inst., at 8 o'clock a. m., covering a distance of over 600 miles in twenty-seven hours; such a distance as would probably have taken the patriarch Jacob, with his family and cattle over a month and a half to travel. As we traveled on Morgan's rail road nothing of special interest attracted our attention until we reached Bayou des Allemande. Here an unusual crowd had assembled. Close inspection brought to light the object of the crowd's curiosity—a white man lying down on the floor of the depot. He was bloody from head to heels. We soon learned that he had been charged with crime, had resisted arrest, and was, it was thought, fatally wounded by the arresting officer. The wounded man was taken to the hospital at New Orleans for treatment. A vivid commentary to the scriptural instruction that "the way of the transgressor is hard." Arriving at New Orleans, catching a smile and a kiss from our little daughter, and a tender word of parental affection from our devoted mother, we were soon off on the Great Jackson train, making for Holly Springs, Miss. At Summit Rev. J. H. Cook and Dr. I. E. Mullen boarded the train, and at Brookhaven Presiding Elder McDonald also fell in with us. To meet these brethren afforded a season of refreshing conversation. Dr. Mullen was going to Jackson on business; the other brethren were going to join in the commencement and dedication jubilee that was in progress at Rust University at Holly Springs. Upon our arrival there the topic of conversation upon the tongues of all whom we met was the grand time in progress and anticipated at the University. The city was crowded with eager visitors from all parts of the State, and not a few from Tennessee. Every train, regular and excursion, brought in additions to the surging multitudes who had gathered from far and near to witness the exceeding glory of this memorable occasion. Rev. J. M. Shumpert, presiding elder of the Okolona district, and Rev. DeWitt Calvert, of Starkville, accompanied us in the omnibus to the University, where we were appointed to pleasant quarters in the new Rust Hall. We were cordially greeted by President Hooper and his very kind and sweet spirited wife. Indeed the presence of such a model Christian woman in our educational work in Mississippi cannot be anything but beneficial to our work in the whole State. And this is no disparagement to any of the other most excellent ladies connected with Rust University. Indeed the institution is fortunate in the possession of an exceptional faculty of professors and teachers. Dr. Rust, with a firm step and as active as ever, was on hand to lend the great interest which his presence inspired, and to represent the great Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bishop Warren's presence and his masterly address were sources of the greatest benediction to Rust University, and to all who were so fortunate as to see and hear him. We met here, also, Rev. L. Bradford, Presiding Elder of the Holly Springs District; Rev. D. A. Williams, Presiding Elder of the Jackson District; Rev. J. W. Parks, of Jackson, Miss, and a score or more of the members of the Mississippi Conference, who had come from far and near to participate in the joys of commencement day, and to witness the dedication of Rust Hall. June 12 at Rust University was a day long to be remembered and never to be forgotten. Black and white, rich and poor, all joined in a surging mass of happy humanity in the enjoyment of the programme of the day. During his stay here the writer was grandly feasted at Prof. Hooper's liberal board, together with Rev. L. Bradford, Dr. Rust and Bishop Warren. And when, after the close of the commencement and dedicatory exercises, (account of which will be found in another column,) the writer left for home and his work on the La Teche District, Prof. Hooper kindly had his buggy hitched, and we had a pleasant drive, together with him, to the depot. Taking the train at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, 13th, and securing pleasant quarters in a sleeper, next morning fresh and early, we reached New Orleans. Here the writer stopped over a day; spent a pleasant hour with our city brethren, in the New Orlean preachers; had a hearty handshaking with our hale and wholesouled chief editor and our able and clever-hearted book-keeper, and then left for a continuance of his second quarterly round on the LaTeche District,—reaching Eola, La., June 15, at 5 p. m. Thus he had traveled in this round trip from Alexandria to Holly Springs, and back to Eola, a distance of nearly 1200 miles. It was a privilege, however, upon which he will ever look back with thanksgiving and praise; for he certainly returned from Rust University a wiser, and it is hoped, a better man. God bless Rust University, and sanctify the exercises of her recent commencement and dedication, to the promotion of Christian education and the uplifting of the vicious and ignorant masses. A.

From Whitman.

DEAR EDITOR:—No one knows how thankful I am for Mrs. Braden's letters. My heart has often yearned for a little sympathy in the work of lifting up fallen humanity; it has been up-hill work, toiling year after year with small success and sympathy; but, thank God, the thought of others toiling in similar circumstances has encouraged me to hold fast to my profession.

I trust the suggestion of Sister Braden about the "Housekeepers' Convention," will be taken hold of by the females of Nashville, and I should be very thankful to one of them to please send me a report of the proceedings as soon as said "convention" is held.

I thank you for the facts concerning our Houston Seminary. I hope the Texas Conference will be able to show to the world that "God is no respecter of persons," but all who have a desire to serve themselves, and bless their fallen fellow creatures, can do so mutually within the pale of the M. E. Church.

The destructive work that has been done in my neighborhood is enough to make Christ's followers hate caste. An official of a Methodist society near here borrowed two lamps from Ebenezer Church. I think he meant to return them, but through the wrong teaching he has had, they have not been returned. "Thou shalt not steal," is found in the Methodist catechism till yet. I am glad to see the "Band of Mercy" noticed in our neat little church paper. We have started a society in our Sunday-school the roll was presented to the members of the Texas annual conference, and a large number put their names thereon. Some men whip their wives—we do hope they will become members of the Band of Mercy. Please ask the brethren to take a collection for Houston Seminary in July, if possible. Yours in Christ,

MRS. ISABELLA HOWELLS.

Philander Smith College.

The closing exercises of the Philander Smith College was a grand time for Methodism in Little Rock and Arkansas.

The new church building on 11th and State streets was finished so nearly as to admit of the services being held there. This building cost near $6000—is a brick, and built by one of the Church Extension plans. Bishop Warren says it is the best design for a church in Christendom. The foundation and erection of the house has been done under the pastorate of the present pastor, Bro. Emory; and the success that has attended his labor during these two and a half years under the difficulties, has required no little energy and steady perseverance. But our good people who have stood so faithfully by their leaders, thank God, now worship in one of the most beautiful temples in the state.

Rev. W. H. Hickman, of the N. W. Indiana Conference, had been secured by Prof. Mason to deliver the annual lecture and preach the annual sermon. These duties he discharged with ability and to the satisfaction of all. Bro. Hickman is a graduate of the Indiana Asbury University, and though a young man, he leads his conference. His head is clear on the great question of caste, which the next General Conference may have to meet and handle honestly and squarely. He delivered a lecture before his Alma mater and took the ground that the solution of the color-line was the intermarriage of the races. Happy thought. This we consider the irrefutable and divine plan for its solution. May God hasten us the glad day when this young Indiana prophet shall see the fulfillment of his predictions. The subject of his lecture was "Preparation Before Position," and for an hour he held the large congregation almost spell-bound. The only regret of all was that he stopped too soon. We can say safely if our Southern conferences wish a friend in some General Conference office or on the Episcopal bench, let them put Rev. W. H. Hickman there and they will have a man of the Gilbert Haven type.

Prof. Mason had charge of the exercises, and the ease with which he handled the many public exhibitions showed his great power over men, and the ability which he has brought to our school and the energy he puts into his work, accounts for the great success of the school this year. Our prayer is that God may send us more like him, to help in this great fight and struggle for right and the uplifting of the poor. I. G. POLLARD.

Claflin University.

Dr. Rust wrote June 9, 1883: "The examination and commencement of Claflin University closed Wednesday, June 6th. The attendance was large, and the general appearance of the grounds and the students was excellent. The university has steadily improved for the past nine years under the supervision of Dr. Cooke, and now takes rank among the first in the South. The doctor's health has greatly improved in the past few weeks, and he enters upon the next year's work with renewed energy and enthusiasm. He is requested by trustees to visit New England and secure funds for the erection of a new college building, which is greatly needed. The examinations were thorough, the students solved the most difficult problems with promptness, and read the classics with accuracy and elegance. The commencement was a capital one, and the speaking first rate. The orations were full of good practical thoughts which could be understood, and which were highly appreciated by the audience. Four young ladies graduated in the normal course, and five young men in the full college course. The ladies engage in teaching. Two of the young men engage in the work of teaching, two in preaching, and one goes to the Meharry Medical College, So our institutions are sending forth graduates to elevate their people, and bless the world."

This is a book of travels th will give both pleasure and pro Ordinarilly the writing travel has confined himself to the si ple narative, and frequently t genius of the tourist, the char teristics of his mind and style, more important than any inform tion he imparts. One reads E erson's "English Traits" more for t sake of seeing how things we viewed by Emerson rather th for any addition to his knowled of England. In Mr. Mendenhal book we see clearly the chara teristics of his mind, and we fe at home in his society. The book is both a pa rama of the land and its peop and of Bible truths so clearly p sented as to afford the studen new basis for his meditations a the presentation of the truth. this book we have a fine illust tion of how much might be do by our scholars; in studying t Bible and bringing out the tr of the scriptures in their tr beauty, before the Christian pe lic, by observations personal made in the Holy Land. Mr. M denhall sees and writes from Christian standpoint. As neith botch nor sham we heartily co mend this book to the Christi public; we believe that it will le to a better understanding of t land of Palestine and its peop and the great truths presented the Bible.

The Housekeeper.

The Milkmaid.

A milkmaid who poised a full pail on her head,
Thus mused on her prospects in life, it is said:
"Let me see—I should think that this milk will procure
One hundred good eggs, or four-score, to be sure.

"Well then—stop a bit—it must not be forgotten,
Some of these may be broken, and some may be rotten;
But if twenty, for accident, should be detached,
It will leave me just sixty sound eggs to be hatched.

Well, sixty sound eggs—no, sound chickens I mean;
Of these some may die—we'll suppose seventeen,
Seventeen! not so many—say ten at the most,
Which will leave fifty chickens to boil or to roast.

* * * * * * *

"Six shilings a pair—five—four—three and six,
To prevent all mistakes, that low price I will fix,
Now what will that make? fifty chickens, I said,
Fifty times three and sixpence—I'll ask brother Ned.

"Twenty-five pairs of fowls—now how tiresome it is
That I can't reckon up so much money as this!
Well, there's no use of trying; so let's give a guess,—
I'll say twenty pounds, and it can't be no less.

"Twenty pounds, I am certain, will buy me a cow,
Thirty geese, and two turkeys—eight pigs and a sow;
Now if these turn out well, at the end of the year,
I shall fill both my pockets with guineas, 'tis clear."

Forgetting her burden, when this she had said,
The maid, superciliously tossed up her head;
When, alas for her prospects! her milk pail descended,
And so all her schemes for the future were ended.

This moral, I think, may be safely attached,—
"Reckon not on your chickens before they are hatched."

VELVET CAKE.—One pound sugar, one pound flour, one-half pound butter, four eggs, one teacup cold water, one teaspoon cream tartar, one-half teaspoon soda. Beat sugar and butter to a white cream; dissolve soda in the water; sift the cream tartar in the flour, mixing them thoroughly. Add to the butter and sugar the pound of flour and water; beat thoroughly; beat the eggs (the yolks first, then the whites), to stiff froth, beat them together for a minute, then stir into the cake; flavor, and beat the batter well three minutes; bake an hour. This rule makes two loaves. It may be flavored with nutmeg and spices, or with raisins and currants, or be made into a delicious chocolate cake by being baked in layers and filled with chocolate frosting.

SWEET POTATO CAKE.—Sweet potato cake is not only an appetizing dish, but this is an excellent way to use up left over potatoes: Mash a half pound of them, after removing the skin; when entirely free from lumps, mix with them about three ounces of flour, salt and pepper to taste, a good lump of butter, and warm milk enough to make a nice dough, about like biscuit dough. Roll this out on the kneading board, and cut out a cake the size of your baking tin; butter the tin well, and scatter a little flour over it; then lay the cake in; when you think it is nearly done, turn it over. If the bottom of the oven is very hot, put a grate under the baking tin to prevent the cake getting too much browned. The danger of burning is lessened if, instead of one cake, you cut the dough in biscuit shaped cakes two inches thick. If covered while baking the cakes will be more moist. These cakes can be made of other potatoes as well as of the sweet ones.

THE USE OF ARNICA.—If the arnica with which bruised limbs are bathed is heated, its good effects are perceptible much earlier than if it is applied while cold. If arnica is to be taken as a remedy, as so many physicians recommend in cases of severe sprains, it should be prepared with water in this proportion—a tablespoonful of arnica in a goblet two-thirds full of water, and of this a teaspoonful is to be taken once an hour, or once in two hours, as the severity of the case determines.

SNOW PUDDING.—Dissolve half a box of gelatine over night in one and a half pints of warm water. The next morning add the whites of four eggs, two scant tea cup-fulls of powdered sugar and one tea spoonful of extract of vanilla. Beat the mixture for an hour, then turn it into a mould and set it upon ice. Serve with golden sauce.

WHAT TO DO WITH COLD CHICKEN.—If you have cold chicken left from dinner, and do not know what to do it with, as there is not enough for a meal, try this way of disposing of it: Mince it quite fine, adding some minced ham, and breadcrumbs, moistened with cream, season with pepper and salt, put in a pudding dish, and spread a thin coating of butter over the top; set it in the oven, and let it bake until it is nicely browned on the top. This is a good dish for tea.

A remedy for weak or inflamed eyes is to take Epson salts and water in proportion of a teaspoonful of the salts to one tumblerful of water, or, what is better, milk and water, and bathe the eyelids with it, using a small soft sponge or piece of old linen.

GRATED APPLE PIE.—Pare and grate on a coarse grater sufficient quantity of ripe apples to make pies as you wish; use rather a deep pie plate, line with a crust, put in a layer of grated apples, then sugar and nutmeg, a little butter or sweet cream if desired; after you have filled the plate, put narrow strips of the pastry across, and bake slowly, or you may leave off the strips, and when done sprinkle with dessicated cocoanut.

PEAS, STEAMED.—Line your steamer with lettuce leaves, put in one leek and put in the peas. Cover close and steam them; when done, butter well and salt them; or if you have no steamer, put them into a tin pail, or some other vessel with a close fitting cover, without water; to every quart of peas, allow one tablespoonful of butter; set the vessel in boiling water and cook until the peas are perfectly tender. Salt to taste. Peas cooked in this way retain their whole flavor.

Mortar and paint may be removed from window glass by applying hot sharp vinegar.

DRINK FOR FOWLS.—Pure water should at all times be within reach of every fowl and chick; but such is their perversity that if possible to find something stronger than pure water they will eagerly drink it to the immediate danger of their own lives. Shallow tin platters are the first drinking cups, which are kept from overturning by a stone in the middle. These must be scrubbed daily with a small whisk broom, to insure cleanliness. For the older ones a common tin pan, weighted with a stone, is as convenient as any thing. It is easily moved and cleaned.

It is admitted by all competent to judge, that the study of the ancient classics imparts to the student breadth and catholicity of view. At the feet of the great masters he learns humility. The door of wisdom is a low door, and a man must stoop to enter it. When a student has learned this lesson, the vast field begin to open. To his candid mind the wide areas of truth appear equally beautiful and attractive. There is a harmony in his culture which does not prompt him to regard with prejudice or suspicion any department of truth which is attractive to men, but to open his mind to them all with an increasing interest and good-will. —The Teacher.

Where Are You Going, Young Man?

Where are you going so fast, young man,
Where are you going so fast,
With the cup in your hand, and a flush on your brow?
Though pleasure and mirth may accompany you now,
It tells of sorrow to come by and by;
It tells of a pang that is sealed with a sigh;
It tells of a shame at last, young man,—
A withering shame that will last.

Where are you going so fast, young man?
Where are you going so fast?
In the flush of that wine there is only a bait—
A curse lies beneath that you'll find when too late;
A serpent sleeps down in the depths of that cup;
A monster is there that will swallow you up;
A sorrow you'll find at last, young man—
In wine there is sorrow at last.

There's a reckoning day to come, young man;
A reckoning day to come,
A life yet to live, and a death yet to die,
A sad, parting tear and a sad, parting sigh;
A journey to make, and a famishing heart,
A sharp pang to feel from Death's chilling dart;
A curse if you drink that rum, young man,—
The bitterest curse in that rum.

Gov. Butler's First Assult on Massachusetts.

HIS CHARGE.

It can be shown that from one hundred and sixty to two hundred and fifty infant corpses were annually sold as merchandise to a single medical institution in the State, for from $3 to $5 each.—Gov. Butler's Message.

THE EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT IT.

I know that I used fifty or sixty infant bodies a month for the purpose of dissection. I had no knowledge where the bodies came from except as Andrews (the janitor of Harvard Medical college) told me they came from the Tewksbury almshouse. Saw several hundred bodies of infants at the college every year. They came in a team; did not know the driver's name, and should not know it.—Dr. Dixwell.

THE DISPROOF.

I dissected at the Medical school with Dr. Dixwell. I never saw a baby in the dissecting room, and only one in the "dead room." Dixwell told me of a severe fit of sickness he had a few years ago, and I thought it greatly changed his character. He exhibited a general erratic condition.—Dr. William A. Dunn.

I became acquainted with Dr. Dixwell at the Harvard Medical school and saw him frequently; do not think he could have dissected two or three bodies a week without my knowing it.—Dr. James A. Fleming.

I know Dr. Dixwell. His reputation for truth and veracity is not good.—Dr. Edward H. Bradford.

I was demonstrator of anatomy at the school from 1869 to 1879, and had entire control of the bodies. During the three years Dr. Dixwell was in the school there was never an infant's body in the dissecting room, or "dead room" adjoining; nor was any baby dissected there in those years.—Dr. Charles D. Porter.

I have been regularly connected with the school since 1872; never knew of an infant being dissected there. Babies' bodies would be of no value for the purposes of the school.—Dr. Wm. L. Richardson.

I was officially connected with the school from 1856 to 1872—till 1862 as demonstrator. Up to that time never knew of a baby being brought there for dissection or any other purpose. The value of a baby for dissection is trival.—Dr. R. M. Hodges.

Dr. Dixwell's reputation for truth and veracity is bad.—Dr. Charles F. Folsom.

THE GOVERNOR'S NEW DECLARATION.

I disclaim that there were any babies dissected in the dissecting room.—Gov. Butler, May 16.

Emory Storrs says the five hundred saloons in Chicago bear the same relation to the penitentiary that the Sunday-Schools do to the church.

CAROLINE CLARK.

Keep Honestly Busy.

It is ordained of God that man should labor. He must have food; to have it he must earn it; and to earn brings sweat upon his brow. The curse however, is turned into blessing, for the idle man can not be happy, and is peculiarly exposed to the power of temptation. Repine not therefore because you are obliged to work, nor be easily discouraged because your exertions are not immediately successful. What if we do meet disappointment and rebuff? It is the common lot of mortals. Succumb not thereto, but press forward.

As one observes: The cheerful are busy. When trouble knocks at your door, or rings the bell, he will generally retire if you send him word you are engaged.

Nothing ventured, nothing have;
Never give up to sighing;
Never sit down and fold your hands,
But try, and keep on trying.

Warm Hearts Wanted.

"We need men of cool heads, but hot hearts, to tell of the love of Jesus," was the appeal sent home by some Chinese converts the other day. This is what the church needs—what the world needs—"Men of hot hearts." "I would ye were hot," is the Master's cry. If we are to succeed, we must be on fire about it. Dr. Arnot, of Edinburgh, tells of his being at a railroad station one day, and wearied of waiting for the train to move, he asked one of the men what the trouble was.

"Is there a want of water?"

"Plenty of water, sir," was the prompt reply, "but it's no bilin'."

That's the trouble with the church to-day. There's abundance of machinery, the engine is all in order, the train is made up, the men are at their post—"there's plenty of water, but it's no bilin'." The great motive power is wanting. We need to heap on the fuel of sound doctrine, not shavings of sentiment which make a big blaze only to go out as quickly, but the solid logs of fundamental truth—chunks if you will. But we need yet more the fire—to be baptised with the Holy Ghost as with fire.—Bible Banner.

New York.

Mrs. Twiet, No. 8 Avenue D, says she has been troubled with worms for more than a year, and that she took one bottle of Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., which brought away from her over three hundred worms, big and little. She now believes herself to be entirely free from disease.

Messrs. D. & J. W. Colton, of Winchester, Ind., happened last spring to get some of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge. After selling a few bottles, the demand became so great for it that their stock was soon exhausted. They state that it has produced the best effect wherever used, and is very popular among the people.

Andrew Downing, of Cranburgh township, Venango county, gave his child one teaspoonful of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and she passed 177 worms. Next morning, on repetition of the dose, she passed 113 more.

Benthen Houghman, of West Union, Fayette county, Iowa, writes that that he is unable to supply the demand, as the people in his neighborhood say, after a trial of the others, that none is equal to Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge.

New York.

Mrs. Hardy, 119 Suffolk street, writes us that she has been troubled with worms for some three years, and that she used one vial of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., which brought away over fifty large worms. Her usual good health immediately returned.

—AND—

REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational singing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tale. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

A Talarial Victim.

TO THE EDITOR:

The following circnmstances, drawn from my personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified:

In 1875, I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence county. N. Y., to Florida, which state I intended to make my future residence. I pnrchased a home on the banks of the St. John's river and settled down, as I thonght, for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be the accompaniment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached. My limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had a thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of natnre to become acclimated and so I thought little of it. Bnt my troubies increased untll I became restless and feverish and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing steadily worse. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary,—that I could not snrvive another summer in the south. I determined to return north, but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at Upper Sandnsky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am to-day a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or conrse of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be dne to the preprietors and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had work its way so thoronghly throngh my system during my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable, but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four week's trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., bnt for the pnblic, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or billons attacks."

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and snch I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malaria of five years' standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarial tronbles which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

The words of Joshua Billings are pointed. "Thar iz advice ennff lying around loose to run three jnst such worlds as this. What we are suffering most for iz sum good examples."

Ducks charge everybody with being a "qnack," and there are but n few who are exempt from the gosling accusation, Dr. Bull's Congh Syrnp is certainly nn exception to the rule, as it is no donbt the greatest remedy offered to a suffering people.

Changes in the system of Mormonism are evideutly coming. The Rev. D. L. Leonard, of Salt Lake, says that "despite the facts that from 200 to 400 missionaries are sent ont annually, whose term of service is about two years, and who secure between 2,000 and 3,000 adherents, a disintegration of Mormonism seems to be surely taking place. Besides the power of Christian Churches and schools, there are material forces which are hastening this result. The Deseret Evening News of April 14, the official paper of the Mormon Chnrch, contains statistics of the Scandinavian Mission, from which it seems that abont one in three of the converts in those conntries apostatize from Mormonism before leaving for Utah. It appears, too, that ont of 31 'apostles' from the beginning 8, or nearly one-fourth, have been excommunicated"

"Golden Medical Discovery" for all scrofalons and virulent blood-poisons, is specific. By druggists.

Bishop Burnett preached before Charles II., on one occasion and at a certain point he brought his fist down on the pulpit cushion with great emphasis, saying. "Who dare deny this statement?" The King quietly rejoined: "Nobody, Bishop, who is within reach of such a blow as that."

Hop Bitters Co., Toronto:

I have been sick for the past six years, suffering from dyspepsia and general weakness. I have used three bottles of Hop Bitters, and they have done wonders for me. I am well and able to work, and eat and sleep well. I cannot say too much for Hop Bitters.

SIMON ROBBINS.

The Kentucky Republican State Convention, among excellent resolutions adopted one on the tariff question, which neatly countered the Democratic position and was worthy of the memory of Henry Clay, the father of the American protective system. The resolution says:

Third—That we favor an adjustment of the tariff that will not only provide a revenue sufficient to defray the expenses of the government, but afford just and reasonable protection to the indnstrial classes of our country without being oppressive to the agricultural and other interests of our people.

Better than $10,000

"I spent over $10,000 in 23 years," said Major H. W. Hines, of Boston, Mass., "in being doctered for epilepsy. I employed the best physicians in New Orleans, St. Lonis, N. York, Phila., Boston, London and Paris, but all to no purpose. Samaritan Nervine has cured me entirely." $1.50.

Judsonia has set a good example for other towns of the state. She has decided to hold a fair this coming autumn. It strikes ns that there are very few connty towns in Arkansas, that conld not get up a fair or exposition that would be a credit to the county. Fairs are great stimulations of indnstry, provided they do not degenerate into horse racing and petty gambling, as is too often the case of late. Our state fairs are notable instances of a disposition to encourage a species of a depravity like this.—Arkansas Mansion.

The English Methodist Thanksgiving Fund now amounts to $1,452,120.

If only we could realize the cost of any great thought, who to him gives it expression, we should put an added valne on that which attracts and impresses ns, as we read it, or as we hear it spoken. "The ink of it it is a brave man's life-blood," wrote Carlyle of Hugh Miller's last work. And there is rarely anything spoken or written so as to lay hold on the life and heart of others nnless more or less of the life-blood of him who utters it has gone into its composition or its expression. —*S. Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cnre of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, nlso a positive and radical cure for Nervons Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A very important decision has been reached by the United States court in Iowa. It seems that a firm in Milwaukee brought suit against a citizen of Iowa for liquors sold. The defense set up was that the plaitiffs knew that the defendant bought the liquor to sell at retail in violation of the law, and that the debt was void. The court so decided.

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, ... but in no case can the eye become injured by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light ... away with that tired sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard: they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. REVIEW. June 24.

Your heart is full of pictures, and if you have learned the lessons this quarter you have twelve Bible pictures hung in your heart.

First, we have good, brave Philip, his face full of love, and Simon, the deceitful man, whose "heart was not right in the sight of God."

Second, we have a chariot and two men in it busy reading God's Book. They are Philip and the rich man from Ethiopia, who is so glad to hear about Jesus.

Next is a great light picture, and a man is on the ground with the great light around him. We know this is Saul, and God is in the light calling him.

Fourth, we have a picture of Saul coming down from a wall in a basket, and we remember how he preached for Jesus and the Jews tried to kill him.

Then comes a double picture. A lame man walks, a dead women arises and is well. The man is lame Eneas, and the woman good, kind Dorcas. Peter does this because God helps him.

Sixth, comes Peter preaching to the Gentiles; and now our next picture is far away from Jerusalem, in Antioch, and Barnabas and Saul are there preaching about Jesus

Eighth is a prison, and Peter is in it. It is deep night, but a light comes, and an angel leads Peter safe away from the dark prison.

Nine brings an island picture. It is Cyprus, in the Mediterranean Sea. Paul and Barnabas are there preaching.

Ten is a city picture, with Paul preaching to a great crowd. God's word is spreading. This is another city called Antioch.

Next we find Paul at Lystra, where he healed a poor cripple, and told people it was God alone who gave him power to cure and heal.

Last comes our great missionary-meeting picture. Paul is back at Antioch, the city he started from, and they have the first great missionary praise service.

Paul and those who loved Jesus worked hard to tell people about him, and you must be like them. Be sure to do as your lessons teach, and you will preach a good sermon every day God lets you live.—Western.

On Jan. 10, little Louisa, daughter of Brother and Sister David Robinson, aged four years, ten months and two days, was standing near the fire place, her clothes caught fire and she was fatally burned; she died the following day. Her father in the field heard her cries and ran to her assistance, but her clothing was gone before he reached her. She asked her mother to pray, and the poor child prayed for comfort from the Master.

Jan. 16, Sister Priscilla Backstrom died aged 43 years. She was a faithful member and felt ready to go. She left a husband and several children.

March 5, Sister Jennie Land, aged 52 years, fell dead on the roadside all alone, but her testimony in class the day before was that she had been in the service of the Lord many years. She left a husband and many children to mourn her loss.

Coffadeliah, Miss. L. J. S. BELL.

Sister Maria Mayfield, after an illness ten months, departed this life, on May 22, 1883, aged 37 years, 3 months and 20 days. She was converted in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and received by Rev. L. Baker in 1869. She lived a faithful member, and told me a few days before she died she was ready to go whenever the Lord was willing to call her away. She was willing to bear all her affliction here to gain heaven. She leaves a husband, four children, and relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Our loss is her eternal gain. N. CANNON.

Desperate Case.

"As a rule," says Drs Starkey & Palen, "our patients belong to that large class of invalids who have failed to get relief from skilled physicians, or from the use of drugs or patent medicines. Their diseases are chronic; frequently of many years standing, and often so deeply intrenched in some vital organ that cure becomes almost a miracle. They come to us in despair of help from any other source, catching at our Compound Oxygen Treatment as a drowning man at a straw. The marvel is, that of these apparently hopeless cases, so many are ameliorated—greatly helped, or radically cured, by the subtle agent we administer. Cases which we have hesitated to undertake, and which in spite of our discouraging answers when an opinion was asked, were placed in our care, have rapidly improved, almost from the beginning, and steadily progressed to a cure—as much to our surprise and gratification often as to that of the patients and their friends." Their Treatment of Compound Oxygen containing large report of cases, and full information, sent free. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We Should Help One Another.

MR. NORMAN HUNT, of No. 169 Chestnut St., Springfield, Mass., writes April 10, 1883, saying:

"Having the affliction caused by kidney and liver diseases, and after enduring the aches, pains, weakness and depression incident thereto until body and soul were nearly distracted, I sought for relief and a cure from my trouble, and was told by a friend who had been cured by it himself, that the best and only cure was Hunt's Remedy, and upon his recommendation I commenced taking it, and the first few doses improved my condition in a very marked manner, and a continuance of its use has justified all that my friends claimed for it,—that it was a sure and permanent cure for all diseases of the kidney and liver. Several of my friends in Springfield have used it with the most gratifying results, and I feel it my duty as well as a pleasure to me to recommend Hunt's Remedy in the highest possible terms."

Manufacturer's Testimony.

MR. H. W. PAYNE, manufacturer of harness, saddlery, trunks, valises, etc., No. 477 Main Street, Springfield, Mass., writes us under date of April 10, 1883:—

GENTLEMEN—I have used Hunt's Remedy, the best medicine for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder, and urinary organs, and have received great benefit to my health from its use, and I find that it will do just what is claimed for it; it will cure disease and restore health. I therefore pronounce it the best medicine that I have ever used.

Boston & Albany Railroad.

ALBERT HOLT, Esq., paymaster Boston & Albany Railroad, at Springfield, Mass., writes April 23, 1883: "I have used Hunt's Remedy, and my experience with it has been such that I can cheerfully say that I am satisfied that it will do just what it promises to do, if used according to directions.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. jel4-1y

Editorial Notes.

There is something suggestive in the cordial greeing of Gov. Ben Butler by the Continental Guards, of New Orleans. The lion has made peace with the lambs.

A Washington jury has acquitted the Star Route plunderers; but that is only a severe reflection upon the jury. The nation holds fast to its verdict of guilty.

The State of Virginia has a school population of 314,827 white and 204,980 colored, for the whites there are 4,062 schools, for the colored only 1,525. The State Superintendent of schools is a Christian statesman and strongly urges increased facilities for the colored children.

The press of New Orleans is vehement in its denunciation of what it claims to be the Gaines "conspiracy." The order of Judge Billings directing the Council to impose a special tax of near $2,000,000, is met by threats to hang councilmen who obey, and to release them from prison by a rising en masse if committed to prison for contempt. These are rash suggestions evincing desperation more than a sense of justice.

When Ex-Senator W. P. Kellogg was given the opportunity the other day to proceed with a speedy trial of the grave charges, which hang like a shadow over his character, he was not ready. His counsel put in a plea of abatement to gain time, and also, an objection against the grand jury which indicted him, and to the appearance of government counsel before the jury. A few months ago it will be remembered Mr. Kellogg was proclaiming his innocence and readiness for trial; now it seems he is not even willing to trust a Washington jury, and is depending upon technicalities for a clearance.

That unrepublican Chinese treaty is making trouble for our government officials, and Secretary Folger, (says a Globe Democrat special is about to confer with the President in the matter. A party of ten Chinamen landed at New York with the declared intention of passing through on their way to China. The collector of San Francisco waited in vain for the arrival of five of them at his port, and has asked the Secretary what to do about it. The law provides that in case a Chinaman lands here and does not move on he shall be sent back by the President at the expense of this Government. Nothing is said about where they are to be sent. The question agitating the department is whether to advise the President to send these tardy Chinese to China or to Cuba, or some other part of the globe. And then, again, as their whereabouts are unknown, the next difficulty will be to catch the Chinamen. The President will be advised, and under the law, must direct what shall be done with them. It is suspected they are being harbored by their countrymen in New York or Chicago. There are many people in this country who can conscienciously obstruct the execution ot this feature of the Chinese treaty, as the abolitionists obstructed the fugitive slave law. The days of man hunting in this Republic, except for crime, have gone by.

The Zion's Watchman says:

A good brother of wide experience is authority for saying that some men have an innate propensity for running things; they like to have the direction, the management, the control. Their great inquiry is not, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" but, "What shall this man do?" Occasionally we find a man who develops this propensity in a very large measure. He runs the choir, he runs the society, he runs the Sunday-school, he runs the minister, he runs the deacons, he runs the church. Such men are usually more noted for self-confidence than humility, and seem to have a higher estimate of their own abilities than others around them are likely to form.

The above described brethren may sometimes be a little troublesome. But our difficulty has been in the other direction—with men who have developed a strong propensity to do nothing. We know of churches where six or eight men who cannot restrain themselves, nor be constrained by others, from going ahead would be a benediction. We have need of men full of faith and the Holy Ghost who can organize and lead on. Life is better than death.

The Peoples' Vindicator, of Natchitoches, La., reminded by the report of the grand jury of that parish that the outlook for public schools was deplorable, investigated and published the result of its inquiries among officials. Public schools were closed in September, 1882, and have not been re-opened since. About the latter part of July enough of school money may possibly be found in the parish treasury to run the schools a session of six weeks. Yet Natchitoches is one of the most populous parishes of Louisiana, and a stronghold of the friends of the present State administration.

Dr. Talmage in his sermon on the criminal classes of society says that in 1869 of the 49,000 people who were incarcerated in the prisons of this country 32,000 were of foreign birth; that in one year the police of New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City arrested 10,000 people for theft, 10,000 for assault and battery, and 50,000 for intoxication. Drunkenness always gives men confused ideas and is no doubt responsible for most of the thefts and assaults.

The subject for the July Missionary Concert of Prayer, corresponding with that indicated in the Berean Question Book for the Sunday-schools is "Our Missions in India." Rev. E. W. Parker's Tract on "Self support and Mission Work in the North India Mission," is a valuable source of information about our work there. Send to Phillips & Hunt or to the Mission Rooms. Facts concerning Christianity

The following from the pen of Dr. Dorchester, and published in the Manual of the M. E. Church, will be interesting.

The table here presented gives a conjectural but probable estimate of the progressive increase of the number of the nominal Christians in the world in the successive centuries, intelligently made up from carefully collated data, and generally accepted,

First Century	500,000
Second	2,000,000
Third	5,000,000
Fourth	10,000,000
Fifth	15,000,000
Sixth	20,000,000
Seventh	25'000,000
Eighth	30,000,000
Ninth	40,000,000
Tenth	50,000,000
Eleventh	70,000,000
Twelfth	80,000,000
Thirteenth century	75,000,000
Fourteenth	80 000,000
Fifteenth	100,000,000
Sixthteenth	125,000,00
Seventeenth	155,000,000
Eighteenth	200,000,000

Before 1847 Rev. Sharon Turner said: "In this nineteenth century the real number of the Christian population of the world is near to 300,000,000, and is visibly much increasing from the missionary spirit and exertions which are now distinguishing the chief Protestant nations of the world."

The latest estimates are as follows:

Year.	Christians.	Authorities.
1830	228,000,000	Malte-Brun.
1840	300,000,000	Rev. S. Turner.
1850	342,000,000	Rev. E. Baird.
1876	394,000,000	Prof. Schem.
1880	410,000,000	"

In 1,500 years Christianity gained 100,000,000: then in 300 years it gained 100,000.000 more; then in 79 years it gained 210,000,000 more. But in the last 79 years it gained as much as in the eighteen centuries previous to A. D. 1800. During the nearly ten centuries of almost exclusive Papal dominion, Christianity gained only about 85,000,000. Since the birth of Protestantism, a period about one third as long, it has gained nearly four times as much. And since the great religious quickening of Protestantism under the Wesleys and Whitefield, in the middle of the last century, it has gained 235,000,000.

But the portion of earth's population under Christian governments has increased even more rapidly than the number of nominal Christians. as will be seen by the following well established figures.

These figures show the wonderful growth of the Christian nations, the enlargement of their national domains, and the increase of their population. They demonstrate the rapid extension of Christian influences and the Christian subjugation of the world. Nearly seven times the number of people are under the control of Christian nations as at the opening of the sixteenth century, when Protestantism arose. The increase in the one hundred and forty years since Wesleyanism arose in England has been 500,000,000, equal to more than one third the population of the globe.

Now let us see what proportion of this wonderful increase has been Prostestant. The following estimates are drawn from different reliable authorities:

UNDER CHRISTIAN GOVERNMENT.

Year.	Population.	Authorities.
1600	100,000,000	Rev. Sharon Turner
1700	155,000,000	" "
1830	387,788,000	Adrian Balbi
1876	685,450,411	Prof. Schem, LL. D.

Year 1500, population under Roman Catholic governments, 80,000,000; under Greek Church governments, 20,000,000. Total, 100,000,000. Year 1700, population, under Roman Catholic governments, 90,000,000; under Greek Church governments, 33,000,000; under Protestant government, 32,000,000. Total 155,000,000. 1830, population under Roman Catholic governments 134,164,000; under Greek church governments, 60,000,000; under Protestant governments, 293,624,000. Total, 387,788,000. 1876, population under Roman Catholic governments, 180,787,905; under Greek Church governments, 96,101,894; under Protestant governments, 408,569,612. Total, 685,459,411.

One hundred and eighty years ago only 155,000,000 of the earth's population were under the Christian governments. Then the Grand Seignior, the Sophi and the Great Mogul were the most potent arbiters of the destinies of the race. Nearly all Asia and Africa were under pagan and Mohammedan sway. The mighty worlds of Australasia, Polynesia, and the Indian Archipelago lay in the undisturbed slumbers of savagery and superstition. Scarcely four hundred thousand Protestant colonists occupied both American continents; all the remainder was pagan or Catholic.—All the religious missions of the world, excepting a few among the aborigines in the American colonies, were Papal, and the only religion not disseminating itself and gaining ground was the Protestant. Great Britian and her colonies did not number ten million of people. Now she comprises a population of more than 300,000,000 under her civil way.

The population under Roman Catholic governments in the year of 1700, as we have seen, was 90,000,000. This has increased to 180,787,905 in 1876, simply doubling. The population under the Greek Church governments, in 1700, was 33,000,000. This increased to 96,101,894, nearly trebling. The population under Protestant governments, in 1700, was twelve million. This increased to 408,569,612 in 1876, a more than twelve fold increase, while Romanism brought 90,787,905 more people under her sway. Protestantism extended her dominion over 376,569,612 more people—an actual gain more than four times as great as that of Romanism in the same period. Since 1830, while Romanism aded about 46,000,000 of people to her civil sway, Protestantism added 215,000,000 to hers.

Columbus District, West Texas Conference.

DEAR EDITOR—About three weeks ago I sent a card to each of the preachers on my district, except those whom I had just seen in person, and asked them to report the number of conversions in their charges this year up to June 11th, which makes just half of the Conference year. The result of my inquiry is too good to keep. I have not received answers from J. Cæsar, of Boxville, W. H. Stevens, of Wellersburg, L. Carper, of Luling, and R. H. Harbert, of Lockhart. The SOUTHWESTERN published an excellent article from Bro. Harbert's pen a short time ago that shows that he is moving up rapidly in every department of church. I have heard from Bro. Carper indirectly and learn that his work is in good condition. The letters that I have received show that Bro. Jones, of Halletsville, is in the lead in the matter of conversions. He has had 69 converts. In other respects Halletsville is doing well. Bro. Jones has secured $300 subscription toward a new church. Part of the lumber is on the ground and I have $250 Church Extension money for them, which will buy the balance of the lumber.

Bro. Lee Reed, of Peach Creek, is second in the list. He has had 33 converts. Bro. Davis of Columbus reports 30 converts. Bro. Coggswell of Alleyton has had 27 converts and has enlarged the church in Alleyton, and had the lumber on the ground to build a parsonage when I left there a few weeks ago. He needs another addition to his church or a new one.

Bro. Harris, of Schulenburg circuit, reports 11 converts; Bro. Dukes, of Morales, 9; Bro. Townsend, of Columbus circuit, 8; Bro. Banks, of Wharton, 8; Bro. Chase, of Industry, 6; Bro. Jarmin, of Ellenger 5; Bro. Scott of Cany, 5; Bro. Cooper, of Oakland, 3.

These reports foot up to 214 conversions. I know there have been several persons converted in the four circuits not reported, and I am safe in saying there have been 250 converts on the District the first half of the conference year. But the great harvest season of the year had scarcely begun. Bro. Cooper has a camp meeting appointed and all his people seem ready to sustain it. Bro. Harvey of Eagle Lake, has a camp meeting appointed, and expects Bro. Reed to help him. Bro. Jones reports that Bro. Porter has been grand help in the Halletsville revivals. The 18 preachers on the District are every one of them at work, and I think will come up to the annual conference with their arms full of sheaves. May the Lord grant it. G. W. RICHARDSON.

Austin, June 22, 1883.

Vicksburg Contributions.

Rev. A. Davis, of Vicksburg, Miss., in giving his list of names of those who contributed one dollar to benevolent purposes from his charge for 1882, failed to state where the list was from, and no one else could tell, hence it was not published in the Journal. The SOUTHWESTERN will confer a great favor by publishing the following names from Vicksburg who contributed one dollar each: Miss Mary A. Campbell, Nancy Morgan, Mary Wyche, Annie Lane, Sophia Terrell, Margaret Madison, Martha Aikins, Wm. Branson, H. Freeman, Mary Primas, Hattie Miller, John Harris, Mrs. Nellie Yandle, Eliza Jordan, Serlena Neal, Lea Calvin, Sarah Wilkerson, Elizabeth Johnson, Virginia Brown, Fannie Powell, Lucy McMual, Emma Washington, Edward Jackson, Patsie Gilbert, P. J. Johnson, Emma Goodwin, Sarah Thorpe, John Platt, Henry Armstrong, Phœbe Lockhart, Susie Boyd, Dodridge Powell, Martha Davis, Bennie Clark, Irena Clark, Hellen E. Wyche, Elizabeth Stith, Amos Hollins, A. Davis. J. M. S.

The Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., is clear of debt. Some time since Governor Evans, submitted a proposition to subscribe $25,000, if others would make up the balance of $75,000, whereupon Mr. William Deering, at once duplicated Governer Evans, generous subscription. The remaining amount was raised by President Cummings.

An Important Decision.

In the United States District Court Austin, Texas, June 14, an important opinion was delivered in a criminal suit brought under the civil rights act passed by Congress in March 1875, to enforce the penalty of $500 for excluding Laura Evans, a colored woman, from a ladies' car on the Houston and Texas Central Railroad. The court held the act to be unconstitutional, an infringement on the rights of the several States, and that the State tribunals alone have jurisdiction in the premises. Nineteen suits of a similar nature were dependent on the decision in this case.

The Supreme Court of the United States has uniformly held that the first section of the fourteenth amendment does not apply to the actions of individuals but only to those of the States themselves; and while this miscarriage of justice is disappointing, it is undoubtedly true that the New York Times has expressed the situation correctly. In an editorial on this decision it says:

It is probable that the rights of citizens to equal privileges on railroads and steam-boats and in hotels and theatres will henceforth be relegated to the keeping of the States where they belong, with the clear understanding, however, that the States are prohibited in the making and enforcement of their laws from denying equal protection to all. There will be more or less failure of the right principle until public sentiment is brought into accord with it, but the national Government cannot deal with offenses which are those of persons or corporations and not of States."

Widows' and Orphans' Home.

The committee appointed to take into consideration the propriety of establishing a Widows' and Orphans' Home in New Orleans met at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, June, 20, 1883. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. T. G. Montgomery. The following members of the committee were present: H. Wilson, M. Hall, A. Mitchel, from Sixth street; M. Malone, J. A. Brooks, from Wesley Chapel; A. Lawson, N. Collins, J. Adams, from Camp Parapet; P. Smith, A. Claud, from Mount Zion. As but a small part of the members of the committee were present, it was thought best to adjourn to meet at the same place on the second Wednesday in July. It is earnestly requested that all the members of the committee be present at that time.

T. G. MONTGOMERY, President.

A corespondent of the Augusta, Ga., Chronicle, speaks of the commencement exercises of an Atlanta college:

"The exercises have been very creditable. The examination of the pupils shows them to have been well taught, and that they have diligently studied. It must ever be a matter of surprise at the seeming intellectual incongruity to see a black man, with every race-mark strongly defined, showing progress and culture in the Greek language, that classic vernacular of the most elegant civilization of antiquity. A valuable feature of this institution is its industrial instruction. Competitive cooking, gardening, and grass-farming, are all practiced It is this feature that should be most encouraged."

The heirs of Peter Cooper will add another $100,000 to the $100,000 that Mr. Cooper devised to the Cooper Institute.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

The Natchitoches Vindicator, June 16, speaks of the observance of Children's Day in that city, as follows. "The children of Asbury Sunday-school, and the "Reapers Messenger Society" paraded some of the principal streets. The girls were dressed in white, with blue ribbons, and the boys in black coats and white pants, each one wearing a rosette and insignia of their organization. The procession was headed by the pastor, Rev. H. J. Wright, and controlled by the Grand Marshals, Geo. W. Duncan and King Mickelberry. The procession was large, making a fine display and attracting much attention by their creditable appearance and orderly behavior. The colored societies of this city are in a most flourishing condition and their displays are creditable to those who participate in them. They proclaim in a pointed manner the rapid advancement of this class of our population in education, refinement and morals, which are the sure and solid foundations of an elevated and enlightened condition in the near future. Such men as G. W. Duncan, King Mickelberry, Rev. H. J. Wright and others who stand shoulder to shoulder with them in their labors to elevate and advance the social and intellectual status of their people, are an honor to their race and make good and respected citizens."

J. W. Lewis, Pearl River. "At Mandeville, J. Washington is superintendent and Ida Burrel assistant of the Sabbath-school. A recent meeting resulted in much good to the church. Saturday, May 19, a pic-nic excursion was given under the auspices of Mrs. Susey Lewis and Mrs. Alice Green. We passed in carriages and on horseback five miles through the pine woods to Big Branch, and had a lovely time. The outlook at Mandeville was never more hopeful. The congregation is regular and increasing. May 28, at Pearl River, a basket meeting was gotten up by Sisters Charlotte Vaultz and Harriet Read. The collections amounted to $53.05. Our new church on the northeastern railroad has been completed."

TENNESSEE.

A. Brudett, Friendship: "Six joined the church at Price Chapel, eight at Mayzie Grove. Many mourners are at the altar."

A. J. Fletcher, Kingston: "We have just closed our third quarterly meeting, which was both interesting and profitable to all. Elder ...rine looked after every feature of the work. The Sunday-schools have replenished their libraries and are in fine working order. The receipts for ministerial support of the quarter are, for pastor $30.40; presiding elder $16. We are preparing for Childrens' Day. Allow me a word about district conference, for the consideration of the brethren of the Chattanooga district. At the last session, held at Rockwood last September, Chattanooga was agreed on as the place to hold its next session, not knowing where the annual conference would go next time. Since, the annual conference also has been voted to Chattanooga. Now, brethren, for the sake of Bro. Hays and the people of Chattanooga who are struggling to build if possible, and who have suffered most from the effects of small-pox, I would suggest that the district conference be moved to some other place in the district, say Cleveland, ...ett's Chapel, or some place where all can be cared for without so great a burden. If no better, we will take it again at Rockwood, and by so doing we will relieve Chattanooga of a great expense, as we all know it costs something to support a conference. What say you? Let's hear."

ARKANSAS.

...Smith, Luna Landing: "There is no Methodist church in this district, I do wish one of ... I have just read of in the ADVOCATE had been built here. The Baptist churches in these low ... are composed of the least progressive of our people, and such a thing as a Sunday-school they know not of. It affords me much pleasure to hear of the welfare of the M. E. Church."

MISSISSIPPI.

E. C. Price, Bolton: "The second quarterly conference was held by Elder D. A. Williams, and he preached a glorious sermon. Paid elder $10.95; received 14 full members during the quarter. Sabbath-school is in good working condition with an attendance of 80. A committee purchased five chandeliers and placed them in the church, and they are still laboring to have the church repainted. It is composed as follows: Miss Birdie Mc Allister, Bettie McAllister, Lulice Louis, Narscissia Smith, Mamie Finch and Amanda Walters."

J. H. Cook, Summit: "Magnolia is a nice little railrood town on the Jackson road, ten miles above the Louisiana line. It is the county seat of Pike county. For a long time Sister Isabelle Allen was the only member we had there, who, notwithstanding the hot battles of opposition, held to her profession and waited until the M. E. Church could be organized. Now she can enjoy herself in the midst of 25 active members, in a completed new church 26x44 feet. If the Lord continues his blessings we will soon be able to dedicate it, May 27 four members were received, and we took a collection by subscription; $25 more will pay the last dollar we owe, and then we will go to work for a bell. We hope to be able to take a collection for the Church Extension Society, as we have built without asking aid, as well as the people in the East do. We have a nice little Sunday-school. So the months that have talked so much to make believe there would never be a Methodist Church in Magnolia are compelled to hush after all. Praise the Lord and magnify his name forever."

R. Hayes, State Line: "My work is in a prosperous condition. June 3d two were received into full membership. The presiding elder visited us and administered the sacrament to 47. We gave him $7.70."

N. Toole, Waynesboro: "Elder J. Campbell visited us, preached and administered sacrament to 50. My circuit is in a prosperous condition."

J. M. Conner, a recent convert and an elder from the Baptist church, writes that he is profoundly impressed with the work, doctrines and discipline of the M. E. Church, and he is willing to take work wherever a supply is needed."

A. R. Jordan, Rosemeath: "Nearly all of our church are in Sunday-scoool. We had a grand time at Holly Grove; nine joined on probation. The church is growing."

"Dem Suppose."

Those who are so anxious about the future as to be unhappy in the present, may learn a lesson from a poor colored woman. Her name was Nancy, and she earned a moderate living by washing. She was, however, always happy. One day one of those anxious Christians who are constantly "taking thought" about the morrow, said to her "Ah, Nancy, it is well enough to be happy now, but I should think your thoughts of the future would sober you. Suppose, for instance, that you should be sick and unable to work; or suppose your present employers should move away, and no one else should give you anything to do; or suppose"—"Stop!" cried Nancy. "I neber supposes. De Lord is my shepherd, and I knows I shall not want. Aud, honey," she added to her gloomy friend, "it's all dem supposes as is makin' you so mis'ble. You ought to give dem all up an' jes' trus in the Lord."—Presbyterian.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in the Suoth.

An essay read by the Rev. G. B. Donnelly, at District Conference held at Texarkana, June 7-9, 1883.

The M. E. Church entered the South at the close of the late war with a view of educating and elevating the colored race, and at the same time opened the doors of the church to that class of white people who preferred our church to the M. E. Church South. I mention the colored people first, because we believe it was the conviction of the church that they needed immediate help more than any other class of people in the South. But the church has not worked altogether among the colored people; a large population of whites were found without church privileges and without educational advantages. The church could do at first but little and sent a few preachers among them. That the work of the Freedmen's Aid Society has been a grand success, no one dares to question; it is a monumental work that convinces the world of the practical wisdom of the church. The country ought to be proud of it, our church is proud of it, and the beauty of it is, that the Methodist Episcopal Church is not going to abandon this work; but the church, according to the instruction of the last General Conference, is establishing some universities for the whites in the South. Will this work for white schools withdraw any sympathy or money from the colored people? If it should it is impracticable, for whatever withdraws support from them damages our cause in the South; but should education among the white population stimulate our people to make still greater efforts to educate the colored people, our cause will not be damaged. That it is not the intention of the authorities of our church to throw cold water on any part of our works in the South, certainly clear. More than that; our church wouldn't touch a white school if the money and sympathies which have been given for the education of our colored brethren should be turned from that channel. If the church cannot increase the contributions to the Freedmen's Aid Society to such an extent that proposed colleges and those now established can be carried on successfully, then let the white schools stop. Much more money must be raised now, beause the plan for educational work in the South has been enlarged. To say that the leaders do not see an increased liberality towards this work, is to say that they do not understand the church, nor the instructions of the last General Conference. I notice that some our brethren are disposed to criticize the plan to build any school for the education of the whites. Be careful, my brethren, don't strike the hand that has done so much for you, and would not turn its beneficence from us for the world. The missionary spirit of our church seeks to help the most first needy, whether they be black or white. This truth has met a practical exemplification in the South. Our brothers in black have been sitting at the first table, and this order is not to be changed. Let us not unnecessarily condemn those who are serving tables. They are not going to forsake us. We need all our time in preaching Jesus, and answering evil designing men, who make it their business to go into every chimney corner and family of colored people who do not read and think for themselves and misrepresent the M. E. Church. They have three particular falsehoods and they take very well. It might be well to mention them. One is that we have all white Bishops; another is that we send all our money up North to support white Bishops and people; another is, the M. E. Church South and the A. M. E. Church, in fact all, or most other Methodist churches, are doing as much good for the colored people as our church. "The Devil knew that to be a lie before he put it in them to tell it.

Now the work of the church, with its different agencies, the Freedmen's Aid, the Church Extension, Missionary, Educational, and Tract Societies, is moving forward in the work of helping our people. May God help us to convince the world! First: the Freedmen's Aid Society educates for the ministry those called of God; whom the Missionary Society assists to preach the gospel in houses of worship, which the Church Extension Society aids in erecting. The Sunday-school Union employs an agent—awakening an interest in Sunday-school work. The Tract Society distributes tracts, while the Woman's Home Missionary Society endeavors to vitalize in the homes the teachings and work of all the benovelent associations of our church. Blending her efforts in the salvation of our people, late from slavery; yet we find among them some of our bitterest enemies, mostly those who are not at all concerned about the welfare of the race, but use them as tools that they may be called big men. God help them.

There are 18,000,000 of school age children in these United States and Territories; 5,000,000 illiterate and must be educated or lost, and their greatest dependence is upon the M. E. Church for education. Georgia, alone, one of the oldest states in the sixteen late slave states has a population of 1,542,180, and fully 967,099 cannot read or write. Thus while the other people of our race will spend all their lives in watching the white Bishops in the M. E. Church, let us take their children and bless them, as the church has blessed us, and leave the consequences with God as to whether they will join our church or not.

TIDINGS FROM THE FIELD.

Thursday morning, May 31, in company with Rev. John Sparks, the preacher in charge of the Stuart chapel and Spring Creek circuit, and Bro. Brown, one of his officers, the writer proceeded, on horseback, for Spring Creek, in the pine woods, twenty miles away. Leaving Mr. Hector Turner's, near Lamourie, where the previous night was spent, our way lay directly through the woods. The further we went, the further in the woods we were, and when at about 2 o'clock p. m. we arrived at our destination we were further in the woods than ever before. The woods are not the main features of our work here, however. We have here splendid, ice-cold, spring water, balmy invigorating fresh air, and broad acres of cultivated and wild government land in abundance; and last but not least, a most excellent body of friends and members. With so many kind remembrances from nature, with an ample supply of wood with which to keep warm, and abundance of water with which to keep cool; with plenty of pure, pine-wood fresh air to inflate the lungs and purify the blood, together with the splendid garden, all backed up by the kind liberality of his good and willing people, Bro. Sparks bids fair to spend a happy year on this circuit. Quarterly conference was held at Spring Creek, and preaching services were conducted at both points of the circuit. At Spring Creek on Thursday, and at Stuart chapel on Friday night. The Holy Spirit attended the ministry of the Word at both places. Our great need at Spring Creek is a church building. Our people there are outdoors, and have been compelled to worship under the trees in the woods, ever since some unholy heart and wicked hands burned down our church here last fall. If some good friend would help to the extent of about $50, in less than thirty days a shelter can be put up for those poor but willing people. Come now, who will assist these deserving poor, who have been so cruelly dealt with by the heartless torch of the incendiary. Notwithstandig many discouragements our work on this circuit is growing. The regular church, Sunday-school and other interests of the church are all looking upward.

At Cheneyville, Bro. Austin Jones, is having a joyful time; in fact, Bro. Jones carries a joyful spirit in his own breast, hence it is always an easy matter for him to have a joyful time anywhere. In his quarterly conference and in all the services in connection with our quarterly meeting a most excellent spirit prevailed throughout. Bro. Jones is faithfully caring for the lambs as well as for the sheep of his fold. He had already gathered 16 children in classes for religious instruction; he had received 23 probationers and full members; and both church and Sunday-school were reported in vigorous health. Bro. Jones is a good man, and a good preacher, and we do not wonder that his people are proud of him. After spending Sunday June 3, up to 2, p. m. at Cheneyville, the afternoon and evening were spent at Booneville. Here the writer met Rev. Wm. Murrell and his people looking and going upward and onward. Although the inclemency af the weather interfered we had a very profitable meeting Sunday night. The quarterly conference held next day, Monday morning, was a grand one. Indeed it was. The church was crowded from the altar to the door. Mark you, this was on a Monday not a Sunday morning. Who would have hazarded to predict such a thing just a little over twenty years ago? But it was now a fact; that on Bayou Boeuf, away out in the country, in a regular farming community, the quarterly conference is announced for a Monday morning at 9 o'clock, and the church is crowded with men and women who now exercise their freedom in the time, matter and manner of serving the true and the living God. His great name be praised, for the blessings that hallow our day. The reports of pastor and officers were all in nice shape and showed commendable progress in every department of the work. Bro. Murrell is doing good work in Booneville. He is attending faithfully to his church interest, and impressing our people with the great duty of educating their children, of building up character, of securing homes. All of our ministers, not only those of the La Teche district or of the Louisiana conference, but each and every one of them everywhere, should keep these matters up before our people constantly. Urge the young people to crowd our colleges and universities, and insist upon all the great duty of establishing homes and Christian character. Examine the intellectual food in the hands, and persuade them to read our own publications and subscribe for the SOUTHWESTERN. You may thereby save not only that one but many more. The writer enjoyed his stay at Booneville, in the church, and at his very generous host and hostess, Bro. Adolph Baham and his kind wife's house, as never before. He fails to account for this fact, unless it was because his better half, who never was here before, was here this time. Don't you think that was it? Something inspires the writer to think that her presence had something to do with it. At any rate is was pleasant to have her there. After a most pleasant season spent here, Monday, 4th inst at 5 p. m. Sister A. and the writer were off for Alexandria. A.

Commencement of Clark University.

This institution has numbered another year of its young life. Founded in 1869, it received its name from one of the honored men who devoted life and strength to reconstructing the kingdom of Christ, after the storm of civil war had wrecked the religious as well as the civic fabrics of the South, for civil war affects the moral tone of a nation more than any other calamity that can befall a land. This noble foundation promises to be a lasting monument to his name. Located on the south side of Atlanta, on a plot of over 400 acres of land, with two spacious halls—the Chrisman and Gammon halls—capable of accommodating 300 students, soon to be graced with a third, it starts out with grand prospects. Its faculty now consists of Rev. E. O. Thayer, M. A., President; W. H. Crogman, M. A., Miss F. L. Mitchell, Miss E. L. Smith, M. A., Miss S. E. Abbott, M. A., Mr. John Cardwell, B. A., Miss A. G. Gibbs, and Mr. Z. T. Spencer. The matron, Mrs. C. C. Mitchell, aided by Mrs. M. E. Spencer. This band of workers will be strengthened next year by an important accession to their working force—Prof. W. F. Thirkield A. M., who married Bishop Gilbert Haven's only daughter, has been called to the charge of the Theological Department.

The work done must not be calculated by the number of full graduates sent forth in the years of its existence, for they are few as yet; the intention of the faculty and officers being to restrict its honors to those who can pass a strict examination, so that its certificates may be relied on by the public. But many have gone from its halls well instructed in all the branches of education necessary to make them ministers and teachers, whilst those who return to private life have been fully fitted for its duties. No doubt many of these will return when replenished with the necessary means of support to perfect their education so well begun.

The Sabbath service, June 10th, was of unusual interest; the baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. J. B. Middleton, of Greenville, S. C., and the annual sermon by Rev. John Watts, of Newnan, Ga. On Monday the examinations progressed with much interest. On Tuesday they were continued, and the trustees held a harmonious meeting. At 8 p. m. a prize declamation contest took place that delighted and instructed the audience. Wednesday the orations of graduates, and the prize oratorical contest continued, and to the following were awarded the prizes: Miss Sarah A. Harper and Miss Hattie Robinson. Wm. H. Nelson graduated in the Collegiate Department, and John Leake in the Preparatory Department.

At this point I should speak a word for full endowment. The institution is dependent on the Freedmen's Aid Society for its support. The noble gift of Rev. E. H. Gammon, of Illinois, will render the Theological Desartment comparatively independent, but the other departments of the institution are as yet without support, except that the Savannah Conference has agreed to contribute to the support of our professor.

Will not some noble spirited gentleman follow the example of Rev. Mr. Gammon and endow a chair?

The Trustees of Rust University.

Tuesday morning, at Holly Springs, the Board of Trustees met, Rev. R. S. Rust, D.D., presided. Prof. W. W. Hooper presented his report, which showed the University to be in a prosperous condition. It was found that $2000 worth of furniture were yet needed—and is an absolute necessity in the University. It was also found that about $2000 of the subscription of the ministers of the Mississippi conference remain unpaid. The Trustees ordered President W. W. Hooper to go forward and furnish the University, with the understanding that the preachers of the Mississippi conference were expected to bring up their subscription. The Trustees also appointed J. M. Shumpert, a committee of one, to notify the brethren of their action. In this connection allow me to say, dear brethren, that Dr. Rust and the Board of Trustees have great faith in the brethren who subscribed at the Aberdeen conference. Hence they have instructed Prof. Hooper to furnish the building with the belief that the ministers are going to pay up this year. Brethren, let us begin at once, so by conference every cent promised may be paid; so that the whole-soul Christian-hearted and cultured man, Prof. Hooper, may not be embarrassed. We should feel proud to know that we have the prettiest and best school building in the State, where our children and friends may receive a Christian education.

MR. EDITOR:—The first notice we had of Bishop Jesse T. Peck's demise was May 25th, at Pleasanton, Atascosa co., Texas. It struck us most forcibly, and we felt as though one of our own household had gone! We wished we could have known this venerable Christian gentleman more personally; though we certainly knew something of him through public print, as well as in his official capacity; and we know to love him, and even cherish and keep green his memory till we shall meet and know each other in glory, where all is life and undimmed day of happiness and fadeless green; where we shall take part in the untiring choirs of heaven, to look upon the dazzling beauty of the throne of God. I am glad Bishops Hurst and Simpson, and others, have spoken and written about this good, pure-hearted man. We that were raised in different parts of the country, and under circumstances equally as distant, can certainly appreciate those noble lives spent in the service of God and humanity, and wish we could fully compensate for the blessings that come to us from the sweet spices of their years of toil, for the right against the wrong. It seems as though we know a great deal about our Bishops, as a great deal of their life and work has passed into, what constitutes very largely, the history of the day; still we can appreciate what those have to say, who have been so closely associated in the noble work of life. The conduct of Bishop Peck toward Bro. A. E. P. Albert, the assistant editor of the dear old SOUTHWESTERN, when his traveling companion, certainly embraces some of the brightest lines to be read in the pages of our deceased father's earthly career. It must be ever remembered that the increasing intelligence of the American Negro enables him to venerate the names of those noble characters, who successfully contended for human rights. Job said, when oppressed by his enemies, "My record is on high, and my witness is in heaven." But such men lived in an age when their records were at both places, and clouds of witnesses in heaven and earth.

Canton Good Templars.

DEAR EDITOR:—The 17th inst. was the third anniversary of Hope Lodge No. 4, Good Templars of Canton. This Lodge has a membership of 82 members in good standing. Composed of our best citizens, both Baptist and Methodist, with a few who are not professors of religion. The anniversary was celebrated at night by a sermon from our pastor, Rev. A. K. Davis. He took his text from I Corinthian's 6 and 10th: "Neither shall a drunkard inherit the kingdom of heaven." His sermon was both instructive and edifying, bristling throughout with telling points. Indeed he held the mirror up to the drunkard to show him his features that he might scorn his own image. The order is and has been working a salutary effect in this entire community. Her vivifying rays are indeed a light house that the wanderer as he runs may be admonished of the dangerous precincts, and the deluded victim of unhallowed lust may see ere it be too late, the path in which his unsteady feet are straying toward that ever yawning gulf, and bitter pangs which have already marked him for their prey.

The Good Templars are an auxiliary of the church; she stands upon the highest pinnacle with tear-stained cheeks, pointing to these deluded wretches, and kindly bids them enter her fold. I would that one of these light-houses were planted in every hamlet in this land. When I reflect upon the great evil to the human family which results from this cursed stuff called alcohol, I can not but tremble for the future of the country. Yes, alcohol is the great bane of this country, especially to my race, who have so many imperfections to overcome. It is indeed a lamentable bane. I've noticed with great interest the progress the cause of temperance is making in some states. May God nerve the friends of temperance to be true to the cause and true to themselves, that they may go forward in their noble work, until they kindle a flame so powerful that the dram-dealer's crime that results from their calling may be driven from the state and nation. The Lodge, in token of appreciation of the sermon of Rev. A. K. Davis, marched in full force from their hall to the parsonage, Tuesday night the 29th, each member armed with a package of the necessaries of life, rolled out the tables and left them laden with many choice things.

Very Respectfully,

MISS ALEXANIA DAVIS.

Our Letter from China.

The anti-opium petition sent by the missionaries of China to the British House of Commons a few days ago was supported by a list of signatures twelve feet four inches long! At the request of the viceroy, Li Hung Chang, a translation of the petition was sent to him by Mr. Holcombe, secretary of the U. S. Legation in Peking; while Dr. Martin, president of the Imperial College, sent a translation in to the Foreign Office, so that Chinese may know that missionaries, at least, do not favor the traffic that blights China.

Recent reports say that the foreign houses engaged in opium selling in Chefoo are closing up, because the native article is commanding as good sale as the foreign. After it ceases to be profitable the trade will of course cease, and England will retreat from the field, but it will be with a dark stain upon her name that ages cannot wear away.

"Wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging, but even the man that is deceived thereby" has sober times, and relics of manhood, at least; but the opium smoker seems to lose the last vestige of his manhood. With every kind and noble impulse withered and blighted, one almost wonders if he is still human! Living not far from this mission is a man—if he may be still called a man—who, two years ago, took home the wadded garments from the Boys' school, for the yearly washing, and repaired and pawned them; he then took from the Girls' school a dear little girl, who had been placed on a scholarship and named after the sainted mother of one of the missionaries, and pawned her for six years! It was nothing to him that he had given his word when the child entered school that she should remain until she was eighteen; his word, his honor, his good name and the happiness of his own child were sacrificed for the drug that has killed his manhood and is fast killing his body. The child was redeemed by her kind patrons and brought back to school through many difficulties. The father made a written agreement not to take her away again until she is of age. He tried to play the model father and be very much grieved and insulted when I told the keeper I did not see how he dared go as security for a man who was bad enough to sell his own child. His attempt at maintaining the sanctity of his honor was pitiable.

Superintendent Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Gamewell send back good reports from the churches which they are visiting in the country. Mrs. Gamewell writes, "April 9th, from Yang Shia Ying, the folks are exceedingly nice here now, a vast improvement on all former assemblies met here. Timo and Helper Chao and his wife have done wonders. Yesterday I had a meeting of eleven women, four members, six probationers and one outside woman. They all seemed interested and intelligent. My own heart swelled with gratitude and thankfulness for them and myself too. The Helper has a general lesson in catechism after service of each Sabbath. He has been teaching several boys, and his wife still teaches the girls. He questioned quite through the catechism both Sundays, and the answers showed that they had all been used to it for a long time, not an impromptu exercise to interest the foreigners. I have visited all around here, as at Yen Shan, and in most cases without noisy crowds. At two places we were asked to take down the gods whom the inhabitants of the house were now to worship no more. Yesterday one woman whose god I brought away with me was present at the meeting. She seemed much in earnest when asked to speak; she said that after her gods were taken down she was not afraid until night, and then she imagined that two had come to beat her, and the more she thought, "what if they come?" the more frightened she became, until she could not sleep. Finally she said, "I am not afraid; I am not afraid; my Great Lady has come." Of course I told the poor creature how to speak to Jesus, to call his name instead of mine.

This week I received a letter from Mrs. Wang, wife of the Helper in one of our country stations, asking for books. She says the prayer-meeting started when I was there in the winter is kept up regularly with an attendance of seven or eight women. They have finished the catechism, and now will take up the Scripture selections. Oh, that one earnest Chinese woman, constrained by the love of Christ, could be put in every village in China, with the Catechism, Hymn Book and Bible in her hand! They would work a wondrous revolution in five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart our new missionaries, are hard at work at the language, and we are all very proud of their progress, and thank God and the Secretaries for sending us such noble helpers.

Queries for Christian Parents.

1. Do you say grace at the table?
2. Do you have family worship daily, reading the Scriptures, and praying?
3. Do you teach your children, as soon as they are teachable, to pray daily, on arising in the morning, as well as on retiring at night?
4. Do you either take or send your children to Sunday-School?
5. Do you require them to go to hear the preaching of the word?
6. Are you as careful of their spiritual and religious training as of their physical and mental?
7. In a word, are you training your children for God and eternity?
8. You ought to be able to answer "yes" to each of these question. Will you not ask God to bless and help you to do your duty toward the souls he has committed to your care?

In Victoria Hall, Sunderland, Eng., Saturday evening, June 16, in which a magician has been giving performances, near 200 children were killed by a crush and panic. When the entertainment was finished, the little ones (between the age of 4 and 14,) who principally occupied the gallery, descended the stairs hurriedly, and encountering a door, which opened but twenty inches, a jam resulted. Here some were lifted from the stairs by the struggling mass, and fell, only to be trampled to death. This brought on a panic, resulting in scenes similar to those which recently occurred on the Brooklyn bridge. The excitement in the town was terrific, and soldiers were sent to the scene of the horror to preserve order. Queen Victoria sent a message of sympathy.

UNKNOWN HEROES.

BY JOEL BENTON.

We see them and we know them not,
So plain in garb and mein are they;
So lowly is their thankless lot,
We hear not what they do or say.

And yet for weary months and years,
Without a murmur, 'plaint or cry,
Thousands who eat their bread in tears
To daily duty pass us by.

A sickly mother, wan and worn,
Bereft of cheerfulness and light,
From longed-for rest and joy is torn,
To work from early morn till night.

To steal one hour from dreary fate,
Or falter in the hardest tasks,
Would make some home disconsolate,
And so no peace or joy she asks.

A little child, faint with its fears—
A girl, untimely old and gray—
A man bent down by weight of years—
All bravely go their bitter way.

We see them, and we know them not,
So plain in garb and mien are they;
So lowly is their thankless lot,
We hear not what they do or say.

Heroes unknown—through weary years
They make no sign or outward cry,
But eat their bread with bitter tears,
And we, in silence, pass them by.

What Do You Mean To Be.

The distinguished career of Admiral Farragut is pretty generally known, and any good lesson from the history of his life can hardly fail to be both interesting and profitable. One of these lessons is particularly worthy of record and remembrance.

The summer after the late war was over, the admiral was spending the season with his family at Long Branch, in New Jersey. Sitting one morning on the portico of the hotel where he was staying, he was asked by a friend how it was that he had been led on successfully, step by step, to his well-known position in the navy and before the world.

"It was all owing," he replied, "to a resolution I formed when I was ten years of age. My father had been sent down to New Orleans with the little navy we then had, to look after matters connected with the supposed treason of Aaron Burr. I went with him as his cabin boy. I had some qualities that I was then silly enough to think were making a man of me. I could swear like an old salt, and could drink as stiff a glass of grog as if I had doubled Cape Horn, and could smoke like a locomotive. I was great at cards, and fond of gambling in almost every shape. My father, who had long watched my course of conduct, at the close of dinner one day turned everybody out of the cabin, locked the door, and said to me:

"'David, what do you mean to be?'

"'I mean to follow the sea as you have done.'

"'Follow the sea! Be a poor, miserable, drunken sailor before the mast, kicked and cuffed about the world, and die at last in some fever hospital, very likely in a strange and foreign clime.'

"'No,' said I, 'I'll tread the quarter-deck, and command a vessel as you do.'

"'No, David; no boy ever trod the quarter-deck who had such principles as you have, and such habits as you have formed and are forming. You'll have to change your whole course of life if you ever expect to become a man.'

"Saying this, my father left me and went on deck. I was stunned by the rebuke and overwhelmed with mortification. 'A poor, miserable, drunken sailor before the mast, kicked and cuffed about the world, and to die at last in some fever hospital! That is my fate, is it? No! I'll change my life, and change it at once. I will never utter another oath, I will never drink another drop of intoxicating liquors, I will never gamble again.' And, as God is my witness and helper, I have kept those three vows to this hour. This decision led me to reflection; and shortly after I became a Christian, and that settled my temporal, as blessed be God, it has also settled my eternal destiny."

The man who does not give to Foreign Missions "because there are heathen at our doors," is the man who never gives to the "heathen at our doors." The man who says "it takes a dollar to carry a cent to the heathen," is the man who never gives the dollar or a cent. The man who is ready to give for the Gospel at home is the man who is ready for the Gospel abroad; the man who can feel for the need of his remote fellow-men is the man who can feel for those near at hand.

A little girl in Yorkshire, once, when water was scarce, saved as much rain water as she could, and sold it to the washerwoman for a cent a bucket, and in this way cleared near five dollars for the Missionary Society. When she brought it to the secretary, she was not willing to tell her name. "But I must put down where the money comes from," said he. "Call it, then," said the little girl, "rain from heaven."

A Sunday-school teacher was trying to make his class understand the dependence of the branches on the vine. "Jesus is the vine; we are the branches. We derive all our life and happiness from Him." "Yes," said a little fellow. "Jesus is the vine; grown up people are the branches; and we are the buds."

Whatever may be said about the prayer of faith healing the sick, it is a sure preventive of what is known among weak Christians as "Sunday sickness."

While a doctor was visiting a sick woman in Rolandsville, Pa., two children poured out a pint of molasses into a silk hat, which he didn't notice till he put the tile on his head.

THE SOUTHWESTERN.

THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1883.

The Democrats of Ohio nomiuated Jndge Hoadley for Governor.

The Christian Statesman, of Milwaukee, Wis., has changed from the quarto to the eight page form, and is printed on new type. We hope these improvements indicate the lasting prosperity of that excellent paper.

Dr. Tanner, of the Christian Recorder, says: "With the understanding we have, the way to "benefit the race" is, in so many words, first benefit yourself. Individnally show them what you would like them to be, collectively. But do not he crazed about benefitting them, when yon have yet to show that you know how to benefit yourself."

Dr. Hartzell, in a recent note to member of the Lonisiana Conference, says: "Onr next conference will be an important session in relation to our centennial work, and I hope and expect that the contributions for onr Gilbert-Haven School of Theology will be larger than they were last year." We join the Doctor in this fervent hepe and expectation. No one was hnrt by last year's effort, while great good was accomplished. Let every pastor, every member and every friend do for this canse this year more than ever.

Rev. C. W. Campbell, president of Houston Seminary, in a note to the editor says, "School closed finely ;our exhibition was a grand success, bringing us in over $20. Almost without exception onr students say they intend to be with us next year." Here is a wonderful opportunity for some of the Lord's stewards to use ten or twenty thousand dollars of the Lord's money, in the erection of suitable buildings for the accommodation of the hundreds of onr young people in and aronnd this great center who desire to attend this school. Let there be no delay. The King's business demands haste.

The parish of Avoyelles has a population of abont 20,000, which is equally divided between the black and white. To accommodate her school population, she has now in operation 26 public schools. To only six of these are the colored children admitted, and only four colored teachers employed. Oh, for shame, upon any State or parish that will thus disgracefully and outrageously rob the poor colored colored children of their just right to eqnal share in the educational facilities offered by the State! Is there no moral or legal remedy against snch flagrant wrongs and corrupt practices? The parish of Avoyelles is not alone in snch deeds of injustice. This great wrong flourishes all over the South.

Rust University, in Holly Springs Miss., is beautifully located on an eminence abont three quarters of a mile from the main portion of the city. The College campus contains 23 acres of ground, which is well shaded with splendid and stately oaks, and is covered with a velvet like carpet of green clover On the grounds are two splendid edifices. The old McDonald Hall, which, though inadequate has done such good service; and the new Rust Hall, which was recently completed and dedicated. Rust Hall is a four story building, completed at a cost of $25,000, and containing forty-five or fifty rooms including chapel, recitation rooms. etc. A pleasing coincidence in connection with this institution is, that the grounds upon which it is built, is the identical spot upon which Gen. Grant's army camped when Holly Springs was captured during the late war. Now, here, the children of those who were freed as the result of this war are gradually being emancipated from ignorance and vice.

Christian Fellowship.

It is wonderful how many men there are who will not take a position on any particular question till the atmosphere gets right. They carefully watch the weather vane, and turn as it turns, and speak as it points. If it oscillates they oscillate, when the atmosphere gets settled and they find which way the sympathies of the people point, they are ready to speak. It seems to us that we ought to ask "What is the truth? What does the Lord Jesns Christ say abont this matter?" We certainly want to know what God approves. If we know anything as to the instruction of the Word of God, it teaches that all Christians are one in Christ. That He is the Shepherd of the one fold; the elder brother "of whom the whole family in heaven and on earth is named," the head of the body, and all believers irrespective of race, color or so-called social distinction are "members in one body." As individuals they are nnmerons, but "one body," one people, mntnally dependent, having the same great interests at heart. Love is the magnet by which they are united in one; the sign and seal of true discipleship. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one one another." Love always characterizes the friends of Jesus; it makes a community of interest and devotion, and will be shown by a delight in each other's society and welfare. In all things pertaining to religion all the disciples of the Lord Jesus feel that they have a common cause, and as they become in earnest to secure this privilege in Christ thay show a fondness for close and intimate communion with each other. Christ is the bleuding point, where we are neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, black nor white, bnt all one in Christ Jesns. This is yea and amen of the Holy Ghost in every man, the audible echo of God's voice in the soul, and in his written Word, and every pique, prejndice, and passion that is in opposition is doomed. We do not advocate any peculiar or new theory; we are relieved from that superfluous task. Nor do we beg the privilege of being a Methodist in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Neither do we offer apologies in this year of grace for being snch. Nor do we belong to the family of illegitimates who are born of worldly policy. We want no sounding brass or tinkling cymbal to take the place of supernatural grace. We simply ask for the practice of that system of heavenly Christianity so nnnatural to wickedness and depravity that it makes all races and colors one in Christ Jesus.

That Awful Crime.

The willful and deliberate murder of the Rev. J. Lane Borden, President of the Mansfield Female College, and member of the Lonisiana Annual Conference M. E. Church South, by the Rev. B. F. Jenkins, a member on trial of the same Conference, seems so shocking and hideons one can hardly realize the awful fact. From all that we can learn Mr. Borden was a man of mature years, and had always sustained the reputation of a pnre and consecrated minister. He held a high position in his conference as a pastor, preacher and educator. His unblemished character as a Christian gentleman and scholar was so well established that the trustees of the Mansfield College had prevailed npon him, in opposition to his own wishes, to continne to serve them another year. Persons who have known him from his yonth have the ntmost confidence in his Christian integrity and purity of character, and express the greatest astonishment that he should be even suspected of a crime so heinous as that which is alleged to have been the occasion of his death. They believe that when with his dying breath he declared that he was innocent he told the truth. Indeed the young lady, who has attained such an unfortunate notoriety by her connection with this matter, has not only sustained an unblemished repntation, but she exonerates Mr. Borden, and denies ever having made at any time a confession to Mr. Jenkins to the effect that Mr. Borden had in any manner ill treated her.

Mr. Jenkins, the murderer, is also a minister, a young man on trial in the Louisiana Annual Conference, having joined at its last session, and is said to have united with the Chnrch and entered the ministry under Mr. Borden's influence; but in this instance his entire conduct is much more like that of a fiend than of a Christian minister. In fact we do not know when we have read of any transactiou more diabolical. We have no language to express our utter abhorrence of a man who can follow a another as Mr. Jenkins did Mr. Borden. It cannot be said that he snpposed him guilty of any crime against the virtue of an inexperienced, innocent young lady, whom he hoped to make his wife. She says that she "had never confessed to him that Mr. Borden had in any manner ill treated her." Then Mr. Butler, the father of the young lady, who is said to be a high toned, honorable gentleman, says, "My daughter says that she said nothing to Mr. Jenkins from which he could possibly infer anything of the kind." The position that he committed this flagrant crime under the influence of a confession made to him cannot be sustained. His spirit in this transaction was not half so mnch that of an aggrieved, injured man as that of a cannibal at his horrid banquet, or the Indian in his paint and feathers, all wild and whooping with his hands full of bloody scalps. Blood is on his hands that will wash red forever. We look npon society as in part responsible for these frequent murders. Its voice is heard lamentiug and at the same time condoning murder. The Texas Advocate speaks of Mr. Jenkins as "the slayer," "the avenger," "frenzied by a deep sense of wrong," and adds "this case calls for the profoundest pity." We think that it is best to call all things by their appropriate names. No one word expresses the horribleness of this offense as that old Saxon word murder. In no sense whatever can Mr. Jenkins be called an avenger; he is a murderer, and must ever bear the mark of Cain.

We suggest the legal prohibition of the pistol. It is only made for human destruction, and Mr. Watterson says, "that he who goes about with a weapon if not a coward is a blackguard," and he certainly carries it in violation of law. Yes, let the deadly weapon be prohibited till men come to place a proper estimate upon human life and to control their own base animal passions. Let the training at home be Christian, and then let the pulpit and press speak out, not in condoning terms but in an earnest protest against this murderous spirit, and we shall soon have a faithful execution of the laws, and these murderers, like the mediæval bandits of the Black Forrest, will soon run their course and pass into forgetfulness. In this case the cause of the Lord Jesus suffers. Here again is Christ wounded in the house of his friends. It certainly becomes Christian men, while they denounce sin of every form, to take heed to themselves. God help them to stand firm, and from this point send out a note of solemn warning.

We nave recently received from men of the highest standing, from New England to Texas, the most flattering notes of commendation for which we thank them. The SOUTHWESTERN, notwithstanding the difficulties it has had to encounter, has made an advance the past year. And we think if all the preachers were to do their full duty the subscription list could be easily pushed up to six or eight thousand. Work is needed. We know the excuses, bnt we remember the old adage, "where there is a will there is a way," and we believe there is a world of truth in this trite saying.

Our Country's Mission.

It is a favorite thought of most people that they have a special mission, that God has some particular work some great earthly thing for them to do. So it has always been. Athens thought her style of democracy was the world's panacea; Rome was certain that her form of a republic was the only thing. What is our mission? One important part of our country's mission has been gradually fulfilled. We have opened onr doors and welcomed all people, every exile from "a murdered or murdering nation" we welcome as a brother, We have Caucasian and African, Malayans, Mongolians and Americans. They come from England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain, Russia, Turkey, China and Africa. White, black, brown, red and yellow, and have mated and fused into a new and distinct sub-race of mankind, the latest birth of time, and peculiar to the United States of America. All of these people are here. God our Creator and theirs has brought us all to this land, foreign to us all, that he might develop just as the world is approaching its ultimate paradisical estate, the oneness of blood, and the oneness of language, which seems to be in advance of all others as a world subduing tongue. We cannot believe that the bringing of so many distinct races and nationalities into one land, and the moulding them into one great people is a mere accident. The giving such a home to the oppressed of all other lands is no more an accident than the creation of the world. But this is only the beginning of God's great plan and purpose in giving us a national existence and in planting his church in the bosom of such a nation. Religion and education must ever be the cornerstone of American liberty. Our people must be so educated as to create and maintain a public sentiment in favor of law, order and constitutional liberty; in favor of truth and righteousness. We have no place nor business for communists, nihilists, rationalists, or atheists in this country, these are anarchy in a Republic. As the Chicago Interior puts it:

"Our mission is to be true to God and to his gospel—to be loyal to the church and to the country, to conserve the foundations of social order and true liberty, to maintain the Sabbath as a day of rest and worship, to help the poor, to rescue the perishing, to educate the rising generation, to plant the standard of the gospel, the Sunday-school, and the common school, on every frontier settlement and in every destitute neighborhood of the land. This is the joint work of every pupil in the country, of every teacher, of every Christian academy, college and university, of every public press, of every published volume, tract, Bible, and religious newspaper. All our great educational, benevolent, moral and religious agencies and associations of every Christian organization exist to fulfill this great mission. Nor do they exist in vain. They are all working for the same appointed end. And God himself is working in and by and over them all."

We know that there are difficult problems in our social and political life which must soon be solved. The base-born feeling of caste rules in some parts of our country with a rod of iron as tyrannically as it does the Brahmins of India. But this is sure to disappear. The Bible proclaims the absolute oneness of the race of man in Adam, Noah and Christ. Let the church, let every Christian cling to this central doctrine of the Word of God, one man, one Savior, one God. Whatever makes any separation among the children of men, if it is as the right eye, pluck it out. God in a strange way delivered this land from that foul monster slavery, and this fouler child, caste, will soon follow to an unholy and shameful grave. This divine rock, one man, one Savior, one God, the gates of hell shall not prevail against. The Gospel will work a perfect work. All that is needed is the Bible, the church and the school. The strongest calls of God's providence upon us are in behalf of the ignorant millions who are among us. There are at least two grounds upon which the policy of universal education may be placed. First, they are citizens and as such they need to be educated that they may comprehend their duties and privileges as citizens. Second, ours is a Christian nation, and as such it is an imperative duty to educate our people. Our country's welfare and salvation depend upon this, God calls us to this work. The one great mission of the nation and the churches is give the gospel and with it education to the uneducated millions that dwell among us. And never were a people called to a nobler work.

The annual catalogue of Wiley University, Marshall, Texas, 1882-3 is on our table. Total number in attendance 313; college 4, academic 220, primary 193, grand total 417. The University has three courses of study. The academic course is adapted to the wants of such as cannot complete the more comprehensive course. The collegiate places within the reach of those who seek it the means of acquiring a liberal education. The Biblical course embraces the studies usually taught in our schools of theology. Students completing the academic course will be entitled to a certificate of graduation. Those completing one of the university courses will be entitled to a diploma from the faculty and trustees. The object of the church in establishing this and kindred institutions all through the South is to give to our people an opportunity to acquire a Christian education, and to raise up a class of preachers and teachers educated and trained, models in capacity, in character, and example. It is not too much to say that our preachers and teachers should be first class, thoroughly equipped, mentally and morally. Their work is arduous and full of difficulty. They are to educate, mould the young to a pure life, and they need to be well instructed and soundly converted to God. Bro. Davis and the corps of instructors associated with him are eminently fit for the task assigned them, by character, reputation and experience. In accepting their present positions they have obeyed their convictions of duty. They represent the church in an important field and deserve a strong backing.

The Legislature of Illinois has voted to raise the license for sell whiskey to $500, and for beer to $150. Penalties of fine or imprisonment are imposed on beer sellers who deal in any other intoxicating liquors. This is the law that so many of the clergymen of Chicago were anxious to have enacted. They claimed that this law would close up at least one thousand grog shops in Chicago, and thus reduce the amount of liquor drinking. We cannot see how a high license can produce less drinking. It places the saloon keeping business of Illinois in the hands of a monopoly, and makes it more dangerous. If the driving out of the business the poorer and smaller saloon keepers could have the effect of diminishing the aggregate quantity of liquors, bold men might be persuaded to advocate high license; bnt less places for selling, does not mean less drinking. The advocates of the law thought that high license would close up the vice-breeding, sin fostering dens, but it will prove that these will recieve the greatest benefit. And if Chicago or any other city or town has less grog-shops, not a glass less will be sold. The sale will only be more centralized. High license does not mean less drinking, only a fewer persons employed in the business. Temperance people talk of this way and that way to stop the evil of intemperance, but certainly high license cannot be one of them. We may not all think alike as to the best method, but let us do something. Let the pulpit and the pew, the platform and the press cry out against the evil itself. And may God send deliverance.

One of the most shocking catastrophes we have ever read of occurred in Sunderland, England, involving the death of over 200 children ranging from four to fourteen years of age. From details received it seems that an entertainment was given in Victoria Hall by a conjurer, attended almost entirely by children. In retiring from the place a panic was produced and while the mass of children were pushing forward one of them fell and and others crowding, was unable to rise. The result was that a large number were pushed down, trampled on and suffocated to death. Many of the victims who were not killed had their clothing torn from their bodies which shows something of the nature of the terrible struggle through which they passed. The news of this disaster spread through the town and over 20,000 people it is said rushed to the scene of the disaster. The feeling was so intense that the authorities ordered out the infantry to preserve order while the work of getting out the bodies was going on. It is not possible to give (and, we could not if we would) the least idea of the heartrendering scenes of parents who discovered the dead bodies of their little ones, laid out in the hall.

We thank Dr. Buckley for the following advice to our people coming South, and we earnestly hope that all the editors of our Advocates will follow this example:

"One of our pastors in the South writes us that, during his administration in the State where he now lives, he has met with a number of families who, having come from our Church at the North, and settled here, would gladly have united with the Methodist Episcopal Church had they known of its existence, but not knowing of it, they have united with other Churches in the South. He thinks, and we fully agree with him, that our ministers giving letters to members going South should interest themselves in finding out whether our Church is represented in or near the place where those members expect to settle, and if so that they should inform them of this fact, and also acquaint the minister in charge of such station or charge of their arrival. This is the true course to pursue in all cases; but it seems especially desirable when our members go South, not for the reason that some might suggest, that we are discouraging our members from joining the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, bnt because our own Church in that section needs all the help that it can get, and because we believe that where we have a church it should be sustained and made as efficient as possible.

—Dr. Dean, president of the New Orleans University in a personal note from his home Mystic Coun., says: "I have been here two weeks and I am just beginning to feel rested. The bracing air here, frequently so cold as to need fire all night, with riding and rowing and hill climbing, are making us rapidly forget the weary labor of the past months. The good bright face of the SOUTHWESTERN is like the visits of a dear friend from a far off land."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

P. Johnson: "I went with Rev. J. Hason, from Natchitoches, intending to stay four days in Sabine parish, but I found a good neighborhood and have remained. We have got at Negreet a large Sunday-school with 53 scholars. Two boys named Aaron and Moses were born in this parish last October."

J. Hason, Columbus: "The people are just beginning to look like Methodists. They have been following strange doctrine. They will labor to take care of a preacher. I have appointed a missionary committee to push the claims of the Gilbert Haven school of Theology. I have advocated temperance. There are two Sabbath-schools with 125 scholars. Philip Johnson, a superintendent, is a useful man."

R. L. Perry, Jackson: "Our pastor, Rev. C. D. Shallowhorne, and members, are striving to have a nice church. Our church, 30x50, had boxing all around, and overhead rough ceiling, with a centre beam and post. Our pastor raised means to secure 6387 feet of lumber, and it is now on the ground. At the first quarterly meeting a building committee was appointed composed of Tinker Haines, Geo. Shattuck and R. L. Perry. The committee had specifications drawn up. It was expected to start the work June 4; a thousand feet more of lumber was needed. We are going to have the church well ceiled, with a new pulpit and gothic front over the pulpit; a new cupola. The people are rallying to the support of the pastor and committee, and we are going to complete the work as soon as possible. Too much thanks cannot be extended to the following friends and brethren for hauling our lumber from Clinton free of charge: Ben Barnes, Morris P. Lee, Sam Haines, Tinker Haines, Henry Capital, Perry & Marshal, Lewis James, Geo. Shattuck, Milton Brown, Jerry Young. They are giving our preacher a good support. We have made him a present of a twenty-four dollar suit. The Feliciana Benevolent Society made him a present of ten dollars. Our Sunday-school is progressing very well. A fine corps of teachers and a good school."

H. J. Wright, Natchitoches: "Our basket meeting realized $22. We had a short memorial service in remembrance of Bishop Peck. We have made some improvements on the church and property."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. B. Smith, Handsboro: "On Sunday July 8, there will be a basket meeting at the church for the benefit of the church and pastor, given by the stewards and members. Our brethren in New Orleans are cordially invited. Had 17 converts this quarter."

H. Roundtree, Union Church: "Elder McDonald held quarterly conference at Wesley chapel. A glorious rivival followed and there were 15 additions to the church. Rev. J. Ford, our pastor is a heroic worker in the vineyard of the Lord. Our new church Hickory Block, is finished all but ceiling and whitewashing, and we are out of debt."

R. M. May, Mashulaville: "Elder Campbell held our quarterly conference, and said he was pleased with the reports, which were in writing, and from nearly all leaders present. He christened some nine or ten children."

J. J. Martin, Assistant Sunday-school Superintendent, Pickens: "Children's day, June 10, was observed. Rev. E. Scarborough preached an interesting sermon to the children, subject, 'O send out thy light and the truth,' which was a real treat to all who heard it. Just before service the teachers and pupils formed a procession and marched into the church with a beautiful banner in front of them. A collection of $5.90 was taken up. A better time on such an occasion was never had or even equalled at this place. Committees are at work on the other collections required by our church discipline."

TEXAS.

J. T. Jacobs, Pleasanton. "My camp meeting will commence at Fredericksburg, July 15th. Elder M. Henson and Rev. D. Edmonds, of Pleasanton circuit, will attend. All ministers of the gospel, and friends are invited to come."

D. Edmods, Pleasanton: "Elder M. Henson held my quarterly conference, preached and administered sacrament to 37; collection $10.25. Twelve children were given to the Lord. Protracted meeting closed with four converts, making 16 in all this year; 3 have been received by letter and 5 on probation."

A. Lockhart, East Waco: "Elder Gates held second quarter at Aquilla, preached three sermons and gave the children in Sunday-school a good talk. The pastor's report was as follows: Two Sabbath-schools; officers and teachers, 14; scholars of all ages, 75; three appointments. We expect to commence building soon; have some money on hand. The pastor's salary is fixed at $300. Four were received in full connection, six probationers. Paid the elder $7.50, benevolent collections were $5.35."

TENNESSEE.

J. S. Sinclair, Spencer: "We are going to build at one point. There are now three preaching places. At Lock's chapel all the lumber is on the ground now, and work will commence soon. There are three Sunday.schools. Have receivad into church 15 full members."

J. Kirby, Hollow Rock: "Elder Price held my second quarterly meeting. The elder and Rev. J. W. Hall preached for us, and we received one convert. We have built a church, except the covering and flooring. Sunday-schools are flourishing; at Clarksburg there are 45 scholars, Johnson school house 37, Shady Grove 43."

J. J. Barr, Sharon: "Our Sunday school at Cold Springs, taught by Miss Nance Allsberry, R. C. Cotton, Miss Liza Allsberry and Mr. Tom Cheney, is under good discipline. I visited it on the first Sunday in June. Nearly 200 persons were present to hear preaching."

SOUTH CAROLINA.

A preacher's meeting and Sunday-school institute is announced to meet in Orangeburg, July 25th to 30th. It will be opened on Monday at 12 m., by Rev. A Webster, D. D., presiding elder of Orangeburg district, an address of welcome by Rev. D. Mimms, and a reply by Rev. W. R. Jervey. At night "The Rise and Progress of the M. E. Church" will be the subject of an address by Dr. Webster. On Thursday at 9:30 pastors will begin their reports, each being allowed ten minutes; and in the afternoon and evening there will be expositions of texts, essays, and songs. Friday morning at 9:30 discussion will be had on this question; "Resolved, That our church would receive more benefit if Claflin University was distinct from the State;" Rev. L. Arthur, in the affirmative, and Rev. L. S. Blakeney, in the negative. In the afternoon: "Resolved, That it is Expedient for the Methodist Episcopal Church to establish separate Schools and Churches on the ground of Color," will be affirmed by Rev. Thomas Sims, and opposed by Rev. W. S. Bailey. The presiding elder will speak on our publications; and at night there will be short addresses on benevolent claims. The Sunday-school Institute will open Saturday at 9:30 under Rev. E. M. Pinckney, superintendent; a varied programme will be carried out, and the session end Monday night. We hope our brethren will see that a summary of the proceedings is furnished the SOUTHWESTERN, whose readers take a deep interest in the work in the Palmetto State.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

"Is the M. E. Church True to Its Principles?"

This is the significant heading of an editorial in the late Atlanta Advocate, July 5th, 1882. It put me to thinking on the same line. The editorial is too pointed to be forgotten, and I therefore give it in full:

"Among other principles she has taught the equality of all men before the law and before God. She has spurned all caste feeling and professed to treat every man like a brother. Has she been true to her profession? The Freedmen's Aid Society has now over thirty teachers of the colored race in its employ. It has almost from the first had a colored man for professor of ancient languages in Clark University, at Atlanta, and at the last commencement at Claflin, we are told that one was elected for that institution. These teachers have salaries ranging from $900 downward. It seeks to raise men up and treat them like men. It is a pledge of the whole church's action in regard to all offices, even the highest. It is a perpetual incentive to all men to seek to rise."

Taking a retrospect upon the work accomplished by the church for our race through our Freedmen's Aid Society, we are made to exclaim "What hath God wrought?" Looking forward we see more promising and inviting fields widening out before her, and the thought comes up whether under the present responsibilities and mode of operation will the church be adequate to her future task? Are the best steps now being taken to gather the bread cast many days ago upon the water; to garner into the Methodist Episcopal Church the harvest, whose seeds, when planted immediately after and since the war, received the warm showers and sunshine of God's approval that made them sprout? To say we are educating the Negro out of our communion sounds as if coming from the other side of the house. Some serious mistakes in the selection of teachers for this work have been made, for too much missionary zeal and not enough salary coupled with proficiency, injures our work in the South to-day. Many changes of teachers have occurred from as many different causes. Many teachers have been employed in the work of our church among us, who never met and lived among colored people before, and hence know nothing of their wants, characteristics, etc. Everything to such teachers is as if placed to teach in the heart of Africa or China. Habits, customs, family affairs, in fact everything to them was novelty. In some cases their efforts to train our people have been too radical, if the means employed were not questionable. No one can deny that their intentions were good, but they did not know how to take hold of it. Where teachers have come from institutions of learning where they have been associated with our people, results have been far different and more beneficial. Now, as to the relation our colleges in the South sustain to the church that gave them birth, could not much more and better work be done among the masses of our people, if, wherever we have a college and a church in the same city or town, the professors and students attended one service at that church on Sunday in a body, professors and students together? It would be beneficial to the entire church; then the pastor of that congregation would necessarily have to be above the average, prepare his sermons with much care, and deliver them in the same way; the singing would be better; the students would enjoy it more than they do the "chapel exercises" in the college after having been there shut up all the week; the membership and the entire church work at that place would be elevated and increased in number and quality. What the paster was not qualified to do alone, advice from professors would aid him to do, and besides this the pastor would feel doubly secured in properly training and preaching to his pupils, and the hysterical and sensational preacher and member would be straightened out to solid work. There can be no objection to this on the score of breaking the Sabbath by leaving the college grounds, nor allowing the students to "scatter all over creation," for none of our teachers er presidents, could, under the light of to-day, and the teaching of the church, object to being seen in line with their students any more than if of their own race. As the case now stands the students when allowed to go out, nearly always hunt for the crowd. Would it not be an incentive also if more of our graduates were employed by their own church to teach in these institutions of learning? There can be no objection to this from those teachers who come South to help educate our people, for not one of them, who now occupies position, but would be willing to give place to some efficient former student. To say, now after 20 years' training, "we have no man or woman qualified intellectually and morally for president, professor or matron," is to make a concession that would reflect no credit on the society or teachers. Unless we do this, the saying of our enemies, that we are fattening flies for frogs," will be verified. From these institutions of learning your young men and women go forth with diplomas that mean something or nothing; they are qualified for the duties of life, or they are not. If the latter, we are only building air castles and binding our young people to the church and race with ropes of sand. To give them such positions would indeed be an incentive for them to more patiently pursue the course to completion. I have heard it said "too many young men and women can not now be spared from the active work to pursue the college course." Now, even to my ears this has not the right ring. The Methodist Church in the South to-day has need of a hundred college graduates where she has only ten. Lengthening the curriculum, and exacting the utmost farthing, and tapping all the manhood out of students, will, as a matter of course, discourage and drive them away; but a fixed curriculum will be stuck to until it is completed. To build up the Methodist Church among our people in the South is one thing, but to fill the presidencies, professorships, pulpits, and schools of other denominations and encourage it, is quite another thing. Preaching everywhere and organizing nowhere will destroy any church; and the same is true of teaching. It is far different with some institutions of other denominations. If a boy enters the back door of a Baptist institution, he generally goes to the front door a Baptist, out-and-out. It is just the same way with a number of other institutions. It is too often the case with our Methodist institutions of learning, that, "he that hath eaten bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me." Students go out of our colleges in the South with sharpened swords given out of our armory, and sharpened by our steel, and soon as they get outside of the yard,—nay, sooner—begin to brandish our weapons, now in their hands in our faces. I know this cannot always be avoided, but I see no need of courting such trouble. But some one will probably say, who desires no one to think but himself, "don't be so narrow, bigoted and sectarian." Well, that will do very well at times. I have no objection to the grand old church educating the whole world, but as an individual part and parcel of the whole, I think a little more Methodism—simon-pure—given the pupils of our colleges, lectures on her economy, and such lectures as Dr. Porter gives in his incomparable "Compendium of Methodism," and we will be putting up a foundation for Methodism in this land instead of sapping that already laid. In one of our institutions of learning here in the South, during a whole term, the only colored man who addressed the students was of the African church, and immediately after the address by one of their D. D's, a student, who had finished one course of study and was pursuing another, offered a resolution welcoming him to the institution, as the only Negro president of a college in the land. Another student happened to think of Dr. Revels, and the "resolver" sat down to have his motion put to the school and carried "unanimously" by those who voted for it. These things amount to but little, I presume, to presidents of colleges and professors, but those of us who have to contend with it in the prairies and back woods find it pretty hard to hold our own against such fearful odds, and notoriety thus purchased hurts our work. Because of these things the hearts of many of people are faint, and unless the church ceases, like David, to sit up over the gate and weep, we cannot hold the church up. I am not a fanatic, nor am I an ultraist, neither is my system filled with insubordination, but I feel like saying to the church, like Jacob did to David, as found in 2 Sam. 19: 5, 8. Now, I ask if it is not possible for us as a church to multiply the "thirty teachers" ten-fold and place them where they can help carry on this grand work. Let our own students be employed in preference to others, and our people will see we are not simply clamoring for honor and position, but to elevate and set to work the students we have trained. Let there be a more earnest effort on the part of preachers and the teachers that love these institutions to get others in, and we will then hear no more of the "burnt child dreads the fire." It may be that I have drawn these lines too light, but if I have it is simply because I wish not to do or say anything that will give our opposers any hold or that would in any way retard the progress of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South. I am set for the defense of the church in which I was born. L. M. HAGOOD.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Jno. B. Alden's magazine, Choice Literature, for June, contains articles from Tyndall, Fronde, Huxley, Mathew Arnold, Mrs. Oliphant and others. Price 15c; $1 per year, This excellent publication may be obtained from the Mr. Alden, 18 Vesey Street, New York.

General Charles P. Stone, "Stone Pasha," of the Egyptian army, who is at present visiting in New York, has written for the July Century a paper describing the events which came under his notice in Washington on the eve of the Civil War. General Stone tells much that is new regarding the precaution taken to insure the safety of Mr. Lincoln in his memorable journey to the White House in March, 1861.

The Century, encouraged by the cordial reception of the many articles on outdoor sports which it has already published, is soon to print, as a summer feature, three additional papers of this class: "Black Bass Fishing," by Dr. James A. Henshall; "Bob White: The Game Bird of America," by Prof. A. M. Mayer, of the Stevens Institute of Technology, who is said to be as expert in the field as in the laboratory; and "Hunting the Musk-Ox," by Lieut. Schwatka—a reminiscence of Arctic Adventure. The series will be fully illustrated.

"The Bridge," proposed for the East River in 1811 by Mr. Thomas Pope, to connect New York and Brooklyn, is to be shown in the July St. Nicholas in connection with a fully illustrated description of the present bridge by Mr. Charles Barnard.

George W. Cable will conclude in the July Century his series of illustrated papers descriptive of the Creoles and their Crescent City. "Flood and Plague in New Orleans" is the title of the paper, which deals with the sufferings of the Creoles from the Mississippi's overflow and from yellow fever and cholera.

The Popular Science Monthly for July contains several striking articles. The first one, "The Railroad Problem in the United States," is an admirable statement of the various urgent and difficult questions that have been created by this new and colossal interest of our civilization. A brilliant paper, as practical as entertaining, is that of Dr. Oswald on "Dyspepsia" in his series on "The Remedies of Nature." Dr. Emily Blackwell has a very able article on "The Industrial Position of Woman." The editor of the Monthly makes a lively reply to Dr. Blackwell's main positions: Huxley's article on "Unwritten History" is one of the finest of this incomparable essayist. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

The Journal of Christian Science, Mary G. Eddy, editor, is a new Boston alternate monthly, intended to promote health and morals.

The Manhattan for July opens with an illustrated article on Princeton College, followed by a variety of articles, poetry and fiction of fair merit. Price 25 cents. New York, Temple Court.

The June or second number of Electra has "The Homeless Poet," "Jesse and Colin," "An Oriental Wedding," "Louis VII of France," with editorial notes and scraps that are entertaining. The ladies who are conducting this magazine are doing some creditable literary work. Price 25 cents.

The frontispiece for the July number of Harper's Magazine is an exquisitely beautiful engraving from Mr. F. S. Church's picture, "A Witch's Daughter." The opening article is an interesting description of Hampstead Heath, the most picturesque of the suburbs of London, by William H. Rideing. Alexander F. Oakey contributes a brief article explaining what is meant by "Conventional Art." A second paper on "The Romanoffs" is contributed by H. Sutherland Edwards, devoted to the reign of the late Emperor Alexander II. The article is illustrated by portraits of Alexander II., Alexander III., the present Empress and the heir apparent. An admirable paper on Cincinnati is contributed by Olive Logan. Colonel Higginsons eighth chapter of American History is entitled "The Second Generation of Englishmen in America," The fiction of the number is of an attractive and popular kind. William L. Stone contributes a paper entitled "The Declaration of Independence in a New Doing One's Duty.

As I was putting my house in order this morning, it was warm and I was tired, and my thoughts were not pleasant. This all of the time doing the same things over and over again is depressing. Every day the food has to be cooked, the dishes washed, and the rooms swept and dusted, and many other things have to be done. At night we pronounce our work well done but the next morning we have it all to do over. Our work does not show. I sat down and opened my Bible to see if I could not find something to soothe me. I read these words, "And let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Does the "well doing" mean the cooking, and sweeping and dusting, and if so what shall we reap, and when will the "due season" come? I have read a piece of poetry in which are these words: "O, where shall rest be found; rest for the weary soul." The reply was "in Heaven." That is a pretty sentiment, and it is true, but it does not quite satisfy us impatient mortals. I read again in my Bible "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Now, that is just what we need. We have'nt got to wait; God's time is now. No doubt the "due season" means now, if we are only prepared for it.

When we are willing to come to the Savior, we are just prepared for work as well as rest. It is only independence upon Him that we may develop our faculties so as to be the most useful. God favors not inactivity. His richest blessings must be sought, and His gifts must be properly used. Many by lying idle never accumulate. Muscles become weak and the brain loses its power, and the mind grows narrow, and the heart cold and hard by too little use. "Let your light shine" must be obeyed, or one ceases to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. We have much reason to believe that many poor sufferers chained down by physical disease may "arise" if in the strength of the Lord they are willing to "take up their beds and walk." There would be less of sorrow and disappointment, if there were less false views of life and its duties, and if all would work from good motives. Many are trying to improve themselves, and do good, some are making the accumulation of riches their motive for living, others are seeking fame; and very many are in deep depravity, seeking to draw people down to their own level. We are not left entirely to the guidance of our own judgment about what we are able to do. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet," and if we follow its teaching one duty after another will come up in succession, and if it is not always what our taste would choose, nevertheless if it is the work God has given us it will promote our own happiness and lead to positions of honor in proportion to our faithfulness.

"Work for the good that is nighest, Think not of the greatness afar."

To have one's name handed down to posterity as having done some great thing is many a one's fond ambition. As we carefully study the history of those who have been thus favored we have found that their lives were made up of very commonplace duties. God' instruments to do his work have always been chosen from those who have endured fiery trials and were purified in the furnace of affliction. Hard work, temptations and trials have always accompanied all that has been of worth to the world. To the faithful Christian these words seem written everywhere,

"If you want a field of labor
You can find it everywhere."

In this world there is room for all workers and a plenty to do. This is indeed an age of great activity and much is being accomplished. Wonderful scientific discoveries are being made, and we are getting stronger proofs of the authenticity of the Bible, and its truths are being more clearly brought out, and we are learning more of the goodness of God in His dealings with us. People are working and thinking and peering into mysteries, and getting out of old grooves. Even the men on the street corners or lounging about the saloons have the spirit of the times and they are working, planning deeds of darkness, and working their wicked passions, and making themselves strong for evil, and women, too, clothed in filth and rags, are wasting their lives in wrong doing, and enjoying nothing so much as hating those who are doing better than themselves. It is said that there are avenues to every human heart and if they could be reached, faith in God would lead them in better ways. The Salvation Army are having influence with that class—God speed them in that work of love.

There is great satisfaction in doing one's duty—what God directs us to do. In working for the Lord the pay is sure. He pays well for work well done, no matter what it is, so that it is directed by His spirit, "Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." The time is coming when we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ, and we shall hear the words spoken to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant," or "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity." Which shall it be?

CREAM PANCAKES.—Take the yolks of two eggs. mix them with a half pint of cream and two ounces of sugar; rub your pan with lard and fry as thin as possible, grate sugar over them and serve hot.

QUEEN'S PUDDING.—One pint of bread crumbs, one quart of milk, warmed and poured over the crumbs yolks of four eggs, well beaten with one cup of sugar and one teaspoonful of butter. When baked, spread over the top a layer of jelly or preserves. Beat the whites of eggs dry, and add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and spread over the top. Bake a light brown. Serve warm with sauce, or cold with sugar and cream.

When bread is taken from the oven wring a clean cloth out of water and wrap around. Then cover tightly with the usual bread cloth. This makes the crust nice and tender.

SALADE DE TOMATEES.—Blanch your tomatoes; skin them well. Let them get very cool and slice them; serve with mayonnaise or plain dressing.—La Cuisine.

ONION POSSET, OR GRUEL.—This has been found very efficacious for colds, and is made with Robinson's groats, with the addition only of an onion, which should have been previously boiled for six hours. The yolk of an egg, well beaten, is an improvement.

POTATO CHOPS.—Mash nicely with a little milk, butter, pepper and salt any potatoes left from the day before, spread evenly over a boned loin chop previously sprinkled with finely chopped fried mint. Fry to a golden brown in boiling fat, then place it on blotting paper to remove the superfluous grease. Garnish with fresh mint and watercress.

RICE BLANC-MANGE.—Ingredients—One quarter of a pound of ground rice, three ounces af loaf sugar, one ounce of fresh butter, one quart of milk, flavoring of lemon peel, essence of almonds or vanilla or laurel leaves. Mode—Mix the rice to a smooth batter with about half a pint of the milk, and the remainder put into a saucepan with the sugar, butter and flavoring; bring the milk to the boiling point, quickly stir in the rice and let it boil for about ten minutes, or until it comes easily away from the sancepan, keeping it well stirred. Grease a mould with pure salad oil; pour in the rice and let it get perfectly set, when it should turn out quite easily; garnish it with jam, or pour round a compote of any kind of fruit. This blanc-mange is better for being made the day before it is wanted, as it then has time to become firm. If laurel leaves are used for flavoring steep three of them in the milk and take them out before the rice is added. About eight drops of essence of almonds, or from twelve to sixteen drops of essence of vanilla, would be required to flavor the above proportion of milk.

What They Both Thought.

It was twenty-five minutes past seven. The buggy was at the door, to take him to the train. His hand was on the knop: "Good-bye," he called out. There came from somewhere upstairs, through the half open door, a feminine voice, "Good bye;" then he had gone out into the glad spring air, odorous with the foretokens of coming life and musical with the songs of nest builders. But there was no song in his heart, no spring hope and light in his life, as he took the riens out of his groom's hand and spoke to his impatient horse a sharp "Get on!" And as he rode through the royal avenue that led up to his house, this is what he thought:—

"If I had been a guest, Martha would have been up and dressed. She would have had a spray of fresh flowers at my plate. She would have set at the table and seen that my coffee was good, and my eggs hot and my toast browned. And I should have at least a parting shake of the hand, and a hope expressed that I would come again, and perhpas a wave of the handkerchief from the balcony. And I should have carried away with me that smile that is brighter than the sun shine, as the last gift of her gracious hospitality. It is a chance if she would not even have proposed to ride to the station with me, to see me off. For she knows, if ever woman did, how to welcome the coming and speed the parting guest.

"But I am only her husband, and I can eat my breakfast alone, as if I were a bachelor; and get my coffee muddy or clear, hot or cold, as Bridget happens to make it; and take eggs hard or soft, and toast burnt or soggy, as it chances to come from a careless cook. And nobody cares. And when I go, "Good-bye" is flung after me like a dry bone after an ill cared for cur. Heigho! What's the use of getting married, anyway?"

And this is what she thought as she put the last touches to her hair before her glass, and tried hard to keep the tears back from her eyes before she went down to see that the family breakfast was ready:—

"I wonder if Hugh really cares anything for me any more. When we were first married he never would have gone off in this way, with a careless "Good-bye" tossed upstairs as he might toss a cleaned bone to a hungry dog. He would have found time to run up and kiss me good-bye and tell me that he missed me at his breakfast, and ask was I sick. He is gracious to his friends; a perfect gentleman to every one but his wife. I believe he is tired of me. I wish I could let him go. It would be hard for me; but if it would be better for him! Well! well! I mustn't think such things as these. Perhaps he does love me after all. But—but—it is coming to be hard to believe it."

And so with a heavy heart she went to her work. And the April sun laughed in at the open windows, and the birds chirped cheer to her all day, and the flowers waved their most graceful beckoning to her in vain; all for want of that one farewell kiss.

Oh! husbands and wives, will you never learn that love often dies of slightest wounds; that the husband owes no such thoughtful courtesy to any other person as he owes to his wife; that the wife owes no such attentive consideration to any guest as she owes to her husband; that life is made up of little things, and that oftimes a little neglect is harder burden for love to bear than an open and flagrant wrong?—Christian Union.

The reported discovery of gold in Lower California is a story such as many people have wearily longed for in recent years, for there is nothing like a new gold field to drain large cities of the more active portion of their bad characters. To get gold—money—by digging it out of the ground is almost as much fun, if the dirt is soft, as picking a pocket or breaking open a bank safe. Then, too, there are never any police at new gold fields. Lower California will be just the place for bad Americans to go to for their country's good; it is out of the United States, it contains neither food nor water, and persons who go there seldom come back again. If therefore, the peninsula contains gold enough to attract the dangerous classes, the Society for the Prevention of Crime ought to offer free transportation to as many persistent law breakers as may want to go.—*N. Fleming Brothers:

It affords me pleasure to assure you that after using Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills for more than twenty years in my family, that I regard them as being superior to any I have ever used or have seen used. I have not had them constantly and had to try others, and I have tried a good variety, but I have never had any to act so promptly, profitably and nicely as McLane's. I have used them on myself, wife and children, with the most gratifying results.

For children, having used them on my own with such easy and happy effects, I need only recommend them to one and all. They will do their work—do it promptly, do it well, and leave no bad effects behind.

As a bile remover, as a liver corrector, as a forerunner preparing the system for quinine, there is no pill or medicine equal to Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills. I expect to use them as long as I live, if they continue as good as they have been in the past.

Yours truly, E. H. GILES,
Pastor of M. E. Church, South Myers' Station, Tampa District, Florida Conference.

Plantation Melodies
—AND—
REVIVAL HYMNS.

By MARSHALL W. TAYLOR, D D.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION
By Rev. F. S. HOYT, D.D., Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.
Second Edition, Enlarged and Improved.

A remarkable and unique collection of religious songs, with their accompanying weird, pathetic, ever varied and charming melodies, as sung for generations by the colored people of America. A few of the songs will be familiar, but the great majority have never before been printed, and are now given for the first time with the original words and music. The music has been carefully written, and is well adapted for quartet, chorus, and congregational signing, and is especially excellent for social evenings at home. All singers should have it. First edition was exhausted in sixty days. Send for a copy.

"These songs ought to be saved and they ought to be sung.."—Bishop I. W. Wiley. "Should think that the book would sell by thousands, and that it would do good."—Dr. J. M. Buckley. "It is grand. I like it."—Dr. R. S. Rust. "Just the thing—the gold saved from the dross."—Dr. Jacob Krehbiel. "Am perfectly delighted with it; it will sell by the thousands."—Rev. A. E. P. Albert. "There should be a copy in every household."—Rev. H. W. Tate. "Having carefully read your hymn-book, and being acquainted with many of the soul-stirring anthems spread upon its pages—especially one that was the cause of my conversion—I can and will commend the book, in the name of God, to all the world."—Rev. C. H. Collins.

Bound in cloth, gilt, 272 pages, and portrait. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, 60 cents.

Address, PHILLIPS & HUNT,
32 Natchez street, New Orleans.

Mrs. Charles Dickens's experiences with a genius for a husband were even more unhappy than poor Mrs. Carlyle's. To a friend she once remarked. "I suppose the world needs a few geniuses to live in it, but it's a dreadful fate to have to live with one of them."

Judge Billings granted a mandamus to Mrs Myra Clark Gaines to compel the city of New Orleans to levy a special tax to pay the judgment of nearly $2,000,000. A devolutive appeal from the decision which gave her the judgment for the above amount has been taken to the supreme court of the United States.

GOOD-BYE, PROUD WORLD.

BY RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

Good-bye, proud world! I'm going home;
Thou art not my friend; I am not thine:
Too long through weary crowds I roam,
A river ark on the ocean brine,
Too long I am tossed like the driven foam;
But now, proud world, I'm going home.

Good-bye to Flattery's fawning face;
To Grandeur with his wise grimace;
To upstart Wealth's averted eye;
To supple office, low and high;
To crowded halls, to court and street,
To frozen hearts, and hasting feet,
To those who go, and those who come,
Good-bye, proud world, I'm going home.

I go to seek my own hearth-stone,
Bosomed in yon green hills alone;
A secret lodge in a pleasant land,
Whose grove the frolic fairies planned,
Where arches green, the livelong day,
Echo the blackbird's roundelay,
And evil men have never trod
A spot that is sacred to thought and God.

O, when I am safe in my sylvan home,
I mock at the pride of Greece and Rome;
And when I am stretched beneath the pines
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the love and pride of man,
At the sophist schools and the learned clan;
For what are they all in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet.

If I Saw It To Be My Duty.

It is related of Bishop Blomfield, that once when he was reproving one of his clergy for some bad conduct, he received as an excuse this reply, "My Lord, I never do it when on duty." "On duty," replied the bishop, "when is a clergyman ever off duty?" In like manner we may always ask each person, "When are you ever off duty?"

Brooks says, "A soul sincerely obedient will not pick and choose what commands to obey, and what to reject, as hypocrites do."

It is a mistake to decline abstaining from intoxicating drinks under the oft repeated excuse, "If I saw it to be my duty," for the following reasons:

I. It is a duty we owe to ourselves.

1. To secure our own safety. We shall be perfectly secure from [illegible]ences if we never use intoxicating drinks.

2. To avoid all appearance of [illegible]. It is our duty to shun the [illegible] of the destroyer. To avoid it [illegible] pass not by it.

[illegible] obedience is the practice [illegible] of the several graces [illegible] of Christianity, such as, "Whatsoever things are lovely [illegible] report," etc.

[illegible] to do evil,—learn to do [illegible]

[illegible] said, "I would rather [illegible] work miracles."

[illegible] is a duty to do the proper [illegible], and the proper thing is to [illegible]

[illegible] It is a duty we owe to our [illegible] or fall, depends upon whether we lift it up or pull it down.

Lord Nelson, on the eve of his great battle at Trafalgar, said, "England expects every man to do his duty."

Duties are ours, events are God's.

Make duty a matter of conscience.

Listen to the still small voice within.

Ask, "What wouldest Thou have me to do."

IV. It is a duty we owe to God.

Burkitt well says, "Look carefully that love to God, and obedience to his commands, be the principle and spring from whence thy actions flow; and that the glory of God, and the salvation of thy soul be the end to which all thy actions tend; and that the Word of God be thy rule and guide in every enterprise and undertaking."

All God's biddings are enablings.

Lord Peterborough, who was noted rather for his wit than for his piety, was so charmed with Fenelon's piety and beautiful life, that he said, after lodging with him a short time, "If I stay here any longer, I shall become a Christian in spite of myself."

V It is our duty to seek for light.

Our seeing a thing to be true does not make it true, though it increases our responsibility. But there are those to be met with in the world who "love darkness rather than light." What shall we say of such? "Is truth and duty to wait for their verdict?" No, for truth is truth, and duty is duty, apart from man's decision.

Truth does not depend upon our seeing it. It never varies, it is fixed and unalterable, like its Author, and, whether we see it or not, it remains "without variableness, or shadow of turning."

"Walk therefore in the light, whilst ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you."

Chrysostom compares prayer to a haven for shipwrecked mariners, an anchor to them that are sinking in the waves, a staff to the limbs that totter, a mine of jewels to the poor, a security to the rich, a healer of diseases, and a guardian of health. Do we look upon it thus? Is it our refuge, our anchor, our strong staff? What gift so rich, what power so great, what privilege so high! True prayer is the speech of the heart; the voice of the soul; it is the avenue by which our desires and longings reach the ears of the Most High.—The Criterion.

Twenty Years A Sufferer.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir:—Twenty years ago I was shipwrecked on the Atlantic Ocean, and the cold and exposure caused a large abscess to form on each leg, which kept continually discharging. After spending hundreds of dollars, with no benefit, I tried your "Golden Medical Discovery," and now, in less than three months after taking the first bottle, I am thankful to say I am completely cured, and for the first time in ten years can put my left heel to the ground. I am yours,

WILLIAM RYDER, 97 Jefferson St.
Buffalo, N. Y.

The Church must read. The circulation of our literature is an imperious necessity. Information is the parent of liberality and activity, and a protection against designing teachers. He who puts a paper in a household has done a service to that family of lasting good, and starts a tap-root of Methodism.—Richmond Advocate.

LONE JACK, Mo., Sept. 14, 1879.

I have been using Hop Bitters, and have received great benefit from them for liver complaints and malarial fever. They are superior to all other medicines.

P. M. BARNES.

Some one recently wrote a letter to Rev. Dr. Buckley, of New York, asking him if a member of the Methodist Church can conscientiously keep checker boards for sale in his place of business. Dr. Buckley at once answered as follows: "It depends largely on the kind of business he is in. If he is a butcher, or baker or candlestick-maker it would seem inconsistent to keep checker-boards for sale, as there is no connection between them and that kind of business."

"Dr. Benson's Pills for the cure of neuralgia are a success." Dr. G. P. Holman, Christiansburg, Va.

A decision of the second auditor of the treasury that the acceptance of positions in the civil service deprives persons on the retired list of the army of the latter honor and accompanying emoluments, affects Gen. Daniel E. Sickles equally with Col. Badeau, whose case invoked the ruling. General Sickles has been drawing $4,000 a year as brigadier general on the retired list since 1869, including the time he served as minister to Spain.

The upper Mississippi is rising rapidly.

Advertising Cheats!!

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

To induce people

To give them one trial, which so proves their value, that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation.

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along pining away all the time for years,

"The doctors doing her no good;

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about.

"Indeed! Indeed!

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we have shunned before using it."—The Parents.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable.

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters.—A Lady of Utica, N. Y.

Last year a temperance society was organized in the Congress of Protestant Episcopal church, the object being the enlistment of the ministers into action against drinking customs and the liquor influence. The society held its first anniversary in New York, when it was decided to raise $10,000 for carrying on the work the next year. A strong sentiment favorable to prohibition was manifested.

Guard and protect your health, make use of that true and efficient tonic medicine, Brown's Iron Bitters.

At a medical examination a young aspirant for a physician's diploma was asked, "When does mortification ensue?" "When you propose and are rejected," was the reply.

Sickly children and infants grow strong and ruddy under the use of Liebig Co's., Coca Beef Tonic.

Guiteau's miserable bones are not to be strung up in a glass case for crowds to gape at, after all. It was realized that the exhibition would be out of place in the government medical museum, and the surgeon-general has disposed of the skeleton, nobody knows how.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

USE THE

A WONDERFU[illegible]d

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, without distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON I. July 1st. JOSHUA, SUCCESSOR TO MOSES. (Joshua i, 1-9.)

The lesson applied, 1. The life of every one is bound up with that of his nation, he is a part of that, he can not separate himself from it. The history of Israel contains within it that of Moses and Joshua. 2. Each individual life has a bearing on the nation. 3. Each has his own sphere and work. 4. One succeeds another, Joshua succeeds Moses. 5. Each is appointed by his Maker to do a certain work. 6. To shrink from or falter in our work is wrong. 7. We are to strive to overcome defects of temperament training, and habit, and to cultivate elements of strong character, and firm confidence in God, 8. A proper use of God's law will make us wise unto salvation, and prove a corrective against despondency. 9. Jehovah has promised to be with those whom he appoints to serve him. 10. Workers die, but the work goes on.—Western.

Sister Martha Jenkins was among those killed by the great cyclone on the 22d of April. Sister Jenkins and her husband were at home spending the Sabbath in reading, when the muttering thunder and gathering clouds told them of approaching danger. When they found it necessary to leave the house as they saw it was moving everything before it, they started with their little boy to seek refuge behind a hill near the house, but so soon as they were out the wind carried them about 60 yards into a woods, where Sister Jenkins was found; she lived five hours and died. She leaves many mourners. L. O. CROWDER, P. C.

Walthal, Miss.

Last Saturday, May 19, the angel of God seemed to whisper to one of his servants that He would in a few moments call her to rest from many days of toil and labor. She called her brother and asked him to get ink and pen and write a letter to her parents, relatives and friends, as if the time was short. She was a member of Asbury Chapel, on this circuit, of known fidelity, and leaves three bright eyed little boys and a little girl, all of whom bid fair for a Christian life. She committed them to her brother and wished him to care for and rear them rightly in the fear of the Lord. The remains of Mary McFarland were brought here on Monday, and our chapel was crowded. Our Baptist brethren were represented. We marched to the place of interment, and consigned to the grave one whom we dearly loved.

Walk More, and Sleep Soundly.

Mr. JOHN W. COLE, Principal of the Gale School, Troy, N. Y., writes us:

TROY, N. Y., April 7, 1883.

"Having been afflicted for several years past with illness, the cause of which was unknown to me for a long time, and my continued disability getting to be of so serious and distressing a character as to cause great anxiety with my family and friends, I became satisfied upon close investigation that the cause of my sickness was the diseased condition of my kidneys and liver. At this time by accident a friend who had similar symptoms to mine informed me of the great improvement in his health by taking Hunt's Remedy, and persuaded me to try it. I immediately commenced taking it, and from the first bottle began to improve, and its continued use affords very encouraging results. I can sleep soundly, walk better, am free from pains, and the severe attacks of headache from which I suffered so much have disappeared, and I cheerfully recommend Hunt's remedy for all purposes for which it is advertised. I will add in closing that my wife has used it very successfully for preventing the attacks of sick headache with which she had been afflicted from youth."

Almost Disheartened.

A prominent citizen sends us the following statement:

"For several years I have been seriously afflicted with a severe pain in the back, which I long supposed to be lumbago or rheumatism of the back. More recently the pains had become more severe, so much so that it was with difficulty that I was able to get out of bed in the morning. I had tried various remedies without any apparent relief. By the earnest solicitations of a friend I commenced taking Hunt's Remedy, about three weeks ago, and its instantaneous benefits are wonderful, for I have had no pains in my back since taking the first three doses: and am relieved from the pains, aches, and exhaustive weakness, the painful symptoms that usually accompany disease of the kidneys. And I confidently expect to be completely and permanently cured by the use of it. I most cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all who are afflicted with any kidney or liver disease.

Uncle Sam's and Patent Rights.

Last week several uncrupulous Philadelphians attempted to sell on our streets some Cough Candy on which they had willfully neglected to put the U. S. Revenue Stamps. Of course, Uncle Sam speedily fined them and confiscated their stock. Yesterday another chap thought to fill his pockets with sundry change by trading on the wide-spread and well known reputation of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Armed with a goodly supply of his choicest "Honeyed Herb Drops," claiming them to be "prepared by Dr. Bull's original recipe," he takes his stand on one of the thouroughfares of our city, reasoning in this way: Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup sells always; everywhere, and to everybody; ergo, these "Honeyed Berb Drops," made from the recipe of Dr. Bull, will roll me up such a nice little fortune that—this illusory day-dream is suddenly ended by the appearance on the scene of the representatives of the genuine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Whereupon the fellow is compelled to beat a sudden retreat and to leave his spurious goods on the field. Moral.—Unscrupulous dealers, and venders of fraudulent imitations, will find it quite as dangerous to infringe the Patent Rights of Bull's Cough Syrup, as to break the Revenue Laws of Uncle Sam.—Baltimore, Md., Sun.

We can truly say that Dr. Holman's Liver Pad was the first article of the kind introduced to the public which has proved to be a radical cure for all malaria, chills, fever and dumb ague. Holman's Pad has a power to reach and regulate the liver and stomach that no other treatment possesses. Every day adds new testimony to the correctness of Dr. Holman's absorption theory. Most people take too much physic. Every dose of medicine taken into the stomach is a blind experiment. Try Holman's Pad, which is nature's way.

The President's new internal revenue commissioner has discovered that the country will not quietly submit to removals from office for mere partisan reasons, without regard to fitness or gratitude for faithful service of present incumbents. President Arthur has conferred with Mr. Evans, and it is reported, desires him to proceed with more discretion in the future.

We sometimes hear extravagant humanitarian talk from persons backed by a good salary. We know of some doing a grand humanitarian work on a meagre salary, where, with the most rigid economy, they hardly make ends meet. Some are noted for their talking qualities but talk is cheap. Would that men would talk less and work more.

The Agents' Herald, of Philadelphia, June number, republishes extracts from the speech of Hon. [illegible] W. Robertson, of Louisiana, on the suppression of lotteries, and under the heading "The Crescent City Robbers" gives the substance of a large number of letters received from persons who say they are the victims of the Louisiana and other lottery swindles.

If you belong to the Louisiana Conference, according to your positive [illegible], you are to devote the collection of that day to the building fund of the Gilbert-Haven School of Theology. Rev. Dr. Dean, President of the New Orleans University, is treasurer of that fund. Send the money to him, or place it in the hands of your presiding elder, taking his receipt for the

The decision of the Supreme Court of Alabama in a test case confirms the opinion that the framers of the new constitution intended to disqualify from voting those who have been convicted of even the smallest grades of petit larceny. The Mobile Gazette adds: The decision confirms, also, the opinion that it was a political trick to disfranchise poor men for committing petty offenses, who are sure to be convicted when accused of crime, while a State treasurer who steals two or three hundred dollars from the treasury, manages to avoid arrest and escape punishment."

The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The action of the Minneapolis presiding elders will prove to be quite harmless because of its extravagance. It reminds us of the darkey and his master who went out upon a deer hunt. They had reached the hunting ground and presently saw a big buck coming along by prodigious leaps. The darkey stood motionless, gun in hand. "Why don't you shoot, Pomp?" cried his master. "No need shootin' at dat ar dee', Massa; he jump so high he kill hisself," was the answer. Had they confined their action to the question of adding a year or two to the term of stay, it would have commanded much more favor."

We enjoy lively singing. Indeed spiritual songs form a source of great joy to our soul. We believe in singing with the spirit, but it must also be with the understanding. We sometimes hear sung in churches such unscriptural and unreasonable rhyming nonsense as the following:

Who are those people dressed in black?
It must be the hypocrites just turned back
I want to cross Jordan in that morning.

Who are those people dressed in blue?
It must be the mourners just come through
I want to cross Jordan in that morning.

Who are those people dressed in white?
It must be the children of the Israelite,
I want to cross Jordan in that morning.

Who are those people dressed in red?
It must be the multitude Jesus fed,
I want to cross Jordan in that morning.

If you want to dream the heavenly dreams
Just lay your head on Jordan's stream.
I want to cross Jordan in that morning.

Chorus—Cross me over; cross me over, etc.

Sometimes they sing such sacreligous strains as:

Eighteen hundred and sixty one;
Jesus sucking at the breast so young.
Eighteen hundred and sixty-two;
Christ done brought that mourner through
Eighteen hundred and sixty-three,
Christ done set the sinner free. etc.

Many more such songs, without any foundation in scripture or in reason, are sung in too many of our churches. The people should be taught better. We fear that too many preachers, who know better, indulge their people in this senseless singing because they are afraid to offend. Let the preachers fearlessly teach the people, and lead them out of this foolish and sacraligious singing.

The statistics report 2,800,000 Baptists in the world—of this number two million are in the United States. The great Methodist Ecumenical Council held in London two years ago represented over 5,000,000 Mothodists in the world; nearly four millions of whom are in the United States; an army which is influencing directly, not less than about 30,000,000 souls besides the innumerable multitude of past, present and coming generations, which no man can number. Skirmishers of Methodism, away out upon the outposts of Zion, take courage, you belong to a numerous, grand and glorious army.

Notes from Nashville.

The schools have all closed. The year has been a prosperous one, on the whole, for all the institutions of learning located in this city. The whites have first the Vanderbilt University, then the State Normal School, Montgomery Bell Academy, Dr. Ward's school, Cumberland Presbyterian, and Dr. Price's, Methodist, South—both for young ladies; two medical schools, two dental schools, one school of pharmacy, one law school, two Catholic schools, a high school of the city, and a good list of grammar and primary schools bring up the rear. The colored people have Roger Williams University, Baptist; Fisk University, Congregationalist; Central Tennessee College, Methodist Episcopal; the Meharry medical department of this latter college, and also the law and theological departments of the same institution. Then there is a good system of public schools, including the primary and grammar grades—no high school yet, owing to the fact that so few of the scholars reach this grade, and they cannot attend the high school for whites, as this is a violation of the laws of Tennessee, which requires that separate schools shall be maintained for white and colored children. Some of these schools for colored children have white teachers, while the others are supplied with colored teachers. Recently there has been a movement on the part of the colored people to secure colored teachers in all their schools. The grounds on which this was urged was that colored teachers could appreciate the circumstances of the children, have more sympathy, and socially be able to treat the children better, as well as give the colored teachers a chance for employment. Then, too, it is reported that certain white teachers are employed in the colored schools that would not be permitted to teach in the white schools. It is also reported that some of the white teachers in these schools give their scholars notice that they must not speak to them (the teachers) on the streets. This breach of the rules of the school is a punishable offense according to report. Teach who are ashamed to have their scholars recognize them in public, are not fit to have any such scholars to teach. The schools however are good, and good work is done in spite of these drawbacks

Children's day was observed here by our own church, and also by other churches. This day is evidently getting to be popular among the churches. It will do good if rightly used, but if it is to be an excuse for questionable innovations of removing the children still further from attendance on the regular services of the sanctuary, it will hardly prove to be a blessing. Our churches in this city have taken on themselves to improve. Spruce Street has finished the outside repairs required by the storm of three years ago, and now, with its beautiful iron fence, presents a very pleasant appearance. Our German brethren are making some improvement on their church property, which will add much to its convenience and appearance. Clark Chapel is undergoing thorough repairs; a new roof, frescoing the walls, and repainting the wood work, with the addition of belfry, costing about fifteen hundred dollars, will make it one of the pleasantest audience rooms in the city. East Nashville charge began in January to arrange for a new church, and have had the building so as to worship in it for some weeks. It is a neat frame, and when finished will cost about one thousand dollars. The old Slade Town church is to have the last service in it in its present positon next Sunday, July 1st. The pastor, Rev. Calvin Pickett, has raised enough money by his push and beg, with the donation of two hundred dollars (less the expense of getting it, which is from 5 to 10 per cent.), from the Church Extension Board, to let out the work of putting the walls and inclosing it, at a cost of fifteen hundred dollars. The building will cost when finished, as the pastor proposes, about three thousand dollars. It will seat between three and four hundred, and will be one of the best church buildings in the conference. Bro. Pickett secured the money for this, largely from a trip to the East, and he proposes to try again to secure enough to complete it. After this era of church building and repairing, may we not hope for a better spiritual condition of the membership and an increase of aggressive work on the hosts of sin? It may come after the picnic season is over, which is on us, and like the fashions, must be followed. So think pastors, superintendents and the scholars. It is strange that a crowded car on a hot day, if people are going out to enjoy themselves, is so productive of happiness, when if going on business the same side would be voted as an intolerable nuisance, and railroad officials would be rated soundly as utterly soulless. But picnics are fashionable.

National Education Assembly For 1883.

The National Education Assembly for 1883 is announced to meet at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, Aug. 9, 10, 11, 12. The conductor, the Rev. Dr. J. C. Hartzell, makes the following general announcement. A complete program will be published shortly.

The purpose of these annual Assemblies is to bring together upon the same platform, prominent representatives of popular education, irrespective of section, church or political party; to awaken and direct public sentiment in favor of enlarged National, State and Church efforts, for the education and elevation of the illiterate masses of our country.

Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania will preside at the first session, at which the opening address will be delivered by Gen. John Eaton, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

The chief subjects of discussion during the Assembly will be as follows:

This year for the first time, a conference will be held of Missionary teachers and preachers, who have labored in the South from the North since the war. An address of welcome will be delivered to them, and responsive addresses will be given by one from each of the great churches from which these laborers for the Master have gone.

Meridian District, Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR:—It has been a long time since I have had anything to say in your valuable paper. If you can spare the space, probably a synopsis of our work here would be accepted by your many readers. We are in the act of completing the second round on this district. Thus far we have seen and heard many things which tend to encourage, and we have been led to believe that our labor has not been a failure. This being our first year on this district we have moved along slow, this being necessary to become thoroughly acquainted with the work. The ministers are trying to prove true to their trust, and through their instrumentality the work is prospering. Some new churches have been built, old ones repaired, and the best of all, souls have been converted to God. Yet there is room for improvement. Too many of our official brethren fail to get disciplines, and the SOUTHWESTERN should be welcomed in their homes more than what it has been. To be without these great helps of the church is detrimental to the cause. God bless the SOUTHWESTERN in its new dress; may it have a larger cash subscription among the people everywhere.

Macon, Miss., June 26th 1883.

Charles T. Evans, in the New Orleans Advocate, Church South, has given, at the request of the editor, an interesting article on the murder of Rev. J. Lane Borden, at Mansfield, La. He says the indignation against the brothers Jenkins is very great and with little encouragement would overleap the restraints of the law. They are now in jail, committed without benefit of bail. The preliminary examination failed to elicit one word of evidence, except what comes from Ben. Jenkins, of the awful crime imputed to Mr. Borden: Says Mr. Evans: "I do not hesitate, after having heard much—all the testimony, some rumors, etc.—to declare my faith in his purity of act, speech and intention unaltered. I firmly believe he sleeps in a slandered grave a quiet and innocent sleep, and that before the courts of the land, as he does now before the bar of public opinion almost universally, he will stand unimpeached and unimpeachable."

Rev. William Moister in a book called "The West Indies: Enslaved and Free," and recently published in London, says: "Much however, yet remains to be done by the genuine friends of the African race before they can become independent of external help. The people of the West Indies must not be summarily and suddenly cast upon their own resources. What they have already done in the way of self-support in regard to their schools and natives churches amply illustrates their capabilities when fully developed. But they must be generously assisted by the Missionary Societies and the Christian philanthropists of England a little longer. More institutions must be established for the training of native ministers and teachers, weak stations must still be succoured, and a generous sympathy must still be extended towards a people who, in times past, have suffered so much at the hands of the white man."

G. W. Cowan, Robertsville circuit: "This is my third year and we are moving on with satisfaction. There has been 27 additions since last conference. I converted five from the Baptist Church (one a deacon another an ordained elder). There is only one Methodist Sunday-school on the work, but there are union schools. We are trying to establish our own schools wherever practicable. We are delighted with Elder Provine, and have paid his entire claim thus far. The people are well pleased with your good paper."

TEXAS.

G. Pleasant, Cedar Creek: "I will commence my protracted meeting July 5, on Allen Creek, twenty-six miles south of Austin. I hope to have the help of brethren near by, and I expect Revs. E. Nesbit and M. Lott. I want to have a grand time in the oaks. On June 1 the children and their teacher, Sister Hall, enjoyed themselves; they marched and had nice music."

W. H. Jackson, San Felipe. "Rev. S. Hardwell, of Richmond, was with us June 3, and preached three noble sermons. Collection $14 55. Seventeen joined on probation. Childrens' Day was a time of refreshing. There were the regular exercises, beautiful flags, sashes and a march, and a well supplied table. We are determined to do all we can for benevolent causes."

P. G. Brown, Fairfield: "After my return from conference and protracted illness of my family, I must tered up my shattered forces. There is a gain of four. The people seem to be waking up. The membership is small. Elder Ripetoe held the second quarterly meeting and preached a masterly sermon. Fairfield circuit will always remember him in her prayers."

W. H. Davis, Columbus: "I closed a protracted meeting a few weeks since, resulting in 30 conversions and many at the altar for prayer. Our church seems to be moving upward. The presiding elder held third quarterly conference. The people look to the close of the year with regret, when Elder Richardson shall be moved from them, as his presence and sermons are of much benefit. Ninety persons partook of the Lord's supper, and a collection of $15.55 was taken up. At night Rev. H. J. Davis, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, preached another good sermon. The collection was $6. We expect to repaint our church and build a belfry in the fall."

W. McKenzie, Cold Springs: "During a visit to my family at Montgomery, Bro. Adair asked me to help him. He is getting on well. Ten were added. There is a good membership under Bro. Adair."

MISSISSIPPI.

O. Tolson, Hickory: "Elder Williams held quarterly conference and administered sacrament to about 30. The work has greatly improved. We trust to God to aid us in saving souls. Raised for pastor $50.05; presiding elder, $7; Bishop, $1. Sunday-schools are better than ever before, with an attendance of about 145, and are four in number. Children's day was observed; collection, $2. We are trying to raise money enough to rebuild, as our edifice was burned down some time ago. We have a rude one to worship in until we can build again."

J. J. Garrett, Forest: "On Childrens' Day the church was decorated with choicest flowers. There were readings and recitations by the little ones. When collection was called we received $3. All well satisfied. In Sunday-school are 150 children."

A Missionary Movement of the Ethiopian Host of the South.

BY E. M. COLLET, OF NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR:—Will you permit me to speak a few words through your paper to my brethren throughout the South upon the subject of Missions. I have thought much upon the subject, and cannot rest until I publish my thoughts to the world; and I do not feel that these are my thoughts, but that they were given me by the Holy Ghost. Before beginning to write this article I bowed before the Lord, and asked the assistance of the Holy Ghost in the controlling of my thoughts, and the guidance of my pen on this important subject. There are several reasons why the Ethiopian or Negro race ought to be the greatest missionaries in the world.

First, because they have been cast off from God for at least forty centuries, and have been the common spoil of all nations upon the face of the globe. It is said that fifty millions of them have been brought from their father-land and enslaved by other nations.

Secondly, God has undertaken to raise them up from woe, degradation, and shame, into the sunlight of heaven. "Ethiopia shall yet stretch out her hand unto the Lord." I like the expression of Dr. Watts, "Ethiopia shall make haste to lay down presents at His feet."

Thirdly, we owe it to God, to ourselves, the church, and to generations unborn. The church has poured out thousands of dollars for us, in building churches, schools, seminaries, and colleges, here and there a lighthouse has been reared where we can receive instruction. And I might add because it pleased God to start this great missionary movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, through the instrumentality of an ignorant Negro, which has been the means of quickening the step of the whole Christian church throughout the civilized world.

Fourthly, God calls upon us, as well as other nations to help subject the world to Christ. "Who will come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty?" So why not we take a great part in gaining the victory over sin, death, and hell, and when the general roll is called we will be glad to answer to our names. When we consider the great missionary work now going on we are stirred to jealousy. Well might we say, "arm me with jealous care as in thy sight to love." What can be done in order to awaken ourselves and people to this important work? I suggest that there ought to be almost an independent movement among us. For this reason, our people think that this great work belongs to the white man, and that we are only thrown in for good measure. We talk about our great missionary work at the North; brethren I am tired and sick of this, we read in the newspapers of the great missionary meetings in New York, Boston, and elsewhere at the North, but what are we doing in the South? We meet once a year in our annual conferences and hold a missionary anniversary, and that is about all of it practically speaking, in the way of missionary meetings. What can we do? I have thought that each annual conference ought to appoint a delegation to meet in Atlanta, Ga., or Nashville, Tenn., for the purpose of organizing a Missionary Society auxiliary to the parent society at New York. With this end in view, that we will raise a certain amount of money per annum to aid in planting a successful mission in Central Africa, the balance being turned over to parent board to be disposed according to its wisdom. Said delegation should make headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., or Nashville, Tenn. It should provide that each annual conference should be organized into a missionary society, auxiliary to the said parent society at Atlanta, or Nashville. And each conference should require each pastor to organize each of his societies into a missionary society. Then let each society hold missionary meetings and concerts monthly, quarterly, semiannually or annually, or as the case may be. And lyceums should be formed, and missionary tracts, magazines, and charts should be placed in each society; and they should have monthly meetings of recitations, talks, readings, essays, &c., upon the subject of missions. And this would kindle a holy fire thoroughout the church, and our sons and daughters would grow up with a missionary spirit to reach forth to the ends of the earth, and bring all nations to the feet of our blessed Redeemer. Of course provisions should be made that said society should not interfere with the parent society at New York, or our annual collections laid down in our discipline. But I am ready to say that such a movement would double our annual collections. Some one may think that I want to narrow the minds of our people down to Africa alone, be it far from me, that is not the idea; their minds are too little and pent up now, and I want to make known to them all the world and its conditions, then they will have a greater love, and a higher thought about God and his cause than ever before. But I think it nothing wrong that we have some special thought about Africa, our fatherland. A permanent mission planted in Central Africa would act like a stone cast into a pool, which throws the ripples to the banks in every direction. "Africa has a race Prometheus—bound upon the altar of the world's avarice, with a vulture tearing away at its heart. And students of the Bible and of providence have come to think of the question as one of the greatest moral and governmental mysteries in the divine administration," says Dr. I. G. Bidwell: also infidels point at Africa and say if the God of the Bibles lives let him explain the mystery of Africa accursed; and Christians have only been able to put their hands upon their mouths and cry: "Holy! holy, Lord God of hosts, truly and righteous, doth thou not judge and avenge the blood of Africa on them that dwell upon the earth?"

I only wish to give a few hints how we should raise money, First, let $10 paid down at any one time constitute a life member of this society. For the yearly payment let each pastor take a subscription throughout all his work headed with his own autograph. When I delivered a missionary address in St. Mathew, in this city a few days ago, setting forth the plans of this organization, one of the prominent members of that church came to me before I left the altar and took me by the hand and said: "Go a head and get up this organization, and I will pay from five to ten dollars a year to it," and he is only one out of hundreds that would thus do if we were thus organized. And we might get our women to give a hen and her increase to this cause. Last year three poor sisters paid me $5 15 missionary money from three hens, ten thousand hens like these would make a grand showing; those that could not do this, let them give a row of cotton, corn, potatoes, &c. Before writing this article I talked this question over with all the presiding elders of this conference and they favored such a movement. Rev. W. W. Morgan suggested that these ideas be published so that each conference could act upon the subject at the next session. I hope to hear from our brethren from various conferences through the public press as to what they think about this question.

The Progress of the Freedmen.

BY REV. J. C. HARTZELL, D.D.

The progress of the Negroes of America since their emancipation has been marvelous. They came out of slavery poor in body, mind and soul. Their bodies were cursed with generations of degradation—not of labor, for that if followed as it should be, is ennobling—but of unnatural labor, where every refinement of taste and habit were sacrificed, to the demand for muscular endurance. Their minds were cursed with generations of enforced ignorance. Their souls,—those inner sanctuaries of human instinct and purity, where dwells the image of God, and out of which flows the holiest and best forces of life—even these had by generations of cruel bondage been belittled in capacity and warped in sentiment, and lowered in instinct, until in not a few respects, the distinctions between right and wrong, were lost sight of in practical life. To the Negro in slavery, true marriage, except at the will of the master, was unknown. Among the masses the Negro slave woman was taught that for her there was no virtue. Her mission in slavery was to propagate her species for the auction block! And this in Christian America for two hundred and fifty years!

To understand anything of the progress of this race since emancipation, we must look into the awful depth of the moral state in which freedom found them. I do not forget the work of Christian missionaries among the slaves of the South; much good was done by them, but only the few comparatively were reached, and with even these the fundamental laws of virtue were subject to the accidents of the master's whims or necessities respecting his property.

With only a few individual or family exceptions in a neighborhood, the great body of the Negroes came out of slavery absolutely penniless, and with scarcely enough rags to cover their nakedness; with every influence of the church, and state, and commerce and social life about them, opposed to their freedom, and determined that if not slaves, their future of right ought to be and must be one of dependent subserviency to the white race.

They were given the ballot in the midst of their ignorance and poverty and expected to stand with their few "carpet-bag" and "scalawag" friends, for the maintenance of the national authority in the South, against the combined wisdom, wealth, and statesmanship of was a few years before a mighty what confederacy. Failing in this, as was inevitable, their former masters scorned them the more, the General Government forsook them, and the whole nation questioned their capacity for heroism or devotion to principle.

Whatever progress the freedmen have made has been chiefly because of the splendid qualities they possess, in spite not only of what slavery could do, but in spite also of many great disadvantages since freedom.

Whatever helps have come to them they have laid hold of with tremendous faith and tenacity. Go into the schools established by northern benevolence all over the South. In them to-day are more than 20,000 young Negro men and women. Nearly all these are there by their own exertions, or by those of their parents or relatives as poor as themselves. They are climbing up into the higher realms of learning. The silver tones of their orators, and the enchanting music of their songsters, are heard in all that Southland; their botanists are in the fields; their mathmaticians are communing with Newton; their metaphysicians are mastering Hamilton. Leaving these schools their young men are entering the pulpit, are on the rostrum and in the school-room; and they are there to lead, and their young women are teaching or becoming wives of men worthy of them, and doing their part in building up Christian homes.

Go into the public schools of the South. Eight hundred thousand Negro boys and girls are there. One hour in any such school sweeps to the winds all the pro-slavery theories about the Negro's capacity to learn. A vast proportion are yet but little beyond where freedom found them, but that so many should have advanced at all, and that so large a proportion of those who have advanced should have gone so far is simply marvelous. Where the best are to-day, the great majority will be in the near future.

They are acquring much in the fields of mechanical skill and activity, and in the self-respect and independence which these bring. In many portions of the South they are the carpenters and the bricklayers and blacksmiths. They are the engineers and headmen on multitudes of the smaller plantations, and on some of the larger ones. They are gaining property. They own $15,000,000 in Louisiana. They pay taxes on $5[illegible]0,000 of property in Atlanta, Georgia, and in that whole State they own probably $10,0[illegible],000. That means nearly $100,000,000 in property f r the Negroes of the South, acquired mostly since the war. That is not much for 6,500,000 of people, but is a good beginning.

The Negro is improving morally. Go to their churches all over the South, and with the eye and heart and common sense of a friend and philanthropist, study their work in church-building, Sunday-school organization and at administering discipline. For thirteen years I have studied these people in every part of the South, and seen them in their cabins and in their best and poorest churches; and studied their weaknesses and follies and successes, and if I knew anything of human nature, or of human progress, I must say that vast multitudes of the Negroes of the South to-day are leading virtuous and Christian lives, and that those under the lead of a fair proportion of their ministry, are powerfully leavening the whole mass. For whatever the Negro in America is to-day, in morals or poverty or ignorance, the white people of the nation are largely responsible. Slavery is gone with its accursed effects. Let now the whole nation do for the Negro as a freeman, just what ought to be done for him, in sympathy and helpfulness, as if he was a white man in our midst and as needy, and another generation or two will see the Africo-American in our midst an assimilated part of American enterprise, thought and success.

Letter From Baton Rouge.

MR. EDITOR:—The Home Missionary Society is increasing wonderfully. At the quarterly session of the 5th, at the City Hall, the place we occupied from April 2d to June 10th, for church services, was filled. Mother Hester Williams presided, and very many joined Presiding elder Landry, who is serving us both in the capacity presiding elder and builder, favored us with one of the most instructive addresses upon the subject of woman's missionary work, that we have had the pleasure of hearing for many days. The reports showed the great work of charity that the society is doing in relieving the needy, sick, and poor, especially the poor orphans. The school under the auspices of this organization is largely attended and is prosperous. On the first of March an organization of the Look Up Legion society, was perfected with the following officers: William Harrington, Emma Harrington; Rosa Kenedy, Secretary. It numbers about thirty, and still they come. This organization and the Sunday-school have taken upon themselves to raise the fund to build the steeple of the new church which is to be completed at a cost of $350. Last Sunday, June 10, was Childr[illegible]ns' Day; but the exercises had to be confined to the morning hours owing to the fact that the day was set apart for a grand union meeting, and the laying of the corner stone of our new Wesley Chapel which promises to be the prettiest church in Lousiana conference. At any rate we think so. At 11 a. m., the services were opened by Rev. A. M. Green, of New Orleans, who preached an excellent sermon. We had also the presence of Revs. Hudson, Samuel Davage, Elder Dale, H. O. Abbott, of Rosedale; Rogers, of the Plains. Each in his turn preached a powerful sermon, and at the conclusion of each a collection was taken up. Elder Dale preached the closing sermon and collected $103—Total $203 for the day. At three o'clock p. m., the corner stone was laid with imposing ceremonies, in the presence of nearly 1000 people, Our pastor Rev. Andrew Jackson officiating, assisted by Elders Landry, and Dale, and Revs. Green, Hudson, Davage, and Abbott. At 7 p. m., Elder Davage preached in one of his most happy moods to an audiance of an immense size and took up $35. Bro. Jackson is the beloved of all with whom he comes in contact. We are in hopes soon to occupy the auditorium of our new church. Elder Landry, as builder, thinks that about the month of August we will go up stairs. We ask an interest in your prayers. FANNIE C. ROBINSON.

The Drunkard's Ten Commandments.

I believe in the existence of one Mr. Alcohol, the great head and chief of all manner of vice; the source of nine-tenths of all diseases; and not only believe but am sure that when money is gone and spent the landlord will stop the tap and turn me out.

I have ten commandments to keep, the same which the landlords take in the bar, saying, "We are the master and mistress who brought thee out of the path of virtue, placed thee in ways of vice, and set thy feet on the road which leads to misery, starvation and everlasting destruction.

1. Thou shalt use no other house but mine.

2. Thou shalt not make to thyself any substitute for intoxicating drink—such as tea, coffee, ginger-pop, and lemonade, for I am a jealous man, wearing the coat that should be on thy back, eating thy children's bread, and pocketing the money which should make thee and thy wife happier all the days of thy life.

3. Thou shalt not use my house in vain.

4. Remember that thou eat but one meal on the Sabbath. Six days shalt thou drink and spend all thy money, but the seventh day is the Sabbath day wherein I wash my floors, mind my fires and make ready for my company the remaining part of the week.

5. Thou shalt honor landlords, the landladies and the gin shops with thy presence, that thy days may be few and miserable in the land wherein thou dwellest.

6. Thou shalt commit murder by starving and beating thy wife and children.

7. Thou shalt commit self-destruction.

8. Thou shalt sell thy wife's and childrens' bread and rob thyself of all thy comforts.

9. Thou shalt bear false witness when thou speaketh of the horrors, saying thou art in good health when laboring under the barrel fever.

10. Thou shalt covet all thy neighbor is possessed of; thou shalt covet his house, his purse, his wealth and all that he has got, that thou mayest indulge in drunkenness and help the brewer to buy a new coach and a pair of fine horses, a new dray and a fine building, that he may live in idleness all his days; likewise to enable the landlord or the landladies to set back and scorn you as you walk the streets. From San Antonio District.

MR. EDITOR.—On the 8th inst., the evening southbound train, I. and G. N. R. R., brought me to San Antonio. The next morning I was left by not knowing that the schedule on the G. H. and S. A Railway had been changed; so I remained over till the 4:45 mixed train pulled out to bring me to Seguin. On boarding the train at the depot in San Antonio, I unexpectedly enconntered one of those unpleasant scenes which ought to make true civilization blush. As I had purchased my ticket I went aboard, but had not been in my seat one minute before Mr. Coy Spangle, conductor, addressed me in the genuine vernacular of the day, with the "other coach, old man!" I replied that I was comfortably seated. "But the other coach is for colored people." "I am satisfied where I am, sir." "You shall not ride in this coach, I will show you that you shall not; the company backs me in what I do." "All right, sir, I am a patron of the company, and certainly it will not exact first-class fare of me, then force me into the smoking car. I neither smoke nor chew tobacco, it is both offensive and injurious to me." "I don't care, you shall not in here." "I am a minister of the gospel, and will treat my fellow passengers with good behavior." A police officer, standing by, said: "It is best for you to do as he says to avoid trouble, he is the conductor, and the company backs him in what he does." "All right, sir, I have promised to be a good man and citizen; whenever I fail to be, it will be time enough for you; I will behave myself as well as any one aboard this train, or that ever travels this road." The conductor turned from me, blinded by prejudice and bursting with rage, said in a threatening tone, "I run this thing and will show you." While he went in the direction of the telegraph office, thence to the ticket office, I glanced briefly over the passengers, to read if possible, what might be their feelings toward me, but I could see nothing of a dissatisfactory nature towards me, only some ladies seemed anxious as to what would follow. The conductor, about half-way between the ticket office and the train, said in an angry tone, "If you say out this box out and not carry it through, I will do it." I neither saw nor heard the voice of the person he feigned to have addressed. Now, dear sir, it is plain to be seen that this persecution is not against my color, but against my manhood. When ignorant and poorly clad servants to white people are welcomed, and even assisted by the brakesmen or conductors, either to embark or disembark, what can it be then, but an unholy persecution and a disparagment of my manhood? The G. H. and S. A. R. R., and also the Houston and Texas Central, proves to be worse than any of the others in Texas. On these there are exceptions, for some of the conductors permit decently dressed Negroes into the first-class coaches. If possible, these gentlemen—I mean conductors and brakesmen—are under no particular direction in this matter, therefore the Negro is at their caprice. Certainly, there is no one benefited by this wicked persecution of the Negro; and surely it ought to be far beneath the sense and dignity of these presidents and managers to force colored people to pay first-class fare and compel them to ride in the smoking car, regardless of their standing or health. I hardly ever ride on either of the above named roads without paying extra to gain back my lost health from inhaling unhealthful tobacco smoke. Our excellent Governor said in his recommendations to the last legislature, among many other statesmanlike recommendations, "Let there not be any unjust discrimination on the railroads in Texas." Is there not enough patriotism and magnanimity in the executives of a state to be true to its law abiding citizens? O Lord, how long! I got through to Seguin safe without further outrage, but did not reach Mt. Pleasant till Sunday morning at 8:30. Bro. Mosby had held the conference at the appointed time (Saturday evening, 3 p. m.) The church here has been in a cold state all the year; whatever it intends to do this year for the Master, it must do between now and conference. The first part of the year has been spent in accusing, or else excusing, each other; and many of them have whipped themselves to a frassle with going to law. The law is good, so is a razor, but it is a dangerous weapon to put in the hands of a child. 13th and 14th, found us at Stevenson's Colony. The work is in poor condition, the pastor, D. W. Tucker, was not present, and but few of the brethren. The 16th and 17th was spent at Stockdale. The pastor J. T. Gibbon's wife is lying at the point, likely to die, he could not be present. The doctors have given her up, both at San Antonio and here; we are sorry for Bro. Gibbons. Many of the brethren got out to the quarterly meeting, one hour after it was over, feigning to be very much astonished, but we fear their astonishment will be manifolded when they get to heaven; and see and recieve their slim rewards. Bro. Gibbons stated the precarious condition of his suffering wife, at 11 o'clock service, but he had rassled with the Lord for her soul's salvation, and that his prayer had been answered, at 12 o'clock on last Saturday night the 16th; and asked prayers of the church that the Lord would grant unto this new babe in Christ Jesus more strength; and prayer was offered for that blessing. I had been asked to deliver an address on the 18th anniversary of the colored people's emancipation at San Antonio, on the 19th, but as the weather continued hot and dry I could not undertake the long dusty road that separated me from San Antonio. Being in seventeen miles of Riddleville, my next point to visit, I contented myself with what might be enjoyed here, on that auspicious occassion. Being elected president for the day, I had the profound pleasure of introducing Prof. S. M. Coles, late of Yale, who read the 13th 14th and 15th amendments, and he gave a brief outline of the same. Rev. M. Thompson followed in an half hour's speech, next Rev. J. W. Strong entertained the audiance with an able effort. Prof. J. R. S. Hollowell, of Straight University, N. O., prepared a very interesting speech, and delivered it from manuscript; it was listened to with rapt attention throughout. I wish our young orators would divest themselves of the false notion that it was not the "intention of Abraham Linclon to free the slaves." What time I did not spend in my constant leaps for freedom, I served in the most equitable circles of Southern learne daristocracy, and their discussions were always that President Lincoln, was up to freeing their "niggers." All the Southern orators ever I listened to accused Mr. Lincoln of it; till sometime after the slavery was abolished, many of the negro vote catchers fabricated this story, and inserted it into the pages of Southern oratory; and alas! some of our colored brethren are falling fast into the same error. It must not be forgotten that Mr. Lincoln, was the nominee, and standard bearer of the anti-slavery party. If these were not matters of history I should blush to be the first to mention them. The day past off delightfully, not a word, or act marred the happiness of the hours. White and black met at the same table to satisfy their appetites, which were amply provided for. Miss M. M. Vaughan gave a good exhibition at night; the whole gave entire satisfaction to all. Her school headed the long procession, to the festive ground and furnished music for the day, as we had no other. The school closed its five months term and exhibition for the school to-night, on the 22d. Great advance has been made. The quarterly conference met at 3 p. m., June 23d, it was wellat tended. Sunday 24, the Sunday-school well attended. Miss M. M. Vaughan had organized a temperance Band of Hope here, and there are 54 members with officers, etc. We lectured to them on temperance at 11 a. m., meetings interesting throughout. Take the collections, brethren, five months more brings us together at conference. M. HENSON, 6124.

On the whole, I would bid you stand up to your work, whatever it may be, and not be afraid of: it not in sorrow or contradiction to yield, but pushing on towards the goal. And don't suppose that people are hostile to you in the world. You will rarely find anybody designedly doing you ill. You may feel often as if the whole world is obstructing you, more or less, but you will find that to be because the world is traveling in a different way from you, and rushing on its own path. —Thomas Carlyle.

Young Folks' Corner

A Little Gentleman.

BY M. E. SANGSTER.

His cap is old, but his hair is gold,
And his face is clear as the sky;
And whoever he meets, in lanes or streets,
He looks him straight in the eye,
With a fearless pride that has naught to hide,
Though he bows like a little knight,
Quite debonair, to a lady fair,
With a smile that is swift as light.

Does his mother call? Not kite, or ball'
Or the prettiest game, can stay
His eager feet as he hastes to greet
Whatever she means to say;
As the teacher depends on the little friend
At school in his place at nine,
With his lessons learned and his good mark earned,
All ready to toe the line.

I wonder if you have seen him too
This boy, who is not too big
For a morning kiss from mother and sis,
Who ain't a bit of a prig;
But gentle and strong, and the whole day long,
As merry as boy can be,
A gentleman, dears, in the coming years,
And at present the boy for me.

Jerry's New Pantaloons.

When Jerry was six years old he began to go to school. Towards the end of the school term the teacher wished to have an exhibition. All the scholars were to learn pieces to speak. Jerry's mother found some verses beginning—

"Twinkle, twinkle little star,
How I wonder what you are."

Jerry thought these verses were very nice, and with his mother's help he soon learned them. She taught him how to make a bow, and to point up to heaven when he said "star," and to wave his hand over his head when he said "Up above the world so high." After some practice, she thought he made these motions very prettily.

Jerry's best pantaloons were old and patched. He must have a new pair to speak in; but the stores were far away, and money was very scarce. After searching for something to make them of his mother used a large check apron she prized very much, and wore only on holidays. Some of my readers would have smiled if they had seen Jerry dressed in his long blue and white check pantaloons, check shirt and heavy shoes. He thought he looked very fine. He could not help admiring himself; in fact, he thought too much about his new pantaloons.

On the evening of the exhibition the school room was crowded. It had been dressed with wild flowers and grasses. A great many tallow candles burned in bright tin candlesticks. The children thought it looked very grand. When it was Jerry's turn to speak he stepped boldly upon the stage and made his bow. His father and mother leaned forward, so that they could see him better. Alas, his thoughts were on his new pantaloons, so that he had forgotten all about the "little twinkling star." But he was not afraid, and after looking all around he began in a loud, distinct voice:

"I have got on a new pair of pantaloons." Putting his hands into his pockets, he went on: "My mother made them out of her new apron my aunt Salina sent frow New York, where you can buy lots and l-o-t-s of nice things; for in New York they have g-r-e-a-t big stores. Some day I shall go there, for I think that new pantaloons are—"

But he did not have time to tell what he thought. The teacher got upon the stage, and, to the relief of his parents, hurried him to a seat. The farmer lads had greatly enjoyed his speech, and, clapping their hands, gave a hurrah for "Jerry's new pantaloons."—Our Little Ones.

The catalogue of Rust University, now before us, is a typographical beauty.

How would you like to live in a grave-yard? Probably you would not like it at all; but we know of a good brother and his family who are now living in a grave-yard. They are not disturbed by that fact, however, for they seem as happy as merry June bugs. Verily, godliness with contentment is a great gain.

We take great pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to an article in another column, by Rev. Dr. J. C. Hartzell, on "The Progress of the Freedmen." It is an able and graphic delineation of the Negro's progress, by one who has been intimately connected with them in all the stages of their advancement since the war.

That school teacher who teaches private school in one of our churches, and who sometimes forgets his pipe on the pulpit in that church, should either throw his dirty pipe away, stop preaching there or anywhere else, or quit bringing his pipe to the church to lay it upon the [illegible] Bible on the pulpit. Assurance.

Assurance is the persuasion or confidence which a Christian has that he is a child of God. It comes as the joint testimony of the Holy Spirit, with our own spirit. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God. In no instance in the Bible is the distinct work of the Holy Spirit more clearly stated. It is not to the relation but to the fact of the relation that he witnesses, it is subsequent to the relation, and distinct from it. This is not the work of regeneration, nor is it the fruit of that work, but a distinct and immediate testimony to the soul of its acceptance with God. "And because ye are sons God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts crying Abba Father." Mark this, "Because ye are sons," because of the relationship, comes the testimony. "Ye are sons:" here is the the relation. "God has sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts crying Abba Father," here is the testimony. This is not regeneration, nor the fruits of regeneration, nor a special revelation, but an immediate impression produced by the spirit that we are the sons of God. Here we have the witness of the Holy Spirit with ours that we are the children of God, which is nothing less nor more than assurance. We suppose that our own spirit derives its testimony of our adoption from a comparison of our experience and life with the word of God. In the Bible a number of things are spoken of as characteristic of the children of God. The children of God love him, and this is an affection of which the mind is conscious. We know when we love and whom we love. Love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God. A consciousness of this love brings the assurance that we are born of God, and hence the children of God. The children of God are obedient to His will. "Ye are my frends if ye do whatever I command you." "If ye love me keep my commandments." This is a test and the child of the Lord will carefully, and prayerfully study the word of God to make it the rule of his life. "He that saith I know him and keepeth not his commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." "But whoso keepeth his word in him verily in the love of God perfected, hereby know we that we are in him." Carefully and closely will he search his own conduct to see if it conforms to this rule. The children of God love one another. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one for another," and "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." Now when one finds this love in his own experience he has an assurance that God dwells in in him, and that he is a child of God. This state of assurance is desirable because of the strength it imparts. Doubt always produces a wavering and unstable walk. Assurance helps to answer a thousand questions about which the doubting Christianis constantly troubled. The one great reason why so many Christians seem to be inconsistent, sort of half and half in the service of the Lord, is they have knowledge of their acceptance with God, they are weak. Assurance gives strength. Bishop Latimer used to say, "When I live in a settled and steadfast assurance about the state of my soul I am as bold as a lion, I can laugh at all trouble, no affliction daunts me." His soul was not vexed with doubts. Assurance gave him peace, made him fervent, constant and abundant, in the work of the Lord. An assured Christian will put his hand to any work of the Lord, and his neck to any yoke for Christ. The individual who "can read his title clear to mansions in the skies" will certainly accomplish the most for God. Men who are loose from Christ are loose from the point of duty, their lack of assurance is discovered in the unevenness of their work. Assurance is worth seeking, it is worth having.

Church Work in the City.

Times and seasons with their experiences have much to do with the life's work of a Methodist minister. All things here are not equal. The world is full of inequalities, and but little work is remunerated in this world. In fact for most of our best work the reward is necessarily postponed. It is nevertheless sure to come. Christ had to wait for his. Bro. Marshall at Mt. Zion is doing solid work. Two years ago this church was a mere shell with over four thousand dollars debt upon it. That debt has been nearly all canceled and the vestry nicely finished, and this furnishes one of the most attractive audience rooms in the city. The congregations are large, the Sunday-school is constantly increasing. Sabbath, June 17th, was given to the Trustees as a special day, and nearly one hundred dollars was raised towards paying the last debt. Think of it, brethren, Mt. Zion is delivered and is now beautiful for situation. Any good minister may count it a joy to have the Bishop appoint him to so good a charge. Bro. Marshall believes in God, in man, and hard work, and it is certain that he loves all three. His reward may be postponed but it is sure to come. It is hardly possible to find two men just alike, one will most always lack something the other has. Most every man has something peculiar in his make-up and this becomes an element of strength, or of weakness.

Bro. Johnson at Camp Parapet is a living man, he is gathering and holding the people. We know of no pastor who is more popular and beloved by his people. At the last quarterly conference the stewards, report showed the pastor presiding elder, sexton etc., all paid up to date. The trustees had money in hand for the erection of a bell tower. The class reports were as follows, No. 1, $7.95, No. 2, $10,85 NO. 3, $12.80 and a pound party of $7.40, No. 4, $3.65, No. 5, $7.55. The pastor in his report said that the stewards had anticipated all of his wants, he had not asked them for a single nickle. Well done for our brethren at Camp Parapet. Methodism is putting on strength every week. Simpson chapel is coming up out of the wilderness, and putting on her beautiful garments. At the last quarterly conference Bro. Jackson reported a state of perfect harmony and great religious prosperity, nearly seventy have been converted to God and received on probation. One new class has been organized. The class collections were nearly double any former quarter. The report of the stewards showed the pastor, presiding elder, sexton etc., all paid and one hundred and fifty dollars on hand to be applied on their church debt. All the affairs on this charge seem to be rising. Sixth street is joyous and happy, and well they may be. Three times have they purchased the property they now own, and twice through the bad management, management that indicated a great lack of Christian honesty, they have lost the church. Some three or four years ago the church was bought for the third time, Bishop Peck sent Bro. Dyer there with an earnest hope that through him the church might be saved; he soon became satisfied that night dreaming could not take the place of day work, and that he could not have much assistance from A B and C outside his own congregation; he felt that if ever Sixth Street was saved the people of Sixth Street must do it. And they are of the right sort, they now have to do, and seem to take delight in doing, and every effort small or great had God's blessing on it, till at the last quarterly conference the pastor reported the last dollar paid, and the church saved and everybody joyous and happy. In the meantime the congregation has so increased that an enlargement of the church has become a necessity, and an architect has been employed to draw plans for enlarging and remodeling the house so as to make it one of the most pleasant and attractive houses in the city. The people are all alive for this work. They are not of the sort who have nickels for God and dollars for themselves. May God bless and multiply them a hundredfold.

We know of no church more pleasantly situated than our brethren at Clinton Street. They have a valuable property, a nice church and parsonage and no debts. They are a good sort of people and never give their pastor or the presiding elder a stone for bread. The Sunday-school is strong and full of life. At the last quarterly conference all the reports were in perfect order. There are no class leaders on the disrict who present a better report than those of Clinton Street. Then the report of the stewards showed the current expenses all paid. Brother King is on his second year, beloved and respected by his people, and is doing good work for the church.

First Street is doubtless the strongest church on the district, has the largest membership, the largest congregation and Sunday-school, and is moving on harmoniously, with great strength. Many of the members of the church and congregation own their homes, and are in comfortable circumstances. The reports at the quarterly conference are always in order, and improvements are constantly going on. The old fence that has for so many years surrounded the church is to be removed and a new one made of iron is to take its place. The First Street people are of a good Methodist type. Bro. Montgomery, their pastor, is abundant in labors, his every day is in accord with the pure gospel he preaches. He is respected by all his people.

Hanes Chapel is the property our Plum Street brethren bought of the Germans of the M. E. Church South, and is situated at the corner of Jefferson and Plum, streets in Carrollton. It is a valuable property and well located for the accommodation of the people. The congregation has nearly doubled since they moved into the church, the Sunday-school has over ninety scholars enrolled with an average attendance of over sixty. Bro. Mason is an active workingman to whom good things come easy; one of the best workers in the temperance cause we have in the city. We cannot restrain ourselves from going ahead a few years and looking at the strong church and congregation that is sure to be gathered here. We have in this church some good people, and we think their possibilities for the future are of the largest kind.

We have heard the question as applied to Ames' "Watchman, what of the night?" many times, and this has always been our answer, "The morning cometh." At the last quarterly conference the reports of the pastor, Sunday-school superintendent and stewards, were encouraging. Just now many of our people are out of the city, but the congregation holds up, and Bro. Vaughan holds on and stands by his guns. We are no stickler for tremendous demonstrations, but we do believe with all our heart in the almightiness of the Holy Ghost and would like to have Penticost re-enacted at Ames. To some here in New Orleans it would be an awful moment, but to the pastor at Ames it would be a gala day. The outlook for the year is full of promise. What we need is to have all of our people take strong hold of the notion that it is a great privilege and honor to work for Jesus, and there get the baptism of the Holy Ghost upon them and there will be no doubt as to their success. Just here this pencil that has traveled hundreds of miles calls a halt, just craving benedictions upon each member of the churches herein referred to.

Mob Law in Avoyelles.

Vigilance committees, Regulators, and other unlawful bands of armed men continue to scour the whole parish of Avoyelles; threatening, whipping, killing, or driving out of the parish such persons an may be suspected or found guilty of crime, or of such things as might be distasteful to the Regulators. The excuse for the existonce of such unlawful and revolutionary organizations is, that the perpetrators of petty crimes, chicken thieves and the like, can be detected and punished effectively in no other way. What a fearful commentary upon local home goverument, as exercised by that class and party, which distinctively and presumptuously style themselves "We, the people." We have positive and reliable information of the whipping and driving out of that parish, of several men, recently. These unlawful organizations flourish right in and around Marksville, under the very shadow of the courthouse and jail, and instead of being crushed out of existence by the good citizens and the lawfully constituted authorities of the parish, they roam the parish undisguised, in crowds, with guns on their shoulders, and seem to enjoy the approbation of those who love to call themselves "We, the people." A week or two ago, Antoine Kelly, a colored man, living near Marksville, whom the Regulators suspected of hog stealing was most unmercifully whipped and given ten days to leave the parish He wisely left, for had he disobeyed, the nearest tree with a noose stared him in the face. Since then, Paulin Toussaint, another colored man, one who is considered something of a leader among his people, has been the object of the search of the Vigilants. We do not know whether he was found or not, but we do know that bands of armed men without any legal authority were scouring the whole parish in search of him. His great crime was that he was suspected of stealing a plow. Toussaint did well in running away for he certainly would have been whipped if he was not killed. Such a shameful state of affairs ought not to flourish any longer in any civilized community. To make it appear that this unlawful Vigilance movement was the spontaneous uprising of an injured populace, of both races, against petty thieves generally, they induced a few colored dupes to join them, but it was not long before they detected that they were the victims of the meanest deception, and they got out of it as best they could without endangering their safety. Now, with the exception of two black Judas Iscariots, the whole army of Regulators, in Avoyelles, are white men. With rare exceptions, their victims are almost invariably colored men, who are often whipped, or driven out of the parish and sometimes hung to the nearest tree, Indeed it is said that only a few years ago, one could hardly go in the woods, without coming upon some colored man or other hung to a tree, the result of vigilance and regulator rule. The lawfully constituted authorities of the parish of Avoyelles should arise in their might and power, and put down this shameful and barbarous method of punishing persons suspected of crime. The good people of that parish owe it to themselves to assist in stamping out all such revolutionary administration of justice. Let the courts do their full duty, let the administration of justice be prompt and impartial, but, by all means away with vigilance rule. Citizens of a great state are responsible for their civil conduct to the Stato and not to a mob. Regulators should and must be made to understand that. Let parish or state authorities assert themselves in this matter. This is the only means of redemption for the good name of the parish or state.

It is a mistake to suppose that Christianity is the only religion in the world that is making aggressions or that is using the press. Nearly 300 years ago Luther threw his inkstand at the devil and routed him. But to-day the devil is making free use of the press against Christianity. In Lucknow and Cawnpore, India, there are said to be over forty large publishing houses publishing books, tracts and papers for the defense of paganism and against Christianity. We have recently read of a rich Mohammedan who gave $5,000 to assist in printing books and papers devoted to the defense of his religion. In India alone it is said that there are over one hundred newspapers devoted to the defense of paganism and Mahommedanism, and assailing Christianity With the Christians there can be no doubt as to the final issue. The struggle, however, is going on, and the Church must not hesitate for a moment. Men engaged in this conflict need to remember that they are in the army of the Overcomer.

Editorial Correspondence.

TIDINGS FROM THE FIELD.

Tuesday, June 5th, found us in Alexandria, where we were most agreeably entertained in the very hospitable home of Bro. Alto Mitchell, that model trustee of our church there, and his kind-hearted and devoted wife. We always find a pleasant Christian home here, where we are always made to feel welcome. We found Bro. Morant, the popular and much beloved pastor of our church here, with his hands full of good work for the promotion of all the interests of the church. The gracious revival with which the church was visited, and which resulted in the conversion of two scores or more of precious souls had just closed; and Bro. Morant was then as busy as a bee training his Sunday-school, the lambs of the flock, for the observance of children's day, June 10. The occasion was a grand success in every respect, and how could it be otherwise, when so many willing and intelligent heads working like beavers joined together, determined to make it the grandest in the history of the school? Our Sunday-school here is thoroughly organized into a missionary society, the name of which is the Reaper's Missionary Society, and in the observance of Children's Day it came out in full force with over 150 members in line, neatly arrayed in attractive uniforms, with about a dozen beautiful banners, with appropriate mottoes inscribed. The exercises, which were highly satisfactory, consisted of recitations, declamations, responsive services, etc. The collection was something over $15. The officers of the society, who labored so very faithfully for the success of the celebration, were Miss Alice Thomas, president; Mr. P. H. Osborne, secretary; Mrs. Cora L. Armstead, treasurer; Mr, H. Reason, Sunday-school superintendent; Mrs. Peggy Powell, assistant superintendent; Mr. Wm. Murray, organist; Mr. James Madison, and others. The programme from first to last was a credit to all concerned. Our work here is, under God, prospering in all respects. Bro. Morant is in charge of a grand people here, and he bids fair to close his three years' pastorate here in grand style. Over the river in Pineville our church is holding her own. Rev. H. Johnson, the preacher in charge, is faithfully doing his duty amid many discouragements. Our work promises much good here for the immediate future. A little more grace and mutual Christian forbearance, on the part of a few who are in the lead, will hasten on the good time. Come now, brethren, read the eighteenth chapter of Matthew oftener. Learn to understand each other, and put your heads, hands and hearts together, and our Pineville church will ere long be completed.

At Avoca and Rigolet, Bro. Wade Hampton is laboring among a poor but worthy people. Ten accessions are reported, as the result of their quarter's work.

At Eola, Bro. Luster is doing a good work. Arriving here, Friday afternoon, June 15, we found him with several of the brethren, hard at work completing the repairs on the old parsonage, which had been thoroughly overhauled, recovered, refloored, and enlarged into four good rooms. Bro. Luster had just moved his family in their new home. They seemed perfectly contented in their new quarters. It is certainly far superior to no parsonage at all. This is the second parsonage built upon this district this year. Who will build the next? No church is complete without its parsonage, and its heavy furniture.

The conference, Saturday afternoon, and the love feast at night were seasons of special interest. Sunday morning the missionary society came out about 50 strong, dressed in their new and beautiful regalia, presenting quite an attractive appearance. The officers are Wesley Coleman, president, and Mary Luster, vice president. At 11 o'clock the church was crowded at the quarterly meeting. The services of the day were interesting and profitable. The general outlook promises much influence and expansion for our church in that section of country. From here, in company with Bro. Luster, we went to Cotton Port, where Bro. Stephen Green, our pastor, on Bayou Des Glaize, was found waiting our arrival. Bro. Green is doing a good work in that portion of the parish of Avoyelles. He has on this circuit three preaching points: Birdlong Point, Choupique and Cotton Port; the latter two of which he organized this year. These are as yet weak points, but they are in process of development. At Cotton Port, at the close of a short sermon in English and an exhortation in French, Mr. Decote, a prominent white citizen of Cotton Port, came forward and offered to lend us all the possible aid in the erection of our church in that town. Quite a number of white persons were in attendance. They seemed to be much pleased with what they saw and heard. Consecrated hands and hearts cannot fail to establish Methodism in that section. We were pleasantly entertained here in a Baptist family. They kindly took good care of us. The Lord bless them all. They were a deal more Christians than [illegible]. A Step in The Right Direction.

At one of its recent sessions, the police jury of St. Mary's parish appointed a committee to investigate the subject of crime in the parish, the causes that produce it, and the proper remedies to be applied for its suppression. Of this committee, C. M. Smith, M. D., was chairman. At a meeting of the jury held June 5th, the committee, through its chairman, made its report, from which we gather some important facts. The coroner's records were searched from 1875 to 1883; during this period there were in the parish 47 homicides, 51 deaths from accidents and five suicides. The homicides occurred with only two or three exceptions during the fall and winter months. Most of these crimes were committed on plantations, and nearly all between the hours of twelve o'clock, noon, Saturday, and the hour of midnight the following day. Thirty-seven of the homicides were committed by colored men and ten by white men. The suicides were all white. The homicides, with two or three exceptions, are easily traced to the following causes: 1st, intemperance in the use of alcoholic stimulants; 2d, the habit of gambling, so universally prevalent among the people; 3d, the practice of carrying concealed weapons. As the expense incurred by the tax-payers in the parish for criminal prosecutions was said to exceed any other parish in the State outside the city of New Orleans, the committee made the following, we think, wise suggestions. They recommended that the planters instead of paying all each week, adopt the system of paying each employee when his time amounts to twenty-four days. By this method each man would receive his pay on a different day, and the temptation to meet and spend their earnings in drinking and in games of cards and dice would be removed. They also recommend that the police jury pass an ordinance that whenever any number of persons, without regard to race or color, shall assemble together for the purpose of holding a ball, festival, collation, or for any other purpose, except as a religious gathering, they shall be required to procure a license, for which they shall pay $3 for each and every such meeting, and that at each such meeting there shall be a special officer appointed, who shall be required to examine each and every person desiring to enter a room or place where any public assembly is held with a view of ascertaining whether such person has about him a concealed weapon, and disarming him if he is so provided. The report of the committee was accepted, and an ordinance, carrying out its reccommendations, was unanimously passed. We call this a step in the right direction. It may not remove the crime of homicide from the parish, but we do believe that it will greatly diminish it. As to the cause of these homicides the committee place "intemperance in the use of alcoholic stimulants" first. This is doubtless strictly in harmony with the facts in the case. Experience, wide as the civilized world and through all the centuries of time, has shown that universally wherever there have been saloons and the liquor traffic has flourished homicides have multiplied. When in Marion county, Indiana, there were 300 licensed rum shops, the criminal court expenses amounted to $2.85 to every voter, and there was one man in the State prison to every eighty-five voters, while in Henry county at the same time there was not a rum shop licensed; the criminal court expenses were only eighty cents per voter, and one in State prison to every 3440 voter. Shut up the saloons, prohibit the sale of all intoxicating stimulants, save as used for medicinal and mechanical purposes, and you banish nine-tenths of the homicides not only from the parish of St. Mary, but all the parishes of the State. We earnestly hope that all [illegible] preachers in the parish will [illegible] all they can to give strength to the ordinance passed by the police [illegible], and push on the gospel of [illegible].

Before us lies the catalogue of the Central Tennessee College, Nashville, Tennessee, for 1882–3, from which we gather the following facts: This school was organized first as a primary school for freedmen by Bishop D. W. Clark, D.D., in January, 1866, in what is now known as Clark Chapel. In July of the same year, the charter was obtained, and during the years 1866–7, the school was transferred to the trustees under its present title, and by them placed under the care of the Freedmen's Aid Society, and Rev. J. Braden, D.D., was elected president; and with the exception of one year he has sustained the same relation to the school ever since. Dr. Braden is a man of rare peculiarities, an excellent preacher, and a wise administrator. Grasping the work with a will and purpose not to be thwarted by any obstacle, he has accomplished what few men could in the same time. In 1875, the medical department was organized, and in 1879, through the munificence of Rev. S. Meharry, A. Meharry, D.D., and H. Meharry, Esq., three brothers, the beautiful four-story building, now known as the Meharry Medical Department, was erected. This school has conferred the degree of M. D. on thirty-five young men. We have met some of these men and found them respected and successful in their profession. This is the only thoroughly organized medical school in the Mississippi valley south of the Ohio river, where colored persons can pursue this study. G. W. Hubbard, M. D., is dean of the faculty. The enrollment for the college the year now closing has been 354, and in the primary department 139; total 493. This is a Christian school, its influences are on the side of an intelligent and earnest Christianity. The use of tobacco and intoxicating liquors are positively forbidden. Christ, not caste, reigns in this school. Dr. Braden and the entire corps of teachers are Christly in their spirit and administration. We most heartily commend this school to the prayers and liberality of all Christian people. We know it to be free from the foul and hateful sin of caste. It is facing the sun-rise, and any relic of barbarism is out of place.

He was well known as a life-long advocate of abolition, and served for four years in the Union army. He entered the United States service in the civil war as a chaplain, but was soon transferred to the fighting ranks as major, and for heroic services in the field he was brevetted Colonel of the Seenteveth Illinois cavalry. For some time he was on duty at St. Louis as Provost Marshal. His convictions on slavery led him to leave the Methodist Episcopal Church and join the Wesleyans. When the war had abolished slavery it seemed to Dr. Matlack, Lee, and others of the organizers of the Wesleyan body, that its mission was accomplished, and they returned to the Mother Church, and were warmly welcomed. Dr. Matlack was a man of rich personal qualities—able, naturally kindly and conscientious, and thoroughly consecrated to God."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

E. Harrison, Stony Point: "We had a delightful day in all respects, a good congregation in the morning and in the evening everything passed off with universal approval and hearty, even enthusiastic satisfaction. Children's Day is evidently destined to be a great day in our Israel."

Our people at Spring Creek are without a house of worship. They are a poor people, but out of their poverty, last year, they built a house, which was destroyed by some heartless incendiary. They appeal to Christian sympathy for assistance to rebuild. Who will now come to their assistance. If they can get $100 they will be able to rebuild. Send contributions to this office.

Through the faithful agency of sister Susan Boxter, one of the elect of our Alexandria Church, a Methodist church is about to be permanently located at Le Compte Station, in the parish of Rapides. Going there ahead of Bro. John Lee, who was appointed as the supply to that point, she succeeded in making necessary arrangements for his reception, and for a place to hold services. She has organized a Sunday-school there, under Bro. Lee, with about fifty scholars. Bros. E. Powell, and W. H. Carter, from Alexandria, assisted her in the Sunday-school work. A few Sabbaths ago, when Rev. S. E. H. Morant, together with a large number of his members from Alexandria visited Le Compte, a subscription and cash account amounting to over $60 was taken up toward buying a lot upon which to build a church. This is a rapidly growing town; our church is wanted there; and with the godly zeal manifested by the willing workers concerned, it doubtless will be well established there before many more days. Too much credit can scarcely be given to Sister Boxter for her missionary efforts in this work, in her own church in Alexandria, and in the Pineville, and the Stuart Chapel Sunday-schools. God bless her and raise many more like her."

TEXAS.

W. McKenzie, Cold Spring: "On Children's Day 105 scholars were on hand. There was a lecture, recitations and addresses and a fair collection."

S. Coleman, Waelder: "We have a temperance organization at Wesley chapel on Peach Creek; about 35 joined the first night. Rev. L. Reed is doing all he can for us this year."

I. B. Scott, Houston: "Our third quarterly conference, Rev. F. C. Moore P. E. passed off pleasantly. Reports were quite full and encouraging considering it had been less than two and one half months since the second quarter. Trinity charge is blessed with many trusty and devoted members, male and female, as well as a goodly number of substantial sincere friends. These stick to the church wet weather and dry weather. God bless them. Our Children's day exercises were very enjoyable. Collection $7.25. During the hour Mr. Thomas Freeman, superintendent and Mr. L. L. James, librarian, made short temperance speeches after which 23 signed the pledge. We are moving on nicely."

MISSISSIPPI.

A. D. Jones, West Point: "Rev. I. L. Pratt, pastor in charge, certainly deserves more than a passing notice for earnest and successful work here in the past eighteen months of his ministry. A revival just closed, adding 28 souls to the church; making about 70 during his administration. Sabbath school has 60 scholars under superior dicipline to any they have ever enjoyed. The church once torn asunder by eternal discord is now rapidly regaining her former strength. A hearty co-operation between pastor and members certainly is the highest assurance of his ability to succeed under the most unfavorable circumstances. Public schools have closed. Teachers salaries from $15 to $30 per month. West Point is situated in the prairies of Miss., a rich section and is rapidly improving in population and wealth."

H. F. Bardwell, Oktibbeha county: "We had a happy time on Children's Day. The church was beautifully, decorated with flowers of many kinds and fine chromos. Rev. Church Gordon conducted the services. James Thompson recited 195 verses; G. W. Bardwell lectured on the Sabbath-school, to the enjoyment of the children and parents. Collection $5.15."

A Malarial Victim.

The Trying Experience of a Prominent Minister in the Tropics and at the North.

TO THE EDITOR:

The following circumstances, drawn from my personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified:

In 1875, I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence county. N. Y., to Florida, which state I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St. John's river and settled down, as I thought, for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most pecular sensations which seemed to be the accompaniment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached. My limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had a thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I became restless and feverish and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing steadily worse. In the year of 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary,—that I could not survive another summer in the south. I determined to return north, but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at Upper Sandusky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am to-day a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or course of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the preprietors and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines, and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system duing my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable, but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four week's trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilions attacks."

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malarial of five years standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarial trouble which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

ALFRED DAY,
Pastor Universalist Church.
Woodstock, O., May 10, 1883.

I read of three brethren who had to carry on a college when funds were running short. One of them complained that they had no helpers, and could not hope to succeed; but another who had more faith said to his brother, "Do you ask what we can do? Do you say that we are so few? I do not see that we are few: for we are a thousand at the least." "A thousand of us!" said the other, "how is that?" "Why," replied the first. "I am a cipher, and you are a cipher, and our brother is a cipher; so we have three naughts to begin with. Then I am sure the Lord Jesus is ONE; put him down before the three ciphers and we have a thousand directly." Was not this bravely spoken.—Spurgeon.

No one who walks the streets with his eyes open can fail to find some one to whom a kind word, a pleasant smile, a small exhortation, even a cordial grasp of the hand, would be a benediction. To encourage such effort the God of love has ordained that the satisfaction of doing good is greater than that of receiving a favor. In the laws of the kingdom of Christ it is written that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."—Zion's Herald.

There is no ideal Americanism in the low-lived unwillingness to fairly meet brother-nations by the sympathy of intellectual and moral competition. "The way to conquer the foreign artisan is, not to kill him, but to beat his work." The way to prove a superiority to the Negro is by the enforcement of a higher, not a lower, justice than his own; the way to confute those who stand for Confucius is for you to show that by standing for Jesus you stand higher.

"I've admired an unknown woman all winter," remarked a man the other day, "she was stylish, well-dressed, carried herself well; but I heard her speak to-day, and the charm vanished." "What did she say?" some one asked, "Only two words. A companion in a car asked her a question, to which she replied in the affirmative, 'You bet.' 'Twas enough."

The editor of the Franklin (N. C.) Times has recently received $2 in a letter from a man who said he had been owing it for the paper a long time, and having lately gotten religion, could not rest until he had paid it. The Raleigh Advocate adds: "We wish some of our delinquent subscribers would get a good supply of such religion. They need debt-paying religion, and we need the money."

I had severe attacks of gravel and kidney trouble; was unable to get a medicine or doctor to cure me until I used Hop Bitters, and they cured me in a short time.—A Distinguished Lawyer of Wayne, Co., N. Y.

Rev. Daniel Curry, D. D., recently said; "Drunkenness is no longer palliated as a misfortune, but is characterized as an atrocious self-abuse, a crime against society and sin against God.

Truth is Mighty.

When Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., announced that his "Favorite Prescription" would positively cure the many diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women, some doubted, and continued to employ the harsh and caustic local treatment. But the mighty truth gradually became acknowledged. Thousands of ladies employed the "Favorite Prescription" and were speedily cured. By druggists.

Noble county, Ohio, with a population of 20,0 0 people is well worthy of the name it bears. There is not a saloon in the whole county, there is not a case on the criminal docket, and not a person has been arrested for a criminal charge. There were only five lawsuits last year, and if it hadn't been for a meddling lawyer, three of these would not have been recorded.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 140 Power's Block, Rochester N. Y. 49-n6 13t-eow

Here is the way a practical temperance man turned the scales on a man who scouted at woman's work: "My dear sir, I wish you could stay at home and bend like your wife, over the washtub, and nurse the babies, darn the socks, and attend to the duties of the house, and everything else of that character which intends to wear out the physical strength of women, while your wife could loaf for a while around some grog shop; you would then be a fanatic yourself upon this question." If there is one of you here to-night who should catch your wife loafing around a saloon, you would apply for a divorce inside of twenty-four hours; you would think if she were guilty of so infamous a thing she would be unworthy such a specimen of manhood as yourself; and yet for all this you linger about these places week after week.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.
